Eight Are Dead In Yacht Sinking Near Charleston

Lone Survivor on Small Lifeboat for Four Days

Charleston, S.C., Dec. 1—(AP)—The only survivor of a yachting tragedy which took eight lives sobbed out last night his story of a four-day nightmare aboard a small lifeboat without food or water.

In the boat with the survivor, Gustave Emanuel Frazer, rescuers found the bodies of the yacht's skipper, wife, and their dying 12-year-old son. Four others died at sea and the yacht's navigator had jumped overboard to end his life.

Frazer was given an emergency blood transfusion after he was taken aboard the minesweeper Token, which sighted the 14-foot life-boat yesterday afternoon.

The boy, son of Capt. and Mrs. Samuell Luttrell, was still alive when picked up, but he died before the minesweeper reached shore.

Frazer, in broken, agonized phrases, related how the grim saga began last Monday at Morehead City, N.C., where the yacht Amphitrite put out for St. Thomas, Virgin Islands.

The yacht sprung a leak and Luttrell changed course for Charleston. High winds and heavy seas hurled the 96-foot craft on a reef.

All nine persons aboard took to the 14-foot lifeboat. But in their haste they forgot water and provisions. There followed four days and nights of exposure, hunger and thirst.

Luttrell, an experienced seaman had returned from the Virgin Islands to pick up the ill-fated Amphitrite a converted submarine chaser.

Along the way he had to pick up a new navigator, the man who jumped from the lifeboat in wild desperation two days before the small craft was sighted by the minesweeper.

Russia Warns Turkey Against Joining Pact

London, Dec. 1 (Reuters) — Russia has warned Turkey her participation in the Atlantic Pact will "undoubtedly cause serious harm" to relations between the two countries.

Responsibility for the consequences of such a policy will rest completely with Turkey, Russia stated in a new note which Andre Gromyko, deputy foreign minister handed to the Turkish ambassador in Moscow yesterday.

The next was made available in London early today by Tass, official Soviet news agency.

The new note said Russia "resolutely rejects all attempts of the Turkish government to justify its actions by slanderous references to an invented threat on the part of the U.S.S.R."

Turkey, in a note Nov. 12, replied to a Russian note of Nov. 3 warning that the Soviet Union could not remain indifferent to Turkish membership in the Atlantic Pact.

Yesterday's note declared: "The desire of the Turkish government to join the Atlantic bloc and also the intensified construction of American military bases on Turkish territory, including areas adjoining the frontiers of the Soviet Union, completely refutes the assertion of the Turkish government in the above-mentioned statement as regards the peaceful aims of its policy."

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Dec. 1 (CP) —Synopsis: Coal dealers in southern Ontario are probably on the verge of tearing their hair out as unseasonably mild weather continues. Dense fog extended over rather large areas in the lower lakes regions and in central Ontario Friday night, but much of this fog will have dissipated by mid-morning.

Although the deep low in the Atlantic which is responsible for bringing in warm air from the south, is now moving up on Newfoundland, it appears evident that jack frost will require at least another 24 to 48 hours to collect his wits and his cold air forces, before he can renew his assault on Ontario.

Senator Wants Full Story Told On Sudden Lull

San Francisco, Dec. 1 (AP)—Senator William F. Knowland (Rep.-Calif.) said last night something should be done to clear up confusion resulting from the sudden lull in the Korean war.

Knowland said in a television interview that a senate investigation might uncover the reasons for "the American people being told one thing and the troops another."

He said he already has asked for an armed services committee hearing into the matter.

Knowland, a Republican member of the committee, said he is convinced "some kind of a cease-fire order" was issued by Gen. J. A. Van Fleet, the Eighth Army commander. He said he believes Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, the Supreme U.N. Commander, authorized the order and that Ridgway would not take such a step without the knowledge of Washington.

Meyer to Return To Werl Prison

Hanover, Germany, Dec. 1 (CP) — Kurt Meyer said last night that he plans to return to Werl military prison today in a car owned by friends.

In a long-distance conversation from his home at Offleben, the wartime Elite Corps (S. S.) general convicted of responsibility for the murder of 18 Canadian soldiers in Normandy and he had spent his leave from prison playing with his children, looking at the scenery and talking with wartime comrades.

(Meyer was sentenced to death after his war-crimes trial but the sentence later was commuted to life imprisonment. He was taken to the federal penitentiary at Dorchester, N. B., in 1946 but recently was returned to Germany where he entered the Werl prison.

(Last weekend reported How found Meyer at his home in Orfleben, where he said he had been given leave from the prison).

Meyer's wife will go with him to Werl but will return almost immediately.

On his last night at home Meyer spent the evening quietly with his family. In the phone talk he showed great interest in parliamentary discussions about him in Ottawa.

SOLDIERS TO GET MILK

Hannover, Germany, Dec. 1—(CP)—Truckloads of fresh milk start moving down from Denmark today for the troops of Canada's 27th Brigade, who are stationed near here. The men have been drinking canned milk but arrangements have been made to get a daily ration of 20 ounces per man daily trucked in, to give the soldiers the same standard of milk they received in Canada.

Princess Elizabeth With Husband Preparing for Australian Tour

London, Dec. 1 (Reuters)—Two weeks home from her tour of Canada, Princess Elizabeth is already in the thick of preparations for another royal junket — this time to Australia and New Zealand.

She and Prince Philip leave in early January.

Once again the problem of wardrobe is occupying much of her time.

She insists on a thorough fitting for each garment and spending an average of 30 minutes on each session with her designers.

Simplicity will be the keynote because, with six months' travelling to do, her clothes must be easy to pack, press and keep in order.

She also has taken into consideration the continually changing climate during the tour, ranging from the cool Australian fall to the sticky dampness of early monsoon on the return trip.

Norman Hartnell, the queen's dressmaker, is making her evening gowns with some of the lavish crinolines which are his specialty, cocktail dresses, ballet-length skirts—first worn by the princess in Canada — afternoon and day dresses.

The color range includes pastel shades because of the mostly warm climate in Australia. These include yellows, greens and blues which can be worn with white accessories.

HOUSE APPROVES PLANS TO BOOST WAR PENSIONS

Legislation Given Third And Final Reading

Ottawa, Dec. 1 — (CP)— The Commons has approved plans to boost war disability pensions by 33 1-3 per cent.

The enabling legislation was given third and final reading yesterday after comparatively-brief debate which featured renewed demands for raises in payments to dependents and in allowances to needy and prematurely-aged veterans.

The bill, which now goes to the Senate, increases to $125 a month from $94 the basic 100-per-cent disability pension for single war veterans up to the rank of captain. A 50-per-cent pensioner gets one half of those amounts, and a 10-per-cent pensioner one-tenth.

The allowance paid for a total disability pensioner's wife is increased to $45 from $31 and that for a first child to $20 from $19. Rates for other children remain unchanged at $15 for the second child and $12 for each subsequent child.

The increases all became effective Jan. 1 next.

Ruled Out Of Order

Seeking to improve the lot of the needy veteran, Capt. Howard Green (PC — Vancouver-Quadra) moved that the increases not be considered as income for purposes of the War Veterans Allowance Act. His amendment was ruled out of order.

He suggested that a man getting both payments would have his allowance decreased as the disability pension was increased. This would be to keep his income within a ceiling fixed by law.

Col. A. J. Brooks (PC—Royal) and Percy Wright (CCF—Melfort) a veteran of the First World War, urged that the increases be made retroactive. They also suggested something should be done to increase the pensions of dependent parents.

Veterans Minister Lapointe said that pensions paid to dependents and to veterans with meritorious service will be reviewed by the pensions commission. These pensions are not set by law.

He recalled that those payments were adjusted in 1948 when the disability pension was last increased.

Chinese Mother Twice Victimized

San Francisco, Dec. 1 — (AP) — A Chinese mother, victimized twice in the communist ransom racket because she has sons in the United States, killed herself rather than pay an extortion demand, one of her sons said.

Joe Jang said he received a letter relating how she had drowned herself Nov. 24.

A month ago, the son reported, the mother was arrested, tortured and finally released after paying $1,000. On Nov. 7 she was arrested again and fined $1,600 (U.S.).

She was released and told to produce the money within two weeks.

Interested Ratepayers Hear Aspiring Candidates for Civic Offices at C of C Meeting

Approximately 300 interested ratepayers turned out Friday evening to hear aspiring candidates for the various municipal offices speak at the pre-election meeting held at the collegiate auditorium. The meeting was sponsored by the local Chamber of Commerce.

William Brown, Chamber of Commerce president, acted as chairman for the evening's program of speech-making which saw the respective candidates outline their platforms. John Buchan, vice - president, and James Davis, secretary manager, acted as time keepers. Aspirants for the mayor's office were limited to five minutes, while aldermanic candidates and candidates for public utilities were given three minutes.

Jack Allin

Jack Allin, aspiring to the office of mayor, strongly opposed the present procedure at city hall of holding council meetings in the afternoon and claimed that "one man" committee meetings were not in the best interest of the city.

He asserted that on certain occasions only one alderman had been present at committee meetings. This alderman would pass accounts, make recommendations and adjourn the meeting himself. "Evening council meetings would be fairer to aldermen and to citizens who wished to attend," he said.

Mr. Allin pointed out the necessity of a campaign to attract more industry to the city and said this was one of the planks in his platform. Also, if elected, he would work for able representation on all appointed boards.

He claimed more publicity should be given council business. Illustrating his point, he said that last spring councillors had voted themselves a $100 increase in salary. He doubted if many of the electors were aware of this fact.

Mr. Allin claimed street and sidewalk repairs should come under the general rate rather than be done under local improvements and said an improved method of garbage disposal was needed.

In conclusion Mr. Allin said his policy in council had always been the lowest possible tax rate to do necessary work.

A. McLean Haig

Alderman A. McLean Haig, in seeking election for mayor came to the support of current council procedure of holding afternoon council and committee meetings. He said the afternoon meetings made for greater efficiency of council business.

He contradicted a radio speech said made by a supporter of his opponent who said that during the past year he had not supported economy.

"I now ask him," Mr. Haig said, "who has discouraged the use of city funds for unnecessary travel. Who arranged with the help of the treasurer for the handling of the proceeds of the Queen Elizabeth school debenture to give the city a monetary advantage of about $9,000. Who as council representative of the hospital board had worked to prevent that institution becoming a charge against the city, and who had worked with the board of works until some $65,000 was depleted from its budget.

"At the risk of being immodest, in answer to that charge I must tell you that I, as your chairman of finance was that man," he said.

Well Within Budget

The best evidence of all that economy had been the keynote was that up until the present time the city was well within its year's budget.

"But the real issue of this election is not who constitutes the industrial commission; it is not whether there is a picture or a brochure in the window of Ontario House in London, nor what time of the day or night council meetings are held."

"The issue simply is which of the candidates is best qualified to assume the responsibility of public office, whether we are to continue to batten down our sails and consolidate our position or whether we are to encourage unreasonable expansion at tremendous cost to all an unbearable cost to those living in the new areas.

"If elected I will undertake to guide and direct the work of city council and to give "leadership with dignity," "enterprise with stability" and "progress with economy."

In closing he asked electors to discard all political feelings and elect only the best to represent them in city council. "The best is none too good," he said.

U.N. Commanders In Dilemma Over Orders

West Sector, Korea, Dec. 1 — (CP)—If anything is clarified by the confusion of orders on the Korea front this week, perhaps it is the invidious position of United Nations field commanders.

Faced with the prospect of at least the possibility of an armistice by Christmas, and with a continued advance into North Korea purposeless since any number of defence lines exist between the present front and the 38th parallel to guarantee the South Korean frontier after a treaty, the field commanders understandably are concerned to hold down casualties while the cease-fire negotiations continue.

At the same time they must not do or say anything which might slacken the efficiency or aggressive pitch of their forces, lest in an off-guard moment the communists attack.

Somewhere along the line between Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway's headquarters and the soldiers at the front, precisely this dilemma was produced Nov. 28. This later was clarified.

Ground activity now is curtailed to reconnaissance patrolling, the counter-battery fire by artillery and mortars and harassing fire on known enemy positions.

The soldier in his slit trench is still vigilant against an enemy approach but certainly isn't going out of his way to pick fights.

CHIEF PRODUCTION GREATER

Toronto, Dec. 1—(CP)—Creamery butter and cheddar cheese production in Ontario showed an increase in October over October last year—the first month there has been an increase in 1951. The monthly dairy report of the Ontario Agriculture Department showed butter increasing 6.9 per cent and cheddar cheese 9.2 per cent over the same month last year.

County Constable Fatally Injured At Northbrook

Fatally injured when struck by a car as he attempted to assist a motorist stalled by the side of the highway, County Constable A. M. "Monte" Wood, 59, of Northbrook, died this morning in Belleville General Hospital.

The accident occurred about 4:15 a.m. Saturday, four miles north of Northbrook on highway No. 41.

Robt. Wise had stalled his truck and Wood had stopped to assist. The lights of an approaching car were seen through the dense fog and Wood realizing truck door was open stepped onto the highway to close it when he was struck by the car driven by George Hawley of Northbrook. He was hurled 20 feet by the impact.

The injured man was taken to hospital in the provincial constable cruiser where he died a few hours later. An inquest has been ordered the preliminary hearing behind held Saturday morning before Coroner Dr. G. S. Cronk and adjourned until December 7th.

Wood has been county constable at Northbrook for 30 years. He was married with several grown children.

Married 66 Years

New Dundee, Dec. 1 —(CP)— Simon Weber and his bride, the former Louisa Kratz, were married in the Lutheran church here 66 years ago.

Now they're being feted as the longest married couple in this southwestern Ontario village.

"Lots of people quarrel and argue, but we never did," both say. "And that has helped us a lot."

Both enjoyed good health until a few years ago when Mrs. Weber suffered a heart attack. Since then her husband has served her breakfast in bed.

CANADA-U.S. WIDEN TAX EXEMPTIONS

Professional Artists Given Concessions

Ottawa, Dec. 1 — (CP)—Canada has acceded to a demand by the United States that reciprocal tax exemptions be widened for artists, musicians and professional athletes from each country temporarily performing across the border.

Under a new reciprocal tax agreement, professional entertainers, including athletes, from one country can work up to 183 days in the other without being subject to income tax in that country. At present they cannot stay longer than 90 days or earn more than $1,500 without being subject to foreign tax.

An amendment providing for this was endorsed Thursday by the Commons and sent to the Senate. The agreement has been approved by Washington and on final approval by Ottawa, will need only the final exchange of ratification between the two countries to become law. This is expected before the end of the year.

Finance department spokesmen said it will apply to all artists, musicians and professional athletes such as National Hockey League players, whose performances take them from one country to the other.

The general provision provides that a person employed by say a Canadian firm, working only up to 183 days in the United States, shall not be subject to U. S. income tax. At present such a person cannot earn more than $5,000 in the 183-day period without becoming liable to U. S. tax, but the $5,000 ceiling is removed in the new agreement.

For persons not employed by a firm, but working on their own, the $5,000 and 183 day limits both apply.

If a person exceeds the limits set out in the treaty, he will be taxed by the country he is visiting. But on return home his own country will give him a credit for taxation purposes, up to the amount of foreign tax paid. However, if the foreign tax is more than his total tax at home, no refund is payable.

Bus Drivers Walk Off Job

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 1—(CP)—Thousands of persons were left without transportation today when bus drivers of the Sandwich, Windsor and Amherstburg Railway walked off the job. By 9 a. m. all bus service had stopped.

The walkout began at 5 a. m. when a group of drivers picketed the company garage. They made the move following a union meeting at 2:30 a. m., called at that hour because only then could a majority of the drivers be present. At that time it was decided to submit to arbitration complaints over the firing of seven men.

An emergency meeting of the S. W. and A. board was called early today but by 9 a. m. no decision was reached.

The walkout occurred when a small group of drivers decided they wanted the seven men who had been fired reinstated in their jobs until after arbitration.

At the beginning only three or four men were on the picket line but this number was increased to 25.

Mounting Air Power of Reds Causes Anxiety

Enemy Bases in N. Korea Discussed in Stormy Session

Munsan, Korea, Dec. 1 (AP) — The United Nations command today disclosed anxiety over mounting communist air power in Korea. It insisted in the Panmunjom truce talks that construction or repair of air bases in North Korea be banned during an armistice.

The air base issue was raised during stormy Saturday session in which Vice-Admiral C. Turner Joy, chief U.N. negotiator, underscored the allied demand that there be no military building and that joint observation teams be given free access to all Korea to police the truce.

The official U.N. spokesman, Brig.-Gen. William P. Nuckols told correspondents the U.N. allies are deeply concerned over the threat posed by increasing communist air strength. He said the U.N. command primarily fears the possibility of strong air support for red ground forces.

Reds Claim Need

North Korean Lt.-Gen. Nam Il insisted it is "necessary" to strengthen air bases. "I cannot but point out that the real objective of your proposal of allowing no increase of so-called military facilities is merely to deprive our side forever of the right to defend ourselves."

Joy told red envoys the U.N. allies will continue to insist that there should be:

1. No increase of military forces by either side during an armistice.
2. No build-up of war materials during that period.
3. An armistice commission to supervise the truce, including joint observation teams free to move the length and breadth of Korea.
4. No discussion of withdrawing troops from Korea by the armistice conference since the question must be decided by the belligerent governments.

Joy's statement apparently adding nothing new to the seven principles he proposed last Tuesday as a solution to the third item of the conference agenda—supervision of the truce. But it did emphasize U.N. assertions that these principles will not be modified.

The communists already have rejected the proposals. Saturday afternoon they again voiced strong objections.

Thorn in Side

After two hours and 37 minutes of debate, Joy emerged from the conference tent and told correspondents:

"As you know," Joy said, "we hold a flock of islands off the coast of North Korea. That seems to be a thorn in their side. They insist we withdraw from them."

Joy told the communists Friday the allies have no intention of abandoning the islands.

NEWS RAISES PRICE

New York, Dec. 1 — (AP) The Daily News last night announced a penny increase in its price in the suburbs, effective Monday. The increase — to five cents — "is forced by mounting costs of production and distribution," an announcement said. The paper will continue at three cents within the city limits.

NBC Offers Truman Recording Tape Of Voices Ordering Men Not to Shoot

Tokyo, Dec. 1—(AP)—The National Broadcasting Company representative here today said he had offered to send to President Truman the recording tape which NBC said caught the voice of army officers on the western front ordering men to hold their fire except in self defence.

George Thomas Folster, far east news director for NBC, said he sent the following radiogram to Joseph Short, Truman's press secretary:

"Sir in view fact President Truman continues deny Korea Tokyo correspondents reports any 'don't shoot first' order ever issued, I respectfully offer air express original tape recording NBC correspondent John Rich made in Korea of two different officers reading orders to their subordinates.

"Suggest this will help clarify situation. Tape passed by military censors."

Folster said the NBC recording was made by Rich on Nov. 28 and flown immediately to Tokyo.

The lieutenant was recorded as saying "there has been an order for a cease-fire, men. There'll be no firing except in self defence or in defence of the main line of resistance. Did you get that? (pause) Any questions?"

A voice spoke up "Is that a final armistice or a temporary cease-fire?"

"Just what I said" the lieutenant's voice spoke up again. "Just a temporary cease-fire. There'll be nothing expendable. I don't want to hear anything going off around here—45s or anything."

'Tiger Woman' Is Recaptured, Meek as Kitten

Phoenix, Ariz., Dec. 1 — (AP) — Winnie Ruth Judd, the one-time "tiger woman" who killed two girl friends 20 years ago, was recaptured last night and went back to the state hospital for the insane as meekly as a kitten.

Two policemen picked up the 48-year-old trunk murderer three blocks from an apartment court in which two former women attendants of the hospital lived.

Mrs. Judd, wearing a fur coat taken from one of the apartments, offered no resistance.

"Why did you have to pick me up?" she asked. "I've served 20 years out there and I think I should be turned loose. I had a tragedy 20 years ago that I wasn't wholly responsible for."

It was in October, 1931, that Mrs. Judd shot her roommates, Agnes Anne Le Roi and Hedvig Samuelson, to death here. She shipped their dismembered bodies to Los Angeles. Mrs. Judd was convicted and sentenced to hang. Within 72 hours of the execution time she was found insane.

Mrs. Judd, still an attractive woman with tinted red hair, escaped Thursday night by prying open a second-storey screen window and sliding to the ground on a ladder fashioned of rags, yarn and an electric ironing cord.

At the hospital, Mrs. Judd was given warm milk and put to bed in her regular room.

At police headquarters, Mrs. Judd said:

"I am not a criminal. I am not a gangster. I have helped those sick people at the hospital who are sicker than I am.

"Why don't they send me to South America? I have a friend in Paraguay who is head of a leper colony and they (the lepers) are just like me — they're unwanted. I could do so much for the little children there, teaching them embroidery, crocheting and other things that I learned in 'that place'."

Mrs. Judd said she got tools used in her escape while workmen were remodeling part of the hospital.

Death Sentence Revoked on Cat

Bexhill, Sussex, England, Dec. 1—(Reuters)—A death sentence on Ginger the tomcat was revoked today—providing he gives up trying to become a stage star.

Ginger got into trouble because the lure of the footlights led him to make frequent public appearances on the stage of Bexhill's pavilion. He made a big hit with the audiences—but became unpopular with the actors whose limelight he stole.

It was decided to have him "put to sleep" after a play had to be stopped while he was coaxed into the wings.

But stage-struck Ginger got a reprieve today when a woman playgoer, remembering his many amusing performances, told the theatre management: "I'll look after him and keep away from your productions.

Man Severely Shaken Up In Heavy Fall

Dropping ten feet to the flat rock below when he slipped from the Moira river embankment opposite the Direct Winters transport north of the city, John Lucas, 75, was severely shaken up late yesterday afternoon. He suffered lacerations to his head and hand and was taken to hospital in Bush's Ambulance where he was attended by Dr. F. R. Ross.

Firemen were called to the scene to get the elderly man back to the top of the embankment following his fall. He was fastened to a stretcher and carried by firemen to the top of the bank.

The man's face and arms were covered with blood but an examination at the hospital revealed no bones had been broken. He was later taken to his home.

Owners Only Eligible to Vote On Money By-Law

Monday, Dec. 3, ratepayers in the city will go to the polls to elect a mayor and to choose the candidates they wish to represent them on city council and on the public utilities commission.

In addition to the election of men to fill the various civic offices ratepayers will be given the opportunity of voting on the recreation by-law, which, if carried, would give the local recreation commission one mill on the tax rate to spend for recreational purposes.

This year it is a straight fight for the office of mayor with electors to choose between the two men offering themselves for the mayoralty.

Four candidates are contesting the one seat on the public utilities, while there are 15 aspirantts for the seven seats on city council.

There is no election for school board as candidates for this body all received acclamation.

All electors whose names appear on the voting list will be eligible to vote for the representatives of their choice to fill the various civic positions, but owners only will be eligible to vote on the recreation by-law. Where there is joint ownership of a property the joint owners will be entitled to vote on the by-law if their names appear as joint owners on the assessment roll.

Polls will be open from nine o'clock in the morning until seven o'clock in the evening.

The electors are urged to exercise their franchise. Vote as you like, but Vote!

Interested Ratepayers Hear Aspiring Candidates for Civic Offices at C of C Meeting

Bruce H. Smith

Bruce Smith was the first of the speakers aspiring for aldermanic office. He said he was no speaker but believed in the policy of "getting things done."

He pointed out there was no alderman in city council from "West" Belleville and said it was time there was representation from this part of the city.

"I make no promise but to do my best," he said. "As a business man I know that you cannot spend every dollar. Foresight and good judgment must be used."

Robert Temple

Robt. Temple said his platform was one of "hard work and careful planning", a motto which had taken him through law school. He said that he was a native of this city and had attended local schools before going to law school.

"You have seven votes for Alderman on Monday," he said. "I am asking for only one of them."

John M. Wood

John M. Wood believed he had a definite contribution to make to the business administration of the city. He said he had no long promises to make but assured that if elected he would look faithfully into an investigation of the city manager system of city government. He was of the opinion this was a good form of government.

Also, if elected there would be a sincerity of purpose in watching the business life of the city. There must be a justification of all expenditures and he would view such expenditures with as much zeal as though it were his own business. He also thought council meetings should be held in the evening to give citizens the opportunity of attending the meetings--if they desired.

Burton B. Farrar

Burton B. Farrar offered himself as a property owner and a tax payer. He reviewed his personal history and solicited the support of the electors "in all sincerity."

Edward E. Follwell

He referred to his term in council during the war and later and noted that during this period the city had gone ahead industrially. Industries such as Northern Electric and Bakelite had added economic stability to the city while employees of the two firms had enthusiastically entered civic and community enterprise.

He said he would like to see another era of industrial expansion in the city and would work to that end.

"Belleville is a great place in which to live and bring up a family," he said. "I would like to help make it better."

In conclusion he referred to the Red Cross blood donor clinic held yesterday and said it had "gone over the top". He urged continued support for the next clinic in January.

Harold J. Armstrong

Harold J. Armstrong appealed to the electors on the basis of his work in council while he was a member some years ago.

During the depression and early war years Belleville had fallen far behind in providing necessary services. Then suddenly it was faced with industrial expansion and rehabilitation of its soldier sons.

As a member of the council housing committee he said he had done much to provide houses for those who had no home of their own. "There was expense, certainly, but I was glad to do something for those not as fortunate as myself in having a home."

He said a municipality either went ahead reasonably and sensibly or else it stayed stagnant.

Claude D. Tice

Claude D. Tice said he wished he had the opportunity of replying to some of the statements that had been made on the platform but time did not permit this if an account of the year's council activities was to be given.

He recounted the work of the fire committee, of the public works department and the arena committee. The fire department had good equipment and had stayed within its budget as had the public works department. "Naturally there has been criticism," he said, "but these committees have done a good job."

The arena committee was encouraging minor hockey in the city by making available free of charge practising and playing time at the arena.

In conclusion he said he had tried to work in council for the best interests of the city and to make Belleville a "better place to live."

Arthur Keegan

Arthur Keegan said he would welcome the opportunity of putting "spark" into city council as he had done on the parks board. He said his platform was common sense in spending of money; long range planning and a greater democracy.

He criticized council for its lack of long range planning and of failing to take action, when plans were laid. He called for city to "get busy" with plans for a sewage disposal plant and said he was a supporter of the ward system of elections and of evening meetings for council.

As a painter and decorator Mr. Keegan asked "How in the world could I attend council meetings in the afternoon?"

Christian Leggat

Christian Leggat put the rights of the citizens of Belleville as major issue. Candidates last year had promised to do their best for best interests of the city and yet the first thing they had done was to inaugurate the system of afternoon council meetings. "Citizens should have the right to go to council meetings if they want to," he said.

Mr. Leggat said the ward system of election and city government should be explored as should the city manager system. "Vote as you please, but vote," he urged in conclusion.

Don McNevin

Don McNevin said he had been in Belleville 11 years and during that time hard work, long range planning and careful spending had been put into his personal business. If elected he would endeavor to carry out the same policy for city affairs.

He said he would work for efficient administration in the best interests for the majority of the citizens. He would like to see greater recreational facilities in Belleville as the youth of today were the citizens of tomorrow.

Charles L. Hyde

Charles L. Hyde said he was now two thirds retired from the business he had operated for over 30 years and was in position to give the time necessary for city business.

Referring to his service on city council, Mr. Hyde said he had taken a stand on every issue and in what he had considered was the best interest of the taxpayers. On different occasions he had taken the stand alone, he said. If elected he would guard the city treasury and do his best to retain the confidence of the electors.

Kenneth Ross

Kenneth Ross said he had six planks in his platform. One of them — Lower taxes and greater co-operation between municipal and provincial bodies — he termed most important.

He stood for fair and even taxation, proper and long range planning, more parks, lower taxes, increased industries and removal of traffic bottlenecks.

"The only way to relieve traffic congestion in the city," he said, "was to construct another bridge across the Moira connecting the two highway links. With the riding represented by different parties at Toronto and at Ottawa he thought now was the time to act."

William A. Argue

William A. Argue referred to the recently formed Bay of Quinte High School Area through which the city lost control of its collegiate institute, the control being passed over to the high school board. "With the unequal assessment between the city and the rural district, in my opinion the city came off on the short end of the stick," he said.

During the past year, as a safety measure for children using the streets, he had endeavored to have the speed limit reduced in the residential areas and had supported the formation of the health department. He said it had been a mistake to change to afternoon council meetings. "You have better government if the public is in attendance at meetings," he said.

John J. Bonn

John J. Bonn said he had accepted nomination for alderman with some apprehension. He appreciated that city business must be conducted in a sound, businesslike manner and if elected would try to justify himself.

"I will diligently serve to the best of my ability," he assured. "I am confident that much can be done without raising taxes. My idea is to serve not for what I can get out of it, but for what I can offer the city."

C. Arthur Bateman

C. Arthur Bateman said he had been prompted to offer himself for alderman by several people who assured him that he could make a considerable contribution to the city as a member of council.

He had given of the best of his ability to the campaign and if elected, assured he would always do his best to play his part to the full in order help make the city, the community and the country a better place in which to live, work and play.

Percy C. McGuire

Percy C. ('Perc..) McGuire, as aspirant for the office of public utilities commissioner, commended the Chamber of Commerce for sponsoring the public meeting, and also the citizens for attending. He had only one promise—to serve in the best interests of the citizens.

Mr. McGuire dealt briefly with the Belleville public utilities noting that since 1930 the number of consumers had about doubled. This indicated improved services could be given at no extra cost to the users. It was the duty of the commission to see that services were made available for new industry.

If elected he would work for careful planning and strive to use sound judgment in the business of the commission. He would work for co-operation with other municipal offices in the city. The public utilities was now "big business" and should be treated as such.

'Sandy' Lummiss

Urias "Sandy" Lummiss paid tribute to the late F. Russell Wotten who had served for many years on the utilities. In offering himself for the utilities office he was sponsored by no political interest, Mr. Lummiss assured.

If elected he would strive to end inequalities of service in the newer sections of the city. "This would be his first obligation," he said. "My motto will be co-operation, courtesy and service," he said.

Enos David

Enos David said electric and water services were the lifeblood of modern living, any disruption of which would be tragic. Because of this the citizens should be vitally concerned as to the representation on the commission and in the operation of the utility.

He pointed to his experience on the Board of Education and to his work on the recreation committee. If elected he promised "to do his best" in the best interest of the utility and the citizens and to work in co-operation with other civic bodies.

William Harvey

William Harvey recalled the construction of the Belleville collegiate and the men who had worked to make its construction possible and paid tribute to the late Russell Wotten who, he said, had served faithfully on the commission, on the school board and in city council.

He pointed to his own municipal experience dating back more than a quarter of a century, noting that he had served 18 years on the board of education and was chairman for one term. During his council service he had been chairman of several important committees.

In closing he solicited the support of the electors and promised faithful service in the best interests of the city.

Jack Devine

Jack Devine, member of the local parks board, spoke briefly in favor of the recreation by-law which would give the recreation commission an annual sum of money equal to one mill on the tax rate.

He reviewed the city's previous lack of playground facilities and outlined a program of providing playgrounds which had been started by private citizens, later to be taken over by the parks board and recreation commission. Funds, however, had been dependent on the generosity of citizens and this year a grant of $7,500 from city council.

As yet, however, only the surface had been scratched. The purpose was to provide and maintain supervision for playgrounds and to provide equipment and facilities for youngsters to play hockey and softball. "There was no intention," he said, "to sponsor senior or junior hockey and baseball."

The chief point of asking for a mill on the tax rate was to provide a guaranteed sum of money for the recreation commission each year. This was necessary if the commission was to operate successfully.

Although an invitation was made by chairman William Brown no one in the audience offered to speak against the by-law.

Question, Answer Period

Following the program of speech-making there was a question and answer period with the candidates being called upon to answer some rather pointed questions as to policy and intentions.

One man from the audience wanted to know what the average attendance had been at evening council meetings. None of the candidates offered a reply, but Alderman Fred Deacon rose in the audience and said the average attendance by citizens was less than ten.

Another ratepayer wanted to know why there had been increased assessment of Parkwood Heights residences.

In reply Alderman Haig said in his opinion there would have been no argument regarding assessment in this district if it were not for local improvement charges. The trouble was that all the services, roads, sidewalks, sewers and watermains had been built at one time with resultant heavy load on the property owners.

Jack Allin said his heart went out to residents in the Parkwood Heights area. If city council had left assessments in the area as fixed by Judge Lane, following the initial assessment appeal there would have been no trouble. "There would have been no necessity for the city to pay $5,000 to have a man come to Belleville to equalize the assessments upwards," he said.

Another man from the audience enquired from Alderman Haig if it was his intention to bring up the question of afternoon council meetings with the view to reverting to the previous system of ev-

Given Much Thought

In reply Mr. Haig said the procedure by-law had seen considerable discussion in committee and also in council before it was passed.

The argument for the afternoon meetings was many aldermen were carrying heavy portfolios with result that increased council business made the combined committee meetings impractical. "There is a limit to what an alderman can bear," he said.

Afternoon council meetings were more efficient in that problems were discussed and decided on before aldermen were completely tired out as had been the case when evening meetings were in vogue.

"Possibly afternoon meetings are not as convenient for citizens to attend but if a delegation is desirous of placing something before council this can be done at any time during the session."

Compelled to Work Longer

He pointed out that the trend was toward a shorter working week yet evening council meetings compelled city officials to work 50 and 55 hours per week and more.

Another questioner wanted to know if it was true that council had pictures taken at the time of the royal tour and who authorized for their payment.

Alderman Harry Rollins jumped to his feet in the audience and said council had authorized payment for the pictures.

"I rather expected that question," Mr. Haig added. "I would just like to point out that taking pictures at the time of an important event is common practice and nothing more important than the royal visit has happened in Belleville in many years."

He said that a year ago the industrial commission had authorized pictures taken and the bill for photographic services was passed by council without question. "It is nothing new," Mr. Haig assured," it has been going on for years."

Replies to Question

Garbage disposal was another matter brought up, Mr. Haig being asked if it was the intention of council to fill a low area in the industrial area north of Churchill Heights with garbage.

In reply Mr. Haig went into detail regarding former plans to construct an incinerator in the city. There had been no action, however, and now it was considered cheaper to dispose of garbage by the fill and cover method. If the city could obtain a release from its contract to purchase the incinerator the fill method of garbage disposal would be commenced. The garbage would be covered daily and there would be no odor. Low areas could be filled and the city improved.

Asked if he approved of labor representation on the hospital board, Mr. Haig said if council felt labor or any other body had something to offer, its representation on any board would be approved.

City Hall Improvement

The question of improvements at the city hall came up for discussion with Mr. Allin agreeing that something could be done to make the building more attractive. "The brick should be cleaned and a stucco finish added to the police station," he said.

Mr. Haig said he was not so sure about the advisability of city hall improvements. He would like to see a committee appointed to investigate the advisability of moving the entire city business down to the old county home property. He pointed out that any repairs done at the city hall invariably went far over the estimates.

He said he had in mind the high value of property in the downtown section of the city as well as the heavy investment which the city had in the old people's home property.

Europe as I See It

By Raymond R. Canon

(Article 46)

Salamanca, Spain — (Special to the Ontario Intelligencer) — If you were to turn a saucer upside down, it would give you a rough idea of the relationship of the central plain to the rest of Spain. Rising gradually from the Bay of Biscay and the Mediterranean, the land reaches a height of about three thousand feet and then flattens out. The plateau forms a large plain, interrupted only by a small mountain range in the central part, and by the gorges cut by the large rivers which have their source in the mountains to the east, and which flow out through Portugal into the Atlantic. According to a popular saying in Spain, the climate here is "nine months of winter and three months of hell." This is no exageration for after a scorching hot summer it becomes bitterly cold in the winter, and heavy snowfalls are the rule.

You might call this plain the Prairie Provinces of Spain, for wheat, and almost only wheat is grown here. It is the breadbasket of Spain, and a failure of the crop means famine not only for the farmer, but for the whole Spanish nation, unless other grain can be imported in a big hurry. Added to that are the financial repercussions that inevitably follow such a failure, and Spain is certainly in no condition to weather any such disaster.

Monotonous Scenery

A ride through this countryside is very monotonous, for there is nothing to be seen except endless fields, broken now and then by clumps of trees or a small village. There are seldom any fences, the fields being marked off by a ditch. The majority of the roads are little better than paths. On approaching Salamanca, I was reminded of some pictures I had seen of the desert with a town in the background. You do not enter the city gradually. All at once the fields leave off and the city begins. Long after the city has been left behind you can look back and see the dome of the very beautiful cathedral situated there.

Perhaps there is one thing which stands out. If it were not for the fact that there is a railway through the country, you would think you had been transported back into the Middle Ages. The peasant uses wooden plows, pulled by two oxen, wearing a wooden yoke. Almost all his other equipment is made of wood. To draw water from his well, he either has erected a large pole, balanced on another pole as a lever or else has a pump which is operated by a horse pulling a lever round and round in a circle. The house that the peasant and his family lives in is the most primitive I have ever seen in Europe. No sanitation, just a ditch, in which the water runs from the house. The door keeps out nothing but the animals. Over the windows is spread some canvas. The peasant and his family start work at sunrise and finish at sundown. All this just in order to exist.

Limited Production

Only by all this hard work has the wheat farmer been able to keep production up to its present level, and it is certain that in the present state of affairs, the amount of wheat produced cannot be increased to any great extent. The Spanish government has been advised, even warned by authorities throughout Europe that the surest way of bringing a better living standard to Spain, and a rise in prosperity is to overhaul the whole agricultural system, modernizing it and teaching the peasants the use of machinery.

It is certain that the government is the only organization in the country able to bring about such changes, for the farmer himself can only make enough to live.

However, the Spanish government seems to think differently, and insists that it is in increased industrial activity that this prosperity will be achieved. They have introduced machinery to a certain extent on the farms, but up until now it has only been a drop in the bucket, and will have to be done on a much larger scale than it has been. Added to this there is much work still to be done in irrigation projects.

What money Franco expects to receive from America he plans to use to build new factories, replace worn machinery and equiping the army, but doesn't seem to have set aside much for agriculture. Perhaps it could be called another example of "guns before butter." Or it could be that it is so long since Franco visited his peasants he doesn't realize the conditions in which they live and work.

Shalom From Israel

"TIYULIM"

(Article 10)

Jerusalem Corridor, Israel — (Special to the Ontario Intelligencer) — Today I set out on a series of tiyulim (hikes) which will take me through three sections of Israel. Through the medium of my next few articles I will try to give you some idea of the places of interest that I visit. Today I visited the Jerusalem Corridor which comprises the district around the city of Jerusalem.

To the southwest of Jerusalem lies the village of Ain Cherem. This village is mentioned in the sixth chapter of Jeremiah, and the name of the village means "source of the vineyard." There are a number of Christian monasteries at Ain Cherem because the village has special significance for those of the Christian religion. According to tradition, John the Baptist was born at Ain Cherem and the Virgin Mary passed through the village on one of her journeys to Jerusalem.

Before the Arab-Israeli war, Ain Cherem was an Arab village. However, the Arabs fled during the war and the village is now inhabited by new immigrants who have come to live in Israel. The village looks like a typical Arab village with its stone buildings, and traces of ancient Byzantine art and mosiac may still be seen as you pass through the village.

As I stood on the hill on which the village is situated I could see many villages and settlements situated on the Judean hills. To the north one can see the ancient fortress of Kastel. This was one of the strong points in the Biblical history of the conquest of the land of Israel. In the distance I could see the village of Colonia which was originally a Roman colony, built by soldiers during the conquest of the 2nd Jewish Commonwealth.

Colonia was completely destroyed during the first round of the Arab-Israeli war in 1948 and has not been rebuilt because it is situated on the border between Trans-Jordan and Israel. Also from Ain Cherem, one is able to see into Trans-Jordan, and I was able to make out the village of Nebi Samuel. It was here that the prophet Samuel was born, and where he is supposedly buried. It was from Nebi Samuel that the army of the Trans-Jordan Arab Legion was able to shell Jerusalem in 1948.

Mentioned in Bible

Continuing westward from Ain Cherem, the next place that we visited was a very old village called Tsova. Tsova is mentioned in the Bible during the period of King David. It was an important fortress during the time of the Crusaders, and when the Romans ruled in Palestine. Tsova is situated on a hill which overlooks the main road to Jerusalem. Before 1948 the Arabs had a fortress at Tsova but this was captured during the war of liberation by the Palmach (Israeli shock troops). Today Tsova is deserted and resembles a ghost town.

Next to the old village of Tsova, a new settlement has sprung up called "Palmach Tsova." It has been settled by those members of the Palmach who captured the ancient village of Tsova. It is interesting to see the distinct contrast between the old stone village and the new settlement with its flourishing fields and fig groves.

Friendly Village

From Tsova one can see a former British radar station which is situated on a high mountain. The British turned this station over to the Arabs after the termination of the British Mandate in 1948. It is now held by the Arab Legion. In the distance one can also see the Arab village of "Abu Gouch." The inhabitants of Abu Gouch were always friendly to Jewish settlers in Palestine, in fact, one of them was a former leader of the Jewish terrorist Stern Gang, and the inhabitants helped the Stern Gang during the British Mandate.

The village supported the Army of Israel during the Arab-Israel war, and today, Abu Gouch is the only all Arab village in the state of Israel.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

By

WINIFRED E. WILSON

INVISIBILITY

Nature is so careful to protect her children that she supplies them with costumes which blend into their surroundings. Brown creepers are just the color of the tree trunks on which they climb; thrushes match dead leaves on the ground where they find their food; vireos, tinged with green, vanish into the foliage where their nests hang; birds spending the greater part of their time in snow-clad country wear suitable, white attire.

Members of the grouse family known as ptarmigan are found in the Arctic tundras and rocky slopes of our northland. Their plumage changes to agree with the advance of the seasons. In summer, a few white feathers are scattered irregularly through their brown bodies, but the males' underparts and the wings of both sexes are, as always, entirely white. Gradually, the dark feathers are replaced by white ones, so that in autumn the birds have a pepper and salt appearance; but by the time the country is all white, they are also, with the exception of their tails, which remain brown. It has been said that the shadow of a ptarmigan is then more conspicuous than the bird itself.

For a good reason, snow buntings change to darker apparel at the very opposite time of year. Nesting far beyond tree growth, in summer it is necessary to be clothed in white so as to be invisible. At that season, only a few small, black patches, which actually aid camouflage, break their solid white plumage. But once winter has set in, these birds fly to southern Canada, and therefore don coats which are a combination of brown and white areas.

Curiously enough, the big, northern hawk, called Gyrfalcon, may be clothed in any of three kinds of plumage; very dark indeed, grey, or pure white.

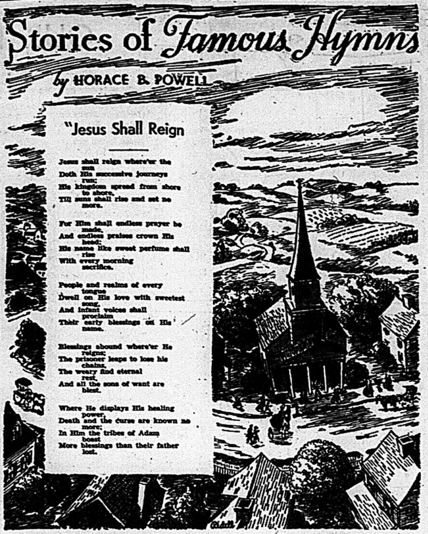
Stories of Famous Hymns

by HORACE B. POWELL



"Jesus Shall Reign

Jesus shall reign where'er the sun
Doth His successive journeys run;
His kingdom spread from shore to shore,
Till suns shall rise and set no more.

For Him shall endless prayer be made,
And endless praises crown His head;
His name like sweet perfume shall rise
With every morning sacrifice.

People and realms of every tongue
Dwell on His love with sweetest song,
And infant voices shall proclaim
Their early blessings on His name.

Blessings abound where'er He reigns;
The prisoner leaps to lose his chains,
The weary find eternal rest,
And all the sons of want are blest.

Where He displays His healing power,
Death and the curse are known no more;
In Him the tribes of Adam boast
More blessings than their father lost.

When Isaac Watts, famous English hymnist, set out one day to paraphrase the Seventy-second Psalm, he gave Christendom one of its most popular and enduring missionary hymns.

Carried to the four corners of the world by mission leaders and religious workers, the new song, "Jesus Shall Reign," soon was being sung by natives in far-off India, Africa, Japan and China as fervently as by English Christians back home. Today—at home and abroad, it is more popular than ever.

The story is told of how one of the native kings of the south sea islands — a Christian convert—substituted a Christian constitution for a pagan one in his dominion, in 1862. Several thousand natives attended a colorful ceremony at which the new constitution was read. The celebration had an impressive climax when the entire assembly joined in singing Watts' missionary hymn.

THE RECREATION BY-LAW

Besides the list of candidates for civic office, taxpayers next Monday will be expected to indicate whether or not they favor giving a one-mill grant to the Recreation Committee "to create and maintain recreation facilities and provide leadership and supervision in their full use for all age groups in Belleville."

The committee has advertised an extensive program which includes besides playgrounds and rinks such other features as athletic fields, drama and music, crafts and hobbies, picnic facilities and swimming.

During the past season, nine playgrounds were equipped, maintained and supervised. It is stated that 1,500 children took advantage of the facilities offered, probably much to their mothers' relief. During the winter five outdoor rinks for hockey and skating were erected and maintained.

To make all the above possible, the city contributed $7,500 grant, $500 from the Parks Board and two provincial grants of $1,847 and $3,000 (1950 and 1951) making a total of around $13,000. The major expenses were — playground equipment, $1,978; supervision, $4,952; playground construction and maintenance, $2,568 and payment on note, $1,200. Total expenses were $13,484.

The Recreation Committee had a tremendous task in organizing and maintaining such a program as outlined above and all who had a hand in the work are deserving of the highest commendation. It meant giving up a lot of leisure hours for the benefit of children. It meant also that some business men had to take time off during busy hours to give their attention to this project.

It cannot be expected that the city will continually have the unselfish services of these same citizens, year after year. New recruits to the work will be added as the occasion requires. Sometimes, however, enthusiasm wanes and trained personnel has to be obtained to take over much of the active work. Even with the volunteer help given last season it will be noted in the expenses, that supervision cost the committee $4,952. Nor is the time far-distant when it will be necessary to employ a full-time professional to give proper direction to the work. And that will mean added costs of no mean proportions.

When present costs amount to $13,000 it can be seen that considerable extra funds will be required eventually.

On the other hand, it has been argued that the committee's plans are too ambitious. That we can get along without some of the frills and concentrate alone on playgrounds and rinks. That supervision for nine playgrounds was too expensive when it cost nearly $5,000 for two months and that one mill ($18,500) could lead to extravagance of an unnecessary nature.

There is no thought that this fine work should be unduly hampered, for it is definitely needed. It may be asked why can not the city playgrounds get along on a council grant such as was given this year plus the provincial assistance? Would it not be well to continue as in the past year until those who are in charge are in a better position to assess their needs more closely?

It is sometimes well to go slow on projects which are fairly new. There are some who think the trial-and-error period should be continued for some time longer. Too-rapid expansion can be as big a headache as not enough. Taxpayers are getting restless under the demands of modern government so economy is a term which we are going to hear more of over the next few years. Higher taxes also mean higher rents eventually and few escape paying their share.

The above outline is presented with the thought in mind that those who vote on Monday will be able to do so with an open mind. Whether the proposal is justified in its cost only the individual can answer. That is the question which all, who vote, must answer.

TOO MUCH GOOD NEIGHBOR POLICY

The Province of Ontario enjoys the best possible relations with its neighboring states and provinces, and no one would have it otherwise. However, in one respect it may be that we are being too friendly for our own good. This one respect concerns the export of raw wood from publicly-owned timberland in Ontario to pulp and paper mills in nearby sections of the United States.

We receive the going market price for such raw wood, but if it were processed here and exported as wood pulp we would receive about five times as much. In addition our forests would be providing just this much more employment and earnings to workers in Ontario rather than to workers in the American mills.

It is not impossible but what some of the trees we export as raw wood come back to us as manufactured paper products, with duty added at the border of course.

The people of Ontario want to be the best of neighbors, but surely this is carrying the good neighbor policy beyond the bounds of reason. — (St. Thomas Times-Journal.)

30 YEARS AGO

December 1st, 1921.

The Belleville Tigers' Soccer team held an informal dance in Bennett's Academy and the affair was most enjoyable. During the evening Mayor Charles Hanna presented the cup won by the Tigers team in the league games this past season. The officials of the dance were: president, Syd. Taylor; vice president, N. Baker; secretary, J. Barry; treasurer, H. Page; stewards, F. Page and R. Reid.

In a bowling match at the Y.M.C.A. the G.T.R. shop team defeated the K. of C. team, the score being 2121 to 1864. Gerow of the shop's team rolled the highest three string of 487 and also the best single of 204. The following composed the teams: Shops: Lancaster, Gerow, Randle, Gardiner and Symons; K. of C.: Barrett, Domenico, Blute, Boyle and Munro.

December 1st., 1911.

In an indoor baseball game at the Armouries between the team representing the Regiment and a team representing the Cement Company, the former team won, the score being 31 to 20. The following composed the teams: Regiment: Mills, Sharpe, Moore, Minorgan, Barrett, Wallace, Middleton, Nurse and Lloyd; Cement Company: Thompson, Croft, M. Reddick, F. Reddick, French, Watkins, Connell, Pitcher and Dowrie. The umpire was William Cochrane and he gave entire satisfaction to both teams.

Mr. Will H. Johnson has returned to Toronto after spending a few days here with relatives.

50 YEARS AGO

December 1st., 1901.

The proposed purchase of the electric street railway by the city has been abandoned; which goes to show that public opinion is something nobody will disregard, if they are wise.

Mrs. John Allen and son William have left here to reside in Toronto.

Mr. Fred Armistead of Toronto, formerly of Belleville, is spending a few days here with friends.

Mr. Jack Phippen will leave shortly for Delogoa Bay, South Africa.

OUR TOWN

BY JACK SCOTT

LOST IN SUDS

Well, girls here it is! Time again for Uncle Jack's annual report on how all the people are in the soap operas. And, right off, I want to tell you that everybody's bearing up remarkably well considering the mess they're in.

* * *

Helen Trent never seemed happier! You remember Helen? The woman who won't let life pass her by because she's over 35? Well, Helen is happy because Uncle Hadley Butler isn't going to sue for the custody of Helen's grand-niece, little Molly-Lou, wealthy child actress, and so Molly-Lou will be able to stay with Betty Mallory, after all.

Of course, Helen doesn't know that Uncle Hadley was really bought off by Cynthia Whitney, wife of Gil Whitney. Cynthia is accused by Gil of silencing Uncle Hadley because she (Cynthia, that is) joined Uncle Hadley in faking a marriage between Betty and Gil while he was still blanked out from an airplane crash and . . .

* * *

Things are, if anything, a little more confused for Our Gal Sunday. That's the one that asks the question: "Can this little girl from a mining town in Colorado find happiness as the wife of a wealthy titled Englishman?" That's for them to know and you to find out.

Anyway, Dr. Craig Norwood is secretly in love with Our Gal Sunday and planning to break Sunday's marriage to Lord Henry. He is plotting with Charlotte Abbott, wife of Dr. Julian Abbott. Charlotte wants Dr. Julian to leave town ("this cage I can never escape from") but Dr. Julian is doing some plotting, too. He wants Charlotte to see a psychiatrist friend of his named Dr. Morton Bruno, to see if she's crazy.

"I hate Sunday and you'll be just what Sunday deserves," Charlotte tells Dr. Norwood. "You're ruthless and arrogant and evil and in spite of Sunday's saintly devotion to her husband and children she's still attracted to you."

Well!

* * *

All of the Perkinses are rejoicing over Tom's recovery and Faye especially. Faye and her sister Evvie are going to change the curtains in Tom's room to help his morale.

It was only the announcer who cast a slight pall over this charming scene. "Tom has been an invalid for a long time and his self-confidence is underminded," he said, darkly. "Is there a future for Faye and Tom? What do you think?"

* * *

That brings us to Big Sister, Ruth Wayne, brought to us by the people who make the stuff to "take your skin out of the shadows and into the light of romantic new loveliness."

Big Sister has just run into Dr. Marlowe and she has said that she thinks Dr. Marlowe is a bit of all right in spite of the continuing hostility that's felt by her husband, Dr. John Wayne. "Basically you are a warm, sensitive and generous person," Big Sister tells Dr. Marlowe.

Meantime, Amber is plotting with her unexpected visitor, Mr. Parker, and Parker is saying, "I have a score to settle with Dr. Marlowe myself, Amber. If you're interested, there's a very simple way to take care of our arrogant young friend." All this is because Amber is infatuated with Dr. Marlowe and has pulled a gun on him only two days ago when Dr. Marlowe told her to get out.

(The people who bring us Big Sister, by the way, have a new contest. You just send in your signature and some box tops and the most interesting signature wins. Almost everybody who listens to soap operas can write their own name.)

* * *

Just Plain Bill is up to his neck in so many complications that I felt like a man trying to read seven novels at the same time.

Bill's daughter, Nancy, and her husband, Terry, are mad at Guy because Guy has tried to murder Just Plain Bill, Guy's wife, Elise, has custody of Marjorie, their daughter, and Claude Stone and Joy Allen are plotting—no, let's start all over again.

Anyway, Elise is feeling cross with Guy because, as Just Plain Bill put it, "Elise can't forget that you lost your temper and tried to strangle her."

My notes are a little confused here except for the scene where Claud says to Joy, "I sure wish I knew what was going on here." This was exactly the way I felt about it all.

Just Plain Bill is described by the announcer as "the kind of fellow who lives next-door to you" and I am looking at my neighbor with new interest.

* * *

The big problem in Your Own Aunt Mary is what to do with little Letitia now that her father has been murdered.

Aunt Georgina tells little Letitia that she must be very careful that she says at the inquest and little Letitia says, "You don't want me to talk about them sending me away to a mental hospital?"

Later Aunt Georgina seems to suggest that little Letitia may have had something to do with her father's death. "The other day after her father killed her dog . . I don't know. . . I think something happened to Letitia that day."

* * *

I had to stop here because the Happy Gang came on the air. It wasn't much, but it was an escape.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

FREE SPEECH

We, in this western world, should daily get down on our knees and thank God that we live in a land and at a time when we can say what we please so long as we do not defeat the ends of justice, or trample upon the rights of our fellow man.

Freedom of speech is a precious possession. The rights of the people are supreme. When any government interferes with our press, they attack the very foundation of free government which is an inheritance of the people, and guaranteed to them by the constitution. Suppress free utterance and the foundation of a free people is endangered and violence invited.

What a blessing it is in this western world for the humblest to express himself on all topics, to write to his favorite newspaper and say what he will, whether right or wrong, yet with dignity upholding his precious privilege. Our newspapers are not always on the right side, but they are free to say what they will and their influence is tremendous. Repression of utterance, except in grave times when it means the protection of the rights of all, is unthinkable in a free land.

There are evils that creep into all governments, but so long as the power of righteousness remains with the people, that government remains secure. Who would exchange his right to free speech in a free land to that of one where the firing squad prevail for all who express their honest convictions?

A free press is essential in a free republic, or in any form of government, for without it, that government secedes its people from their just and God-given rights. Free and honest discussion on the part of all the people of a government is what keeps it alive and free. And its free ballot is no less precious than its free press.

Free discussion, as opposed to force, is the only method by which an enduring peace may be attained. It is the sacred privilege of us all to stand up and be counted, with pride in our hearts, on the side of all free people during these confusing and trouble-filled days!

Mayor Officially 'Weighed In'

Minneapolis, Dec. 1—(AP)—Transplanting an old English custom to Minneapolis, Mayor Eric C. Hoyer was officially "weighed in" yesterday in ceremonies in the city hall rotunda.

The mayor cried "foul" when the scales showned him at 177 pounds, three more than when he took office Dec. 1, 1948.

"Why, this costume and wig weigh at least sixx pounds," he told his other fellow city workers, all also clad in false hair and knee breeches.

The scales, costumes and other parapnernalia were brought here from High Wycombe, England. The weighing ritual was undertaken there in 1282 on the theory that officials who gave their all in public service should weigh less after their terms of office.

Sir Alexander Maxwell, chairman of the British Travel Association, supervised the ceremony. He expained that it is still carried on at High Wycombe.

"But now if they find the mayor or other high officials getting fat on the job, 'it's a matter of high merriment,'" Maxwell explained

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Signed Letters, Not More Than One Page, or 100 Words long, Pertaining to Personal Health and Hygiene, Not to Disease, Diagnosis or Treatment, Will be Answered by Dr. Brady if a Stamped, Self-Addressed Envelope is Enclosed, Etc.

VITAMIN B12 AND MULTIPLE NEURITIS

In nine out of 11 cases of multiple neuritis associated with diabetes and chronic alcoholism, Dr. P. Menof writing in South African Medical Journal, Capetown, observed a dramatic response to Vitamin B12.

When such sufferers were given vitamin B12 they showed immediate improvement. The tenderness and enlargement of the liver receded almost as rapidly as the pain, tenderness and partial paralysis of arms, legs, feet and hands

There is reason to believe that an adequate daily intake of vitamin B12, especially if it is taken in combination with its natural potentiator or activator, folic acid, as prescribed in pamphlet, The Red Blood Vitamin, available on request if you provide stamped, self-addressed envelope, is valuable in the treatment of many forms of neuritis.

Now, children, don't "try" a few doses of vitamin B12 and discontinue it if it doesn't immediately dispel whatever ache, pain, tenderness or muscle weakness you ascribe to neuritis.

On the other hand, if you do take it for, say, three weeks, and experience any extraordinary effects, please tell me about it, on a postcard, in this fashion:

I am—— years old and have had ——— for (how long). On your suggestion I have taken (how much) B12 (with or without folic acid) for (how long) and my present condition is . . .

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Watch Out for Tonsil Snatchers

I just read your article "Watch Out for Tonsil Snatchers" and I must say: How right you are, Dr. Brady. Incidentally, I believe you have no idea how much influence your teachings have on everyday practice . . . (———, M. D.)

Answer—Thank you, Doctor.

Molasses

Husband and I take a tablespoon of (brand name) blackstrap molasses daily in milk or cereal. Is it beneficial or harmful? (Mrs. F. W.)

Answer—Beneficial, if you prefer it to other brands or kinds of molasses, although it has no significant health merits which other molasses lacks.

New Woman

After taking the iodin ration as directed in your pamphlet I feel that I've just started to live. No more morning weariness from restless sleep, more energy during the day and most important, less iritability which was chronic . . . (Mrs. H. M. F.)

Answer—Thank you, Ma'am. It is rarely that a correspondent reports his or her experience with something I have suggested, unless he or she seeks further information or advice. For the pamphlet The Iodin Ration any reader may send stamped, self-addressed envelope—and no clipping please.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

IN THE AREA OF CHOICES

Life is largely a matter of making choices and sticking to them. Growth of character usually depends upon the promptness of our decisions and our willingness to pursue worthwhile objectives with determination.

We may think we would be happier if life were laid out for us and our decisions were made by a Power higher than our own. Confronted by hard decisions, the average human being often wishes he were an automaton.

But for better or worse, man has been given the capacity to make choices and the Almighty intends that he shall make them. He often makes wrong choices but that is part of his education. There can be no growth in character unless we make choices, and we can be sure that, human nature and intelligence being as they are, the batting average we maintain will not be very high.

It is true that many decisions are made for us. We were not asked whether we wanted to be born, whether we wanted to be male or female, black, white or yellow, rich or poor, blonde or brunette, tall or short. These things are in the hands of a Power higher than our own.

The area in life in which we make choices is not large but it is vastly important. In that area, and in that area alone, character is created.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Birds having surrendered fore-limbs, forefeet, claws or hoops in favor of wings, have been obliged to develop some sort of compensation for the loss of these useful fore-limbs in the matter of handling and eating their food.

To make up for the loss of front grippers, birds have developed the most extraordinary muscular construction in their skulls and jaws. A bird's beak is not a solid projection from its skull. The upper and lower mandible are like lips with fancy toe-nails on them. The upper and lower beak can be extended, depressed, retracted, in a great variety of movements, depending on the species of bird and the food it has to eat. In the small sleek head of a bird are muscles, rods, sliding devices of enormous power, considering the size of the creature.

There will be starlings around for most of us to watch this winter. Try to observe a starling feeding on the ground. It drives its closed beak into the earth, amid the grass roots, then pries its beak open with a force hardly believable, thus tearing a small hole in the ground. The movement is the reverse of a pair of pliers. The starling's eyes are so set, and so movable, that it can look straight down between its gaping beak, to see that food, seed, insect or succulent root, has been revealed in that powerful, prying effort of the beak. With great speed, the starling walks along, rapidly prying open small hole after hole, moving quickly from each one to the next if nothing is revealed, pausing to spear with tongue or beak anything that appears.

Horned lips, that is what a bird's beak is. And depending on whether it is a seed eater that must shell and skin its seeds, or an insect eater that must probe and pry after insects or catch them with wide paging mouth on the wing, each species has its own style of armored lips. They are a lot more skilled in their function than many kinds of animals' forefeet.

News of Trenton

Couch Stands for Re-election; Burtt Slams Tax Increases; Ryan Urges Financial Caution

Trenton — (Special) — There were rounds of hand clapping last night when Mayor Kenneth J. Couch announced that he would stand for election as chief magistrate for 1952. Earlier Mr. Couch decided to retire from civic affairs. He explained that in the 24 hours before the nomination meeting there was pressure brought to bear on him. He said he had many kind remarks from people who he thought were against him. (There was hand clapping at this point). "I have decided to carry on for another year," he continued.

Mr. Couch made broad references to Trenton's position since he took office five years ago. He mentioned the town's improved credit rating, stating that Trenton bonds were sought today because the town has been operated with a surplus. He described the appearance of the town, saying it was much improved. He talked about the 200 new houses built by Central Mortgage on Byron street and the 25 houses erected in North Trenton. He credited the housing developments with promoting new sewage services for other residents in the vicinity of both projects.

Talking about the market square improvements, Mr. Couch said he would not be happy until an up-to-date bus terminal was erected. He considered a new terminal most important.

Mr. Couch told his listeners he had been relieved since Murray township had taken over that part of highway No. 33 running from the C.N.R. subway to the town limits en route to Glen Miller. He explained that the town collected about $1,000 in revenue from the landowners along the highway and that it would cost $40,000 to put it in shape. He spoke kindly of the co-operation between Murray township and Trenton councils.

To Extend Boundaries

Mayor Couch mentioned plans to extend the town's west boundary. He claimed that the sewage problem was under control and spoke about a master plan for a disposal plant.

"No man ever served with a more sincere council than I have in the last five years," declared Mr. Couch. "Men of experience are needed in 1952 because there are many problems. My plea is don't forget them.

He asked the electors to offer constructive criticism. "Trenton stands at the cross-roads," he said. "Let's all go forward united to a bigger and better Trenton."

Mr. Couch revealed that he had intended to sing a "Swan Song" when he appeared on the platform on the night of the nomination meeting. He said he was accused of walking out. "No one can ever say Ken Couch walked out when you needed me," he declared. Mr. Couch thanked his backers for their confidence in him. He closed with the remark: "The only hope I have is that God's kindest blessings can rest on Trenton and its people."

Many Withdraw

Town clerk-treasurer O. W. Larry reported that of the other six nominated for mayor all but Senator W. A. Fraser and O. G "Buster" Alyea had announced intention to withdraw. Both of the latter were not in town last night.

Councillor Charles Allore said he was definitely in the field for 1952. Mr. Allore was chairman of the court of revision last term. "A town with an $8,000,000 assessment is really big business," he said. "The small landowners are carrying too much of the load. I agree with that. I feel that provincial and federal governments will do something to ease the load, with more assistants to hospitals, education and welfare."

Mr. Allore read a breakdown of Trenton's assessment figures as follows: industrial 6.97 per cent; commercial 26.01; business 11.06, residential 55.96.

There was much complaining about residential assessment in Trenton, he said, but Trenton figures compare favorably with those of Brockville, Lindsay, Orillia and Barrie and were lower in all but one respect. Mr. Allore predicted an increased assessment of $50,000 before 1952 tax notices sent out, due to the building of new houses. He paid tribute to assessor Charles Rogerson.

Councillor Norman Banfield, seeking re-election as councillor, touched two questions, the building of a bus terminal and the erection of a community centre.

Wants Bus Terminal

He said: "I likewise brought to light the necessity and importance of a new bus terminal in Trenton and was instrumental in obtaining plans in this connection. This matter is being held in abeyance pending the outcome of negotiations.

"Although the consensus is that we cannot afford such a project, I wish to ease your mind to the extent that there is no reason why it should be assumed that this project would increase your taxes, as I have every reason to believe that whether or not the project is undertaken by your municipality the revenue derived from its operation would more than offset the annual debenture payments. There is every possibility, however, that this project can and will be developed by private enterprise in the not too distant future.

"I have also taken an interest in the matter of providing the citizens of this town, especially the children, with a community centre if at all possible. I consider this to be a most important matter and it is to be hoped that the ratepayer will give it fair and reasonable consideration prior to arriving at any conclusion on election day. One thing that I would like to point out is that it was upon my own insistence that you are being given the opportunity to vote on the question. Other municipalities have gone ahead and built their own centres without seeking the reaction of the ratepayers. I felt that you people should have the privilege of voicing your opinion prior to the undertaking of such a project then if you vote "yes," which I sincerely hope you do, it becomes a community project and it behooves us all to get behind it and put it over.

Who Raises Money?

"I have been asked such important questions as 'where are you going to build it?' 'How are you going to raise the money?' 'Who is going to run it?' 'Will it be a community centre or will it be controlled by private capital to the extent that the community would derive no benefits from it other than through the medium of attending the different attractions and events and paying high admission prices.

"Now let us answer these questions step by step.

"On what site will the community centre be built?" At the moment we do not know. There are at least four possible sites: the present site of the old arena on Quinte Street, the Bain Memorial Park; the town property on Meyers Street and that property now owned by the C.P.R. adjacent to Princess Street. The answer to the next question of "Where is the money coming from?" is simple. You, the people. Different communities adopt different and varied means of raising money. Brockville, for instance, raised a lot of their money through the medium of raffles. Scarborough started their ball rolling with a banquet whereby they sold 100 plates at $500 per plate. What Trenton will do I do not know. We can only wait and see when the time comes.

"The next question "Who will run and operate the community centre?" The answer to this question is controlled by the Community Centre's Act, whereby it says that the directors shall be appointed by council and that at least two of them shall be councillors and that the remaining five five shall be appointments made from the different organizations in Trenton and that these five directors shall hold their term of office for two years.

No Taxation

"By retaining the project under municipal jurisdiction it remains a community centre and is exempted from both federal and provincial taxations.

"During the next 20 years, (the life of the proposed debenture issue), the ratepayers of Trenton together with government grants will spend at least $10,000,000 in the maintenance of their municipality. Is it asking too much that a mere sum of $100,000 of the $10,000,000 be set aside for a community centre? Especially in view of the possibility of the debenture debt being liquidated through the operation of the centre itself.

"Other communities have made a success of such an adventure. Why not Trenton? Other communities are now very proud of their efforts. Trenton can be proud too.

"Please bear in mind one thing when you go to the polls on Monday, December 10, to vote on the question of a community centre do not let anyone make you believe that a "Yes" vote will increase your taxes because it will not. The community centre committee will not receive any financial assistance through the medium of a debenture issue until they first can lay $150,000 on the line and, if such a committee is able to accomplish this feat, then they certainly would be justly entitled to the $100,000 to be voted by you.

"Many factors have endeavored to inspire me to aspire for the mayorship of Trenton. On the other hand other factors have been quick to take advantage of the situation by circulating rumors to the effect that I was only a political party front, and that the ratepayers would not be voting for me but rather for a political party.

Wants To Be Mayor

"My ambition has been and always will be sooner or later to become your chief magistrate and when this time comes, I certainly will not permit any person or political party to interfere with my ambitions."

Speaking on behalf of his decision to run again for council, Councillor Ross Burtt stated that he was strictly against increasing taxes even if it was for a community centre. He pointed out the heavy expense the town was obligated to shoulder to build a high school and sewage disposal plant. "I'm with the community centre as soon as they raise $150,000", declared Mr. Burtt.

Councillor C. V. Graham, chairman of fire, market and police, reported on his department. He said fire losses in Trenton were not any higher than they were for the last five years. He mentioned the protection Trenton was giving an outside area covering a 10-mile radius around the town. Murray township for service, he said, paid $100 for the first hour and $25 an hour afterwards. He explained that it was not costing Trenton any money to provide protection in Murray.

Mr. Graham accepted his nomination for council and said he had decided to seek re-election.

Ryan Fears Tax Hoist

Before Chairman of Finance Victor J. Ryan gave his report he told the meeting that he had decided to withdraw from town affairs and only changed his mind after Mayor Couch announced he would stand again. In his report he said: "It is interesting to analyze the expenditures budgeted for this year. I would draw your attention to the fact that 70 per cent of your expenditures are made up of education, debt charges, protection to persons and property, law enforcement and general government. These are items over which the council has little or no control.

"There are three items which will probably increase the pressure on the taxpayers in the years to come, commencing in 1952.

"1. The ever-increasing school facilities and requirements which will need to be serviced both of capital and operating expenditures.

"2. The possibility that the hospital may require annual financial assistance.

"3. The new sewage system. To date, we have been unable to arrive at any satisfactory program regarding this expenditure of $750,000.00 recommended by the firm of Gore and Storrie, but there is no question that this will have to be finalized and very soon.

"There is also a possibility of a fourth expenditure of $100,000 for the proposed community centre. That will entirely depend of course on the ratepayers. If they vote "Yes", it will mean increased taxation to meet the debenture payments.

"I hope when the voters go to the polls on Dec. 10 that they will have given considerable thought to the large debenture payments which will have to be levied for in the coming years."

In closing Mr. Ryan made a few comments not pertaining to town finances. He said: "First, as you all know, I have completed 12 consecutive years as one of your councillors and I can assure you that whatever I have done, right or wrong, has been motivated by what I considered to be in the best interests of the town. I have enjoyed being of service to the community for these 12 years although this past year has been a very hectic and somewhat disrupting one.

Press Unsympathetic

"A great many arguments and personalities were injected into some of our meetings this year, aided and abetted in my opinion by an unsympathetic local press. And by unsympathetic I mean instead of trying to foster co-operation in the town's governing body, they only succeeded in widening the rift by making capital of the differences of opinions at the council meetings. However, these little skirmishes have one good result, in that the people of Trenton have taken a much livelier interest in their civic affairs.

"There is one more comment I would like to make at this time. I am in complete agreement with Councillor Banfield that party politics have no place in municipal affairs. Your mayor and council should be elected on their ability and merit alone. As for myself, I have not been affiliated with any party politics during my years as councillor for the town of Trenton, and have no intentions of doing so in the future.

The other member of 1951 council asking the electors to again support him, D. J. Sutherland, reviewed the accomplishments of the sanitation and sewage disposal department. Of the $37,000 appropriated for the term he still had nearly $5,000 left. He talked about new facilities his department had provided. He linked himself with the progress being made to build a new sewage disposal plant. He referred to the remarks that party politics had been brought into town affairs. He commented: "A man's politics is his own business. When it comes to town affairs no one can ever say I injected party politics into them."

Seven new candidates will seek election for council bringing the total to 13 out of the 14 nominated for office on Dec. 10. New aspirants are: Reg. Armstrong, Frank Barry, Lyle Carr, Norman Crawley, Clifford Gunter, Robt. Smithrim and R. J. Whitley.

News of Trenton

Trenton Cold Storage Plant Seeking Damages of $500

Trenton — (Special) — Manager of the Trenton Cold Storage and Locker Plant Eben James claimed $500 damages to the slipway beside his plant at the final meeting of the 1951 council in the town offices Thursday night. He claimed that a sewage disposal pipe was not connected to the septic tank west of his property and that raw sewage had floated down the bay and filled the water right-of-way. Council asked Mr. James to submit his receipts for the job of excavating the slip.

Council pledged their support to Clerk-treasurer O. W. Larry, under criticism of the Dominion Management Company now completing an industrial survey of the town at the cost of $2,000. A letter from the management company questioned a statement in the Ontario Intelligencer by Mr. Larry revealing that the survey men had spent not more than 36 hours in town gathering information. Mr. Larry repeated his remarks and council backed him up.

The management official disclosed that he was sending a text of the survey and if it was not returned with alterations within a week the printing would commence.

Squadron Leader Frank Bowler entered a claim of $21.25 to cover the cost of replacing a transformer in his furnace motor which burned out when his cellar flooded last spring. It was reported that a deluge of water rolling down King Street in the break-up, flooding cellars along the route before proper storm sewers and catch basins were installed. The town engineer was instructed to inspect Mr. Bowler's motor and report his findings to council.

Councillor Norman Banfield, acting on behalf of the community centre planning committee, was granted permission to place a sign across the east end of the town bridge. Councillor Sutherland prompted that the wording "Vote yes for the community centre Dec. 10 be stipulated in the resolution covering the authorization.

It was reported to council that the preparations for the royal visit cost the town $3,200.

Lovers of the firehall tower landmark may rest easier now. Repairmen have suggested sheeting the tower and covering it with insul-brick rather than tearing it down. Fire Chief Harry Filion said it would be a mistake to remove the tower, since it provided a method of drying hose.

Pointing out the advantages of the tower, Chief Filion indicated the extra cost attached to the remodelling job. An electric drying machine would cost $895, a siren, $1,000, besides the cost of tearing down the tower.

Tenders received yesterday included price to put the tower back into A-1 condition.

The town bridge, lacking adequate illumination for some time, is to get 12 more lights. At present there is only one fixture lighting the entire span of the town bridge, one councillor reported. The new lights, six on each side, will provide 300 watt illumination apiece.

It was decided to pay assistant clerk, Allan Weaver $42 in lieu of one week's holidays.

At the close of the meeting a colored moving picture of the visit to Trenton by Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip was shown. The production by Wayne Simmons received the approval of all present.

POLIO VICTIMS

Salt Lake City, Dec. 1 (AP)— Three young polio victims were flown to Salt Lake City hospitals yesterday for treatment in an emergency flight from an isolated, snowbound Utah village. The stricken children were from Hanksville, remote south central Utah town.

Petes Defeat Eagles 8-6, Lindsay Wins

Peterborough Petes forced a three-way tie for second spot in the district O.H.A. senior "B" group last night by pulling out an 8-6 win over their city rivals, the Peterborough Eagles.

This left the two teams tied with Kingston SACS for second place with four points each, two points behind the league-leading Belleville Black Hawks.

Lindsay Kinsmen remained in first place in the junior "B" group by defeating the Peterborough Oddfellows 4-2. This keeps them one point ahead of the local junior Hawks. The Hawks can move into undisputed possession of first place with a win over Kingston Vics in Kingston tonight.

PEARSON IN PARIS

Paris, Dec. 1—(Reuters)—L. B. Pearsons, Canada's external affairs secretary, arrived here by train today from Rome, where he presided over the North Atlantic Treaty Council last week.

INDIANS GET TELEPHONES

Sutton, Ont., Dec. 1 (CP)—The 150 Indians who live on Georgina Island reserve in Lake Simcoe yesterday saw workmen laying cable for their first telephones. The phone service, sometimes vitally needed in winter to summon medical aid when the island is isolated by ice, will consist of two telephones at a cost of $4,500. The Indians paid the cost of the installation—$4,500—out of their own pockets. They will also pay the monthly charges.

RAILROADERS WARNED

Washington, Dec. 1 (AP)— Railroad engine employees were cautioned by a union leader yesterday against letting disappointment over pay and working conditions interfere with safe train operations. David B. Robertson, president of the Brotherhood of Firemen and Engineers, sent "an official circular" to 110,000 union members in the United States and Canada calling attention to several "tragic railroad accidents" lately. He suggested "the human element" is a factor in safety.

MAYOR AND COUNCIL PROTEST AGAINST INFERENCE

In his radio address on Tuesday evening, November 27th., Mr. H. J. Allin made the following statement.

Quote: "I shall never forget my first visit to Ontario House, London, when I looked up at the two large windows filled with pictures of our thriving Ontario Cities and Towns. Was Belleville represented — NO. On enquiring as to the reason, the answer was, Belleville does not seem to want to co-operate."

He implied that the omission of the name Belleville from the list of important Ontario Cities at Ontario House, London, indicated a serious neglect to make proper use of the established agencies for publicizing our City and contributed to the failure of new industries to be established in Belleville.

We have obtained the above picture which was published in the October 1951 issue of the Ontario Government Services Bulletin, in which you will note the name of Belleville prominently displayed.

We, the Mayor and Council protest the implication that we have been negligent in this regard and ask you to judge which to be correct, the statement as quoted by Mr. H. J. Allin or the facts as shown above.

VICTORIA AVE. W.M.C.

The November meeting of the Women's Mission Circle of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church was held on Tuesday evening, at the home of Miss A. Lounsberry, Moodie Street. There were 30 members present. The president, Mrs. C. Campbell, presided.

After the opening hymn, scripture reading and prayer, the "Watch Tower" was given by Mrs. K. Daniel, who brought several interesting items of news from missionaries on the various fields.

Church—A School

Mrs. A. Wells led in a brief devotional period basing her remarks on a portion of scripture from Luke 18. She said, in part —"Did you ever think of the church as a school of learning? Over the door of one of our Canadian universities these words are carved: 'Enter—to grow in wisdom,' and on leaving the university these words meet the eye—"Depart—to serve better thy country and thy fellowman." Our churches are even more important. No boy or girl, man or woman, can go out to deal properly with life without an adequate knowledge of spiritual things. Continual growth toward the likeness of Christ is an essential part of Christian character."

Home Missions

The topic on "Home Missions" was given by Mrs. M. Robson. This took the form of a quiz in which almost all the members present had a part.

During the business part RL

During the business period, it was decided to hold the special Mission Circle Prayer Service in connection with the regular church prayer meeting on Dec. 5. Plans were started for the Christmas party at Mrs. Campbell's later in December, one week ahead of the usual date of meeting.

Mrs. A. Wells, Mrs. C. Hay and Mrs. B. Orr were the committee appointed to nominate a list of officers for the coming year.

After the meeting closed, refreshments were served by Miss Lounsberry and the social committee.

Food for Thought

Readers' Saturday Column

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION:

A few days ago your published a recipe for Cranberry Relish with Oranges — Could I have a copy of same? — Mrs. E.E.L.

Answer:

CRANBERRY ORANGE RELISH

Three oranges, one quart of cranberries, sugar and hot water. Cover oranges with hot water and peel one of them. Pick over and put through food chopper, cranberries, rind of 1 orange and pulp of three without the seeds and membrane. Measure and add an equal amount sugar, mixing thoroughly. Store in jars and use without cooking or sealing.

QUESTION:

I read in your column that Mrs. Gordon C. wants a recipe for a Graham-Cracker coated Date Cookie. The only one I know of is the same mixture as your Graham - Cracker Roll; only I shape them into balls, the size of a large walnut (or smaller if you wish) or into an oblong shape, like a large date, then I dip these balls into the rolled cracker crumbs. Set them on a waxed sheet of paper until set, in a cool place. They are then ready for use. — Mrs. F.R.

Answer:

I am most grateful to you for coming to my rescue, and I am sure Mrs. G. C. will be too.

QUESTION:

I would be interested in receiving the recipe you mentioned in your column in tonight's paper for Cheese Souffle and Cheese Strata. Also, I would like to know if you have a recipe for Tomato Custard. It is a very tasty supper dish that my mother used to make. The only ingredients I can recall are stewed tomatoes, bread crumbs and eggs. I should very much appreciate any help you can give me in getting a good recipe for this dish. — E.

CHEESE SOUFFLE

Three tablespoons flour, ½ teaspoon salt, cayenne, 3 tablespoons butter, 1 cup milk, 3 eggs, 1 cup grated old or processed cheese.

Make thick white sauce of first five ingredients. Remove from heat, add well-beaten egg yolks and cheese. Chill. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Turn into buttered baking dish or ramekins, oven-poach or steam over gently boiling water — individual amount, 20 to 25 minutes — large amounts 40 to 50 minutes — at an oven temperature of 275 deg. Fahr. increased to 325 deg. Fahr. Serve at once.

CHEESE STRATA

Four slices of crustless bread cut in quarters, 1 cup grated cheese, 2 cups milk, 2 tablespoons melted butter, 1 teaspoon salt, cayenne, 2 eggs.

Butter baking dish, arrange cubes of bread and cheese in layers, having bread on top. Beat eggs, add milk, butter and seasonings. Pour over bread — let stand 20 minutes. Oven-poach till firm — large amount 35 to 40 minutes — individual 20 minutes.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Take more than two months for a decision on marriage

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am planning to be married shortly to a man I have known two months. He loves me very much and says he will try to make me happy, but he wants us to live with his mother after we are married, and I don't want to. His mother is ill and unable to work, and he supports her. She thinks she can tell him what to do about everything, and she tries to tell me, too.

What can I do about this?

R. S.

Dear R.S.: I might say, first, that you had better take longer than two months to get acquainted with this man before you make up your mind whether or not you will marry him. Even under the best of circumstances, two months is not nearly long enough to get to know someone with whom you think of spending the rest of your life, but under these particular conditions it would be the worst kind of folly to do anything in a hurry.

Give yourself at least a year before making any decision, and before the year is up, it will probably become clear to you what you should do.

Friendships mend quicker if you don't hold a grudge

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 15, and have been going with a boy I have known since I was 11. About five months ago, we had an argument and have not been very friendly since then. About three months after that, he enlisted in the Navy without even telling me anything about it. I heard it from friends. Even though he came to the apartment next door to me to say goodbye, he never even said goodbye to me, and I felt very bad about it.

He has never written one word to me, although every other girl in my neighborhood has had letters from him. People say he is just acting that way to make me jealous. Do you think that could be the reason? If it is, he is sure succeeding.

He is supposed to be coming home on leave pretty soon, and my friends tell me that I should not talk to him or even look at him. Do you agree? If not, and you think I should talk to him, what should I say to make him realize that he has hurt me terribly?

J. O.

Dear J.O.: I think you'd be very silly to do what your friends say, and silly, too, if you made a point of telling him that he hurt you.

The sensible thing to do would be to forget about the past and just be natural and friendly with him. Don't act as though you were carrying a torch for him, but just treat him like any one of your other boy friends. If you see him, be pleasant and interested in anything he has to say and let it go at that. If he sees that you are not holding any grudges, it will be much easier for you both to renew your friendship.

BEAUTY

Noses; Saucy and Otherwise

If a teen-ager were to select a nose for herself, as she selected a frock, she would not consider the model with which she was born. It seems that nature's bestowals in the way of human beaks are not acceptable to the members of the coke crowd. Many mothers have had to listen to complaints on this subject.

Few noses are ugly. Most of them suit the facial composition, get along agreeably with the other features. Some, of course, may be too long or too short, according to the owner's idea. Maybe too round or too pointed, too snubby or too bumpy. Of course, any nose is a good one that keeps out of other people's business, doesn't riot in the hay fever season, or fancy it is a stop light and bloom like the red red rose.

Give the human nose credit where credit is due. It warms and filters the air before it is taken into the lungs. It catches atmospheric dust that might cause trouble in the respiratory organs. It gives pleasure when it sniffs the pleasant odors of food cooking in the kitchen. It fairly purrs with delight when it comes in contact with perfumes. There is no reason why it shouldn't get a kind word now and then, since it carries on the purposes for which it was created.

Among noses that do not qualify for pulchritude honors are the saddle back, the bulbous, the humped and twisted ones. These can be remodelled by means of plastic surgery, which really works miracles in correcting facial defects. A woman contemplating this project should be consult her family physician, have him recommend a reliable specialist. Time was when many many charaltans, unskilled and unreliable, plied their trade with disastrous results, but medical associations have dealt with them and now they are few and far between.

Noses have their minor good-looks griefs, the commonest being a shine, that seems never to depart. The cause is a diet that contains too much fat, stimulating the sebaceous glands so that they send forth an excessive amount of oil. Laying an astringent helps for the time being to produce the dull finish.

A red nose should be treated to nightly applications of oitment of zinc oxide; though, if it stubbornly refuses to take on normal coloring, it is wise to consult a medical man who specializes in diseases of the skin and scalp. Some infection may be on the way.

Blackheads on the nose will sometimes disappear if a solution of baking soda is applied freely twice a day.

SISTERS ALL

By JEAN LOVE GALLOWAY

The big jump in Canada's population and the increased public recognition of the value of medical services in saving lives are both making overwhelming demands on the country's hospital services. . . . This effect is evident from the number of hospital building campaigns taking place in many large and small centres right across the country. People are being approached to contribute cash gifts to our hospitals to match the funds of government grants for new hospital additions.

For so many years now, Canadians have been hounded for money to build hospitals abroad and to assist destitute people in far away lands. While this is a fine thing to do, sometimes we think it has been overdone. It has come to the point where a person will gladly contribute cash to help improve an outmoded building far away, but he hesitates to give money to modernize the antiquated hospital at the end of his street.

How often we do not realize the needs of those close to us. We are so intent on looking afar off that we miss what lies at our very feet. It is said that Charity begins at home. While nobody would like to see Canadians stop assisting the destitute abroad, it is good to see that more good works are being wrought right in the home town . . . For no greater cause could there ever be than the building of a modern hospital here at home to ease the suffering of those who are in pain.

Easy, Cheap Too

The plastic people are on their toes all right. They've even designed a pretty cover and skirt for an orange crate. The cover comes in one piece in various colors at about $1.50. This means that with two orange crates and a wall mirror, you can fix up a natty little twin dressing table for only $3 . . . The orange crate too, makes a practical towel cupboard for the bathroom or utility box for the kitchen.

Velvet Protection

So much silk velvet is being worn in dress clothes this season, it's a good time to mention one way of preventing the seat of your velvet skirt from wearing flat. That's the idea of wearing a small, thin rubber kitchen apron tied around the waist back to front under your skirt. This apron keeps the velvet nap from smoothing out under the weight of the body.

* * *

They Also Ran

They think of everything. A shoe maker has dreamed up the new "floating steppers." These are transparent plastic slippers with steep, hollow plastic platform soles. The soles are filled with water to enable a couple of tiny live goldfish to swim around under each of milady's tootsies. The shoes were displayed at the National Shoe Convention in Chicago.

If these shoes were worn on the street, the little Miss might find herself in a similar position to the Pied Piper of Hamelin, except that instead of the rats, all the pussy cats would follow her wherever she went.

Witness Says Govt. Has No Factual Evidence

Ottawa, Dec. 1 (CP) —A prominent Canadian retail merchant yesterday described the methods by which the MacQuarrie report on resale maintenance was prepared as "disgraceful" and "scandalous."

H. A. Harris of Windsor, Ont., vice-president of the Canadian Retail Federation, said the report urging the government to make price maintenance illegal has no factual evidence to back it up.

Recalled as a witness before parliament's special committee on retail price-fixing, Mr. Harris produced percentage figures on margins of profit on clothing items to prove that the margins on price-maintained items are lower than on those which are not.

Alleging that the MacQuarrie report had shown "no facts and figures," he maintained that such an important step as banning price maintenance—which would affect a large part of the economy—should not be considered until all these facts and figures are obtained.

1. Ellen Fairclough (PC-Hamilton West) was voted down 10 to 7 when she attempted to have the committee call a representative of the T. Eaton Co. Ltd., as a witness, and allow other members to call such other witnesses as they desired.

2. Mr. Harris, noting that the T. Eaton Co., was not opposed to government legislation, said there are eight other concerns which are in the same category, but an "overwhelming" majority of retail merchants are definitely opposed.

Of the eight, six had agreed to have their names made public. They are: Henry Morgan Co. Ltd., Montreal; Murphy-Gamble Ltd., Ottawa; N. H. Gowdy, Kitchener; Calp's, Saint John, N.B.; Johnstone-Walker Ltd., Edmonton; C. J. Eames and Son Ltd., Hamilton, Ont.

3. The committee agreed to finish public hearing next Thursday and began studying a draft bill against price maintenance on Friday.

Mr. Harris said if price maintenance were eliminated, some prices would come down, but eventually the small business man would be forced out by larger concerns, the price reductions would be temporary and in the long run prices would be pushed by the large concerns to a higher level.

Quick Thinking Of Conductor Averts Disaster

Kalamazoo, Mich., Dec. 1—(CP) —The quick work of a conductor helped avert a major disaster yesterday when all 10 cars of a Michigan Central Express train were set ablaze by flaming fuel after a collision with a fuel-oil truck.

The conductor, Wesley Kehrier, of Detroit, calmly directed 275 passengers aboard "The Michigan" to safety through the rear of the Detroit-to-Chicago train.

Six persons were injured, two critically, in the collision. And a retired railroad conductor passing by died of a heart attack in the excitement.

The flaming fuel spewed over a wide area and set three homes bordering the tracks aflame.

Money and Public Two Big Problems

Toronto, Dec. 1 — (CP) — Money and the public are two big problems for the Health League of Canada.

George M. Black, Jr., president of Canadian Breweries, told the 32nd annual convention of the league yesterday: "Business men are profoundly alarmed and disturbed by the great multiplicity of appeals that are made upon their treasuries and their time."

He urged the setting up a "central fund-raising body" and a "central control board" to cut down the "appalling waste" in duplication of appeals for funds.

Mayor J.E. Ayrhart Presented With Life-Size Portrait

Campbellford — Mayor J. E. Ayrhart received a lift size head and shoulders portrait, from Mr. Sam Dudley, Cities Service Oil Co. representative at the regular meeting of the Rotary Club. The event was the culmination of a program, "Ontario Marches On", broadcast on July 11th over a network of Canadian stations by the company.

In tribute to the smaller places, Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings, the Company presents a short program, and gives the history, location and other information as well as a personal sketch of the chief executive. Mayor Ayrhart was presented with a portrait by the famous Canadian artist, Egbert C. Reid.

In response to the presentation, the Mayor thanked Mr. Dudley and the Cities Service Oil Co., for the favor. He said that while away from home, he had done all he could to publicize his home town in a favorable manner. He said that he looked for steady progress in Campbellford. His car had been placed at the disposal of the Royal Couple. When presented with the wool coat on behalf of Campbellford, purchased by Mr. Ayrhart, the Princess' only remark was, "Fabulous".

He said that it is a signal honor to receive his portrait from Cities Service Oil Co., and that it would appear on his office wall adjacent to an aerial view of Campbellford which now adorns the spot.

Lynn Bradley introduced Mr. Dudley who in turn called on Mayor Ayrhart.

Deputy Minister of Defence Says Things Are Not Going Particularly Well in Korea

Ottawa, Dec. 1 (CP) —Brig. C. M. Drury, Canada's deputy minister of National Defence, said last night things are not going particularly well in Korea.

"There are disquieting signs that it may not be the intention of the communists to negotiate an armistice," he said.

"While our forces in Korea have not been getting any substantial strengthening, the opposing forces have shown signs of growth in strength and there are some disquieting indications that they are getting organized to fight a well-planned and well-supported offensive," he said.

Brig. Drury spoke at the St. Andrew's dinner of the officers of the Cameron Highlanders of Ottawa.

Communist artillery support was strengthening and a "a very substantial build-up is occurring in the air. While we are getting considerable experience in jet fighter operations, similarly our opponents are acquiring valuable experience."

"Fortunately, if an offensive does take place we are in strong defensive positions, but it would be a little optimistic to look for an early end. . . to hostilities," the deputy minister said.

Last Wednesday's cease-fire was not ordered from this continent "but I suspect that from some high level in Korea some officer did suggest a "go slow."

Speaking of military preparedness in Canada, Brig. Drury urged the brigade group now being established would, if war comes, be augmented "and the only practical form of augmentation would be to raise it to a division. Following that there would have to be another division mobilized and these divisions would come from the reserves."

There was a certain feeling of unreadiness and frustration in the reserves "which must also affect those in the regular forces."

Syracuse, N.Y., Dec. 1 (AP)—Youngsters have been keeping the wires to Santa's headquarters so hot tha tfuses in central headquarters of the Telephone Company burned out. P-C's Make Slight Advance In Election

St. John's, Nfld., Dec. 1 — (CP) — Progressive Conservatives made a slight advance on Premier Joseph Smallwood's Liberal government yesterday to assure them of four seats in the next legislature. They held five seats in the last house.

Three districts are still to be heard from.

Peter Cashin, Newfoundland's veteran political campaigner, won the St. John's West riding as a Progressive Conservative. It was a territory held by the Liberals before the Newfoundland general election on Nov. 26.

J. J. Spratt, provincial affairs minister in the Smallwood government, went down to defeat in the St. John's East riding. Another minister, O. L. Vardy, was re-elected.

In other areas, Liberals continued to make gains. Patrick Canning was re-elected in Placentia West, to make a total of 20 Liberal wins. Progressive Conservatives have won four seats in the 28-seat house.

Company Will Give Service Despite Strike

New York, Dec. 1—(AP)—The Prudential Insurance Company, scheduled to have a strike today by 15,000 agents in 34 states, says it is prepared to service its customers by mail.

As a two-year contract expired last midnight, an official for the Insurance Agents' International Union (A. F. L.) said all Prudential property will be picketed. However, picketing is not expected to start before Monday.

Federal mediation has failed to bring about a truce in the dispute.

The agents are demanding a raise in basic pay from $35 to $55 a week.

Prudential's president, Carroll M. Shanks said such a boost would cost the company $35,000,000 a year. He said the agents now average more than $99 a week, counting commissions.

A union official said the average agent's salary is not more than $93.

The projected walkout would effect 28,000,000 policy-holders from coast to coast and from Canada to the Gulf of Mexixco.

Shanks said all offices would remain open and essential services would continue. Policyholders could mail in their payments or bring them to local offices.

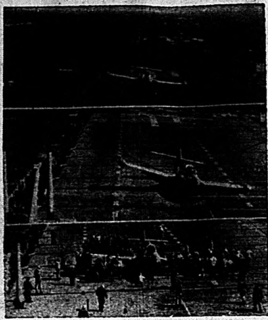
Lands on One Wheel and a Prayer



One of his landing wheels knocked out of commission by red shrapnel over Korea, U.S. jet pilot Lieut. Robert Lawrence succeeded in landing safely on the pitching flight deck of the "Bon Homme Richard." Increasing the hazard, his radio was out, and he had to rely on his wingman's visual hand signals to hit the deck. At top, the jet touches the deck on one centre wheel and a nose wheel. In centre, hook snags arresting wire and the left wing begins to topple. At bottom, crewmen check the damaged jet's gear. — Central Press Canadian.

Geologist Said To Have Escaped

Berlin, Dec. 1 — (AP) — The West German newspaper Die Welt said today the chief geologist of Russia's uranium mining project in east Ger. had fled to Berlin. It said he has been taken to a secret place in western Europe."

Die Welt identified him as Lt.-Col. Fedya Nikolayevitch Astachov, a Stalin prize-winner in charge of planning in the Soviet Wismuth A. G. Company in the Russian zone since 1947.

The newspaper gave neither the source nor the time of Astachov's reported flight to the west. It could not be confirmed elsewhere.

The Wismuth Company operates a number of uranium ore mines in the south-eastern corner of the east zone, near the Czechoslovakian border.

Americans in contact with anti-Stalin Soviet groups in west Germany said a "defector of colonel's rank" is known to have fled from the east zone recently.

Western Intelligence Reports Soviet Satellite Armies Growing by Leaps and Bounds

Rome, Dec. 1—(AP) — Russia may not have increased her own armed forces lately, but the armies of her satellites are growing by leaps and bounds, western intelligence sources report.

One informant for a western power which keeps close tab on the iron curtain countries says Bulgaria has built up an army of between 160,000 and 180,000 men, spearheaded by some 500 tanks.

That would be three times the 55,000-man limit set by Bulgaria's peace treaty with the allies after the Second World War.

The Bulgarian air force has been converted to MIG-15, jets, the fighter plane which has proved so effective in Korea, the informant said.

This same informant said little Albania, now in the throes of a depression, has managed to build up an armed force of between 60,000 and 80,000 men.

He reported that Albania lacks Bulgaria's tanks and heavier armament, but the army is tough, well-trained and in good spirits. As in Bulgaria, troops are accorded special favors not granted the rest of Albania's people.

Western sources say the Russians have not been increasing their own forces, but the satellite armies have been strengthened recently.

The training level of both the Russian and satellite armies has been steadily improving, these informants say.

Russia herself is believed to have an army of between 165 and 175 divisions with almost one-third of them fully motorized or armored.

Present dispositions of the Soviet, Bulgarian, Albanian and other satellite armies do not seem to indicate any military strike is in the making, according to this in-

4986 Soldiers On Active Service Cast Their Votes

Toronto, Ont., Dec. 1 (CP)—Four thousand nine hundred and eighty-six Ontario men on active service with the armed forces cast votes in the Nov. 22 Ontario election.

Chief election officer, Alex Lewis, said today the results for each constituency were telegraphed to the 90 returning officers in the province Thursday. They did not change the results from the election-night count in which the Progressive Conservatives were returned to power with 79 of the 90 seats. Liberals won seven seats, C.C.F. two, Liberal-Labor one and Labor-Progressive (communist) one.

The service men — stationed in camps in Canada and serving overseas in Korea, Japan and Germany — voted strongly for the two old parties, Progressive Conservative and Liberal. They cast 2,282 votes for the Progressive Conservatives, 46 per cent; 2,004 for the Liberals, 40 per cent; 657 for the C.C.F., 13 per cent; 43 for others, one per cent.

The civilian vote percentages were: Progressive Conservative, 49; Liberal, 31; C.C.F., 19, others, 1.

THE MAYOR'S REPORT TO THE CITY OF BELLEVILLE

It is with genuine regret, that due to certain circumstances, I cannot offer myself as candidate for re-election to the office of Mayor, of the City of Belleville at this time, but in view of your overwhelming support of my candidature a year ago, I feel it encumbent upon me, to make a report of my stewardship.

You will recall, that I based my appeal for your support on certain specific points, and I would like to respectfully report on the action your Council took, in dealing with the salient features of my platform.

TAXES:

I could not promise a reduction in the tax rate but I did promise an honest endeavour to have something to show for your money. Actually, the tax rate was reduced one-half mill and this, at a time when wages and prices continued to rise. All the Civic Employees were given a wage increase, in the form of a cost of living bonus. An additional $8,000.00 was spent on the Department of Health. $7,500.00 was spent on an increase in the Recreational Facilities and whereas the 1950 Council, showed a deficit of approximately $15,000.00 over the budget, this year we have stayed within the budget.

INCINERATOR:

In 1947, a contract was signed by the City of Belleville for the construction of an incinerator but due to the muddling and procrastination, no construction was undertaken. This year, the status of your City regarding the contract was investigated and an alternative method of garbage disposal was considered. With the approval of the Department of Sanitation and in accordance with established practice elsewhere, the disposal of garbage by what is known as Sanitary Fill Method, was approved by Council. We are now awaiting a satisfactory settlement of the contract, for the incinerator, before proceeding with the new method. It is worthy of note, that the present so called Industrial Site is mostly swamp and it is anticipated, that the Sanitary Fill Method of garbage disposal will reclaim this property in addition to saving the Tax Payers approximately $200,000.00

SEWAGE DISPOSAL:

A meeting was held with the Sanitary Engineer of the Province, at which time, it was pointed out to your Council, that we must be prepared to arrange for sewage disposal in the not too distant future and we were advised, to employ a consultant engineer to make a preliminary survey in accordance with our present needs and with probable City expansion. This is being done.

STORM SEWERS:

Have been laid on Catherine and Russell Streets and a plan of the City, is being completed regarding any further storm sewer construction.

EQUALIZATION OF ASSESSMENT:

An out of town expert Assessor, was engaged to review any inequalities in assessment. As a result of this review, the total assessment, of the City of Belleville was increased by approximately one million dollars which is equivalent to a reduction of three mills on your taxes.

COUNTY HOME:

A review of the suitability of this building, for a convalescent Hospital was undertaken and as a result of numerous meetings with the Department of Health, at Queen's Park, it was definitely decided that its conversion to a Hospital Building was unwise, but the Minister of Health arranged that the $100,000.00 which the Government had contributed to the purchase of the County Home, could be transferred to the Hospital Building Fund. An effort is being made to dispose of this property.

PUBLIC HEALTH:

In accordance with the wishes of the voters, a By-law was passed expanding the Health Department.

During my term of office, the various departments of the City have operated under the direct control of the City Comptroller, with Committees of Council, advising Council as a whole on policy. This method has entirely eliminated carping interference, by any Member of Council, including the Mayor and the effect of pressure has been nullified.

In conclusion, I wish to pay tribute to the co-operation I have received from your Council, during the year. It is due to their earnestness and endeavours that so much has been accomplished.

Left is a view of the packed floor at 10.10 a.m., about half an hour before the alarm. At right, a view of the floor at 10.43, while the bulls and bears were still under cover with only a warden occupying the floor. Officials said the test was a big success. — Central Press Canadian.

U.S. Army Sergeant William I. Roten dangles in mid-air, with his parachute snarled in a tree-top, after he parachuted from a crippled super-bomber on which he was an observer. Sergt. Roten was brought down via ladder. After circling for more than six hours in the B-36, 16 crewmen parachuted safely and the pilot and co-pilot and engineer brought the giant down in a heavy rain for a smooth landing on a damaged landing gear. The crew was ordered to bail out after a conference of officers, who anticipated a crash landing. The series of jumps, the first for most of the men, began at 4 p.m., and 32 minutes later the three remaining crewmen landed the plane. The trouble was discovered shortly after the bomber took off on a training mission from a Texas airfield. — Central Press Canadian.

THE SHIP'S CAPTAIN is not content to steer his course by what he sees of the iceberg in the distance. He knows that seven-eighths of the berg is below water and plenty of room must be allowed for the unseen.

When you are a patient or visitor in a hospital, you see only a fraction of the service that goes to make folks well and strong again.

There is a host of unseen people — X-ray and laboratory technicians, dietitians, medical records librarians, nursing assistants, orderlies, laundry workers, housekeepers, office and maintenance staffs, stationary engineers, electricians, carpenters and others — making up the team that gives the patient the care and comfort needed at the most critical time of his life — when illness or accident strike.

Our hospitals do not display much of what they do for the sick of the community. We, as citizens, owe a great deal to these non-profit public institutions which, in the face of inflationary times, are doing everything possible to give us, at low cost, priceless life and health.

Junior Hawks Swamp Kingston Vics at Memorial Arena 11-3; Losers Outbumped, Outplayed

By MAURICE REID

The Belleville Black Hawk Juniors outskated, outbumped, out played and most important, outscored the visiting Kingston Vics at the Memorial Arena last night to win an 11-3 victory in a regularly scheduled Junior B fixture.

Never behind after the two-minute mark, the Hawks played by far their best game to date in compiling a total of 24 scoring points. DeGray led the point parade with four, getting one goal and three assists. "Paddy" Gilmour was top goal-getter with three while Strahan and Lalonde each tallied twice, as well as assisting on another. "Sonny" Therrien got a goal and two assists.

All of the Hawk team played well in a fine co-ordinated effort, the best of their three games played, and appeared to have the edge in every department over the passless Vics. Passes were clicking to perfection and each player seemed to be in the right place at the right time.

Vics Opened Scoring

Vics opened the scoring at the 18 second mark when D. Senior put Reid's pass into the wide open corner of the Hawk net. Strahan got that one back quickly however on a set-up by DeGray. Lalonde put the Hawks in front to stay at 3:24 on a pass that was meant for Stranan but was deflected in to the net by a Kingston player. Gilmour fired a pair before the period's end, the second of which was fired from a prone position.

The Hawks had three men in the penalty box at one time during the first frame and the delayed penalty rule was used whereby a team is allowed the use of four men. Brown, Green and Doran checked the Vic attack effectively and kept them off the scoresheet.

Therrien, on a lovely solo effort, started the scoring in the second frame, breaking from centre and manouvering around the defence, and drew Senior to one side of the twine. Scores by Strahan and Gilmour were incidental to the other attractions during the period, namely heavy-checking, roughing and fighting.

Game Handled Well

Referee Louis Lecompte handled the situation very commendably on different occasions as tempers flared and fights were prevalent. Brown, Mulholland and Wilson were the main offenders although several other players escaped unnoticed in the scramble. Mulholland appeared to come out second best in his encounter with Brown, the former being on the bottom and suffered a cut cheek and bruised eye. Tozer scored for Vics in the final minute of play.

Both teams settled down to play better hockey in the final frame with play being more evenly divided during the opening minutes of play. Chevrefils banged Montgomery's pass into the net early in the period for the Vics last look at the red light.

Helpless Around the Net

Once again the Hawks had three men in the penalty box and once again the Vics were helpless around the net with the Hawk defence and Barclay playing well.

Lalonde, DeGray, Munroe and Carey were lamplighters for the homesters, all scoring as the result of two and three-way combinations. It was a perfect illustration of co-ordinated team effort.

P. Hegarty, Reid and Montgomery were the pick of the visiting Vics, the latter playing a particularly heady game.

The Teams:—

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

New York, Dec. 1 — (AP) — Jack Pearson, Duke University lacrosse coach, has organized a winter "forum" and exhibition of this old Indian form of mayhem to take place at Palm Beach, Fla., during the Christmas holidays ... About 20 good players, mostly from sedate eastern institutions, will take part at their own expense . . . There's no overlapping of seasons at Notre Deme . . . today's final football game at Southern California figures to end about seven p. m., Midwest time, and Johnny Jordan's basketballers won't start their opening game against St. Thomas until 8...

The Bitter Half

Wayne University's Lou Zarza argues that the coaches aren't the only ones who suffer during the football season — sometimes the wives experience even greater mental anguish . . . For instance, Lou took some scouting reports on Washington University to bed to read as a substitute for a murder story . . . He dozed off and his wife, Genevieve picked up the reports . . . She became so distressed reading about fast halfbacks, great tackles and huge guards that she didn't get to sleep that night . . . Lou had to pass a "no peeking" rule.

Weak End Notes

Maurice (Rocket) Richard's kid sister, Margot, is an usherette at all the Canadiens' home games. Like the Rocket, she specializes in putting 'em in the right place . . . Dale Ranson, North Carolina track coach who trained his runners to the accompaniment of recorded music last winter, now grumbles: "I'll trade the gramophone and all my records for two good milers."

Remember When

(By The Canadian Press)

Hamilton Tigers, with one of eastern Canada's most powerful football teams in years, defeated Sarnia Imperials 23-2 for the eastern title 16 years ago today. That 1935 Tiger team was the victim of the west's first Grey Cup victory later, Winnipeg winning 18-12.

Most Interest Will be Centred In Southwest

New York, Dec. 1—(AP)—Remember the day when every football fan in the country would be waiting for the returns of the final big Saturday of the season —especially the Army-Navy and Notre Dame-Southern California results?

Well, the four schools are back in business at the old stand today, but the results won't affect the top of the national rankings, except for Trojans, none has impressive records.

Rather, most of the interest will centre on the southwest conference where the race traditionally goes right down to the wire. Here it is Dec. 1 and the Cotton Bowl host has not been decided.

That honor goes to the southwest conference champion. Any of three teams might make it, but at the moment Texas Christian, which for a while looked almost out of the running, is favored. All the horned frogs have to do is lick Southern Methodist today.

Here are the records of the three: T. C. U. 4-1, Baylor 3-1-1, and Rice 3-2.

Navy is the favorite over Army by eight points, although there doesn't seem to be much to choose between them. Both have defeated Columbia. Navy has tied Yale and Army has defeated the Citadel.

Still, more than 100,000 spectators will crowd into Philadelphia's Municipal Stadium for the proceedings lured to some extent by the parades and pageant of the game. Last year Army was the favorite and Navy won it, 14-2.

Notre Dame is in the underdog spot against Southern California, even though the Trojans have lost three against two for the Irish. Southern Cal has dropped its last two games but has been impressive through most of the season.

Yankees Drop Tommy Henrich As Base Coach

New York, Dec. 1—(AP)—Old reliable Tommy Henrich, a familiar figure around the Yankee Stadium since 1937, will be among the missing in 1952.

The Yanks dropped Henrich as a coach yesterday because of the former star-outfielder's unavailability to work outside the metropolitan area. Henrich and former Yankee George Stirnweiss are distributors for a beer company.

Henrich was signed by the Yanks for a $25,000 bonus in 1937 after Commissioner Landis declared him a free agent from the Cleveland organization. He retired after the 1950 season following a knee injury.

Cleveland Browns Have Chance To Wrap up Title

New York, Dec. 1 — (AP) — Cleveland Browns — gunning for their sixth straight championship —and Detroit Lions — looking for their first crown in 16 years — headline Sunday's National Football League card.

Cleveland has a chance to wrap up the league's American-division title. Browns' victory over the weak Chicago Cardinals, plus a New York Giant defeat, will give the Browns the diadem. The Giants entertain Pittsburgh Steelers.

The Lions, enjoying a slim lead over Chicago Bears and Los Angeles Rams, clash with the San Francisco 49ers in Detroit. The Bears and Rams collide at Chicago and the loser figures to be eliminated from the race.

The Lions last won the N.F.L. title in 1935 when they trounced the Giants in the playoffs, 26-7.

Detroit is led by Doak Walker, Bobby Lane, Bob Hoernschemeyer and Leon Hart. The team has piled up 285 points in eight games. The 49ers hope to stop Detroit with a strong defence and ground game with John Strzykalski, Joe Perry and Werle Lilly White the main cog.

The winless Yanks figure to post their first victory at Green Bay's expense. The last time the two met the Packers won out on a field goal in the last 11 seconds.

Flashy Marlies In Second Place Behind Biltmores

(By The Canadian Press)

Toronto's flashy Malboro Juniors have finally been forced to take a seat in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A race. Guelph Biltmores are the men of the hour.

The high-flying Hatters hoisted themselves right up into first place last night with a convincing 11-1 win over the tail-end Windsor Spitfires. The victory gives them a one-game lead over the second-place Marlies, but don't underestimate the Toronto club—they hold three games in hand over the present league leaders.

In other Junior O.H.A. tussles played last night, Barrie Flyers broke a four-game losing streak by downing Galt Black Hawks 3-1 in Barrie while the fifth-place Kitchener Greenshirts had to be satisfied with an overtime 2-2 draw with Oshawa Generals at Kitchener.

In the O.H.A. Senior A Wares Stratford Indians increased their league lead over Hamilton Tigers by drubbing the Bengals 8-3 right in Hamilton. Owen Sound Mercurys delighted a home-town crowd by downing Sarnia Sailors 5-1 while Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen managed to edge Brantford Redmen 3-2 in Brantford.

Sudbury Miners took over third place in the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior A puck war last night as they held tail-end North Bay Black Hawks 2-1, the Hawks' fifth straight loss.

At Guelph, the Biltmores scored virtually at will in swamping the Spitfires 11-1. Their only trouble was encountered in the inspired goaltending of little Marv Brewer in the Windsor nets. Brewer kicked out no less than 60 shots during the game, 31 of them in the final period.

Big Goal-Getter

Chuck Henderson was the big goal-getter for the winners, scoring four times. Billy McCreary tallied three times and Ron Murphy collected two. Andy Bathgate and Dean Prentice garnered singletons. Joe Zorica scored Windsor's lone marker.

In breaking their four-game losing streak with that 3-1 win over Galt Black Hawks, Hap Emms' Barrie Flyers looked anything but impressive. It was again a story of goaltending as Lorne Howes kicked aside 40 shots while the winners could direct only 22 on the Galt net.

Kitchener staved off defeat with a third-period goal for a 2-2 deadlock which even overtime failed to break. The Oshawa Generals shaded the home club in every period, but failed to capitalize on their play.

Flanagan Leads Stratford

Denny Flanagan led Stratford Indians to their 8-3 Senior O.H.A. win over Hamilton Tigers with three goals. Mickey Roth, George Aitken, Larry Lemenchick, Bruce Burdett and Ron Heinbuck scored singletons.

Fred Pankoski and Murray Comfort, two goals each, were the Hamilton snipers.

At Owen Sound it was Mike Bukacheski, Gino Antoniazzi, Andy Grant, Roy Leckie and Joe Ripku who scored for the Mercurys in their 5-1 win over Sarnia Sailors. Bill Savage notched Sarnia's lone counter.

Walt Hnatiuk gave Brantford Redmen a 1-0 second period lead over Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen in their game, but a penalty to Johnny Holota allowed the roof to fall in. Mike Dzuira, Jack Pernfuss and Harry Psutka gave the Dutchmen a lead they never reliquished.

Spoils Shutout

North Sudbury Miners took a 2-0 lead on goals by Tug Parri and Andy Mantha for the winning edge in their Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior A clash. Fred Valenti spoiled the Sudbury shutout late in the third period.

Tonight's O.H.A. Junior A schedule carries a full slate of five games. Marlboros move into St. Catharines while Kitchener is at Windsor and St. Michael's heads for Waterloo. Galt entertains Guelph while Oshawa plays host to Barrie.

Ernie Durando Earns a Draw With Paddy Young

New York, Dec. 1 — (AP) — The Paddy Young-Ernie Durando "world series" goes into fight No. 4 on January 4 over the 12-round distance.

This thing can become a habit. But the 5,056 who paid $18,073 to see last night's bristling 10-round middleweight draw at Madison Square Garden won't complain. They'd like to see that kind of fight every week.

This is a good old-fashioned rock-pegging contest between the blond youngster from New York's Greenwich Village and 25-year-old Durando from Bayonne, N.J.

All even after three wars with one win each and a draw, they hope to settle their differences in January with the winner to get a non-title date with middleweight champion Sugar Ray Robinson. Last night Young weighed 158½, Durando 156½.

Durando's co-manager, Louis Laico, was suspended for using rough language but he probably considers it's worth while. Durando, stung by the tongue-lashing, rushed into a ninth-round rally that almost knocked out Paddy. He was trailing at the end of eight.

One-Third of NHL Season Goes by Boards This Weekend; Leafs 6 Points Behind Wings

(By The Canadian Press)

Now that football folks can get down to serious hockey matters—and would you believe it, but one-third of the National Hockey League schedule goes by the boards this weekend—they are face to face with this early-December situation:

Detroit and Toronto are in the one-two slots with Montreal and Boston (a somewhat lofty spot for the Bruins), New York and Chicago following in that order. The pattern has been followed so closely the last couple of years, the N. H. L. is becoming a two-division league.

Things won't change materially in the first division (Detroit and Toronto) this weekend but there may be some shuffling around among the other four teams.

Toronto, six points behind the pace-setting Red Wings, has a doubleheader. Tonight they have a date at home with New York Rangers and Sunday the Stanley Cup champions take on the Red Wings at Detroit. A double victory for the Leafs still would leave them two points behind Jack Adams' crew.

Only three points separate the third-place Canadiens and last-place Chicago Black Hawks and anything can happen in this group.

The Canadiens, who broke a three-game losing streak with a big 5-1 victory over Toronto on Thursday, have a home date with the Hawks tonight. New York completes its weekend with a Sunday game at Chicago.

Hugh Bolton of the Leafs, one of the top candidates for this season's N. H. L. rookie award, is expected to be patched up sufficiently to be able to play tonight against the Rangers, the only team the Toronto club hasn't beaten this season.

One new face with the New York club is that of Herb Dickenson, a harness horse driver in Ontario in the off-hockey season. The 20-year-old forward was brought up from the Rangers' Cincinnati farm team in the American hockey league and has been hitting a goal-a-game clip since his promotion.

ALL GUESTS ESCAPE

Uniontown, Pa., Dec. 1—(AP)—Fire swept two floors of the four-storey Beeson Hotel early today. All guests escaped—thanks to the heroic action of a middle-aged night clerk, Oscar Kelly.

Kelly discovered the fire at 3:50 a.m. as smoke began pouring from the basement.

"Oscar turned in the fire alarm, then ran from room to room awakening the 20 to 25 guests," Fire Chief W. H. Raffle said. He estimated damage at $20,000.

Take It Easy When Hunting, Fishing

By JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT

(Noted Sportsman, Author and Creator of Solunar Tables)

After strenuous poling for an hour or so up through the heavy rapids of the Jacques Cartier River, Quebec, we had beached the canoes at the foot of Rapide du Pain, the first portage. I swung a pack basket to my shoulders and eased the shoulder straps to make them comfortable. Then I picked up my fly rods and my tackle kit.

Before I had taken ten steps, I felt the pack basket seized from behind. "All right, Jack, put it down. You can carry one fly rod if you want to; maybe you'll want to fish while we are waiting for the guides."

"Listen," I said. "I'm able-bodied and healthy. What's one pack basket?"

"It's one pack basket too many. Be sensible. You sit at a desk in an office eleven months of the twelve. (I was a banker then.) Then you come up into the woods. You are not used to heavy work. One slip and you may sprain a joint or pull a tendon. That will take all the fun out of your fishing trip.

Sensible Advice

"These guides are hired to pole and paddle canoes, lug gear, and generally look out for us. We are here for fun, not to work. They are used to heavy work; we are not. Relax, my boy; string up a fly rod, and let's take our time on the trail."

That line of reasoning makes sense. After all, a guide is paid to do exactly what he does—paddle the canoe, make camp, carry gear, build fires, cook meals, and so on. That is his business and it is work to which he is accustomed and for which he is physically fitted. An office man, who goes on a fishing or shooting trip for pastime and relaxation, simply has no business doing strenuous paddling, lugging gear or doing camp chores.

Muscles which are not used frequently tend to become somewhat atrophied, whether a man realizes it or not. Lack of use slows down coordination, and injuries around camp and on the trail are all too common. Be smart; let the guides do the heavy work.

Unlike most men, the nature of my work takes me into the outdoors almost every day of the year, usually fishing or shooting. In other words, I lead an active, outdoor life. The fact remains, however, that I do not habitually carry heavy loads or do strenuous physical labor. Why then, should I attempt to do so on a fishing trip?

Hunting Hard Work

If you will watch the newspaper accounts during the deer season this year, you will see the usual number of reports of death from heart failure in the woods or at the hunting camps. Deer hunters, for some reason, simply will not realize that they are getting along in years and are no longer in condition for strenuous effort. Their circulatory systems are not geared for the rigors of the trail. They forget this vital truth and, in the excitement of the moment, they overexert. Then we read one more sad accounting in the pages of our newspapers.

7-DAY WOODSMAN

Every man who goes in for the outdoor sports usually "has his warning" by the time he reaches the age of 50. I had mine one spring when I was helping the hatchery men stock a trout stream. Two of us had carried a washtub, filled with water and trout, down a steep hill to the stream.

That was heavy work and I found myself puffing with fatigue when we reached the stream. On the return trip up the hill I tried to go too fast. By the time I reached my car my old pump was turning handsprings and I had trouble breathing.

It was a good hour before my interior workings functioned normally once more and the experience gave me a good scare. My doctor said that the cardiograph showed no damage done but he cautioned me against repeat performances. Now I take it easy and let younger legs run in to give gun support when the dog goes on point.

Deaths From Heart Failure

Statistics show us that for every 300,000 people there will be an average of 3½ deaths by accident each week. Last year there were about 300,000 deer hunters in Wisconsin and of this number 10 died from heart failure. If my memory serves me correctly, and I think it does, there were 17 deaths from heart failure during the Pennsylvania deer season last year.

Last October I was hunting woodcock with an old friend. Our ages are about one month apart. We were climbing a hill on the way back to the car when he suggested that we stop for a breather.

"No use taking chances," he said. "My doctor gave me the rule. When you find yourself short of breath and puffing — stop right there. It is the last ten steps that do the real damage. Don't take those last ten until you are rested. Follow that rule and you will live a long time."

Each year in the deer camps and the upland gunning fields I see the same thing — overexertion on the part of men who are obviously out of condition. Most of this extra effort is needless.

It pays to hunt slowly, but, for some reason, it takes years for most men to learn that simple truth. Some never learn it.

Not Worth Risk

I see the whole business in this way. Fishing and shooting are pleasant, relaxing pastimes. We indulge in them for fun and to find healthful exercise. When I find either my fishing or my shooting taking on the aspects of a job of work they are no longer fun. All right, that is when I knock off and go home. One fish, bird or animal simply is not worth the risk that you run if you overexert.

Remember these things if you go deer hunting this season. It is not in the cards for a man to be an office worker all year long and then, for seven short days, be transformed into an active woodsman and mountaineer. Take it easy, brother; relax and refuse to hurry. You will live much longer if you do.

Apprentice Jock Severely Injured As Horse Falls

The 16-year-old rider, leading apprentice at the race meet, was taken to Providence Hospital in Oakland, Calif., with a brain concussion and a laceration over the right eye.

Last Wing fell rounding the first turn, in the clear at the time, pictures of the race showed the horse just couldn't stay afoot on the muddy curve. Last Wing broke a right foreleg and was destroyed.

Detroit Red Wings called up defenceman Bill Folk from their Indianapolis American League hockey farm yesterday. Folk, a rough 190-pounder, will take over from Benny Woit, who has missed the last two games because of a back injury.

General manager Charles Gehringer said last night that Dick Bartell will be tendered a contract as a coach for Detroit Tigers for the 1952 season. Bartell, 44, has been third base coach for the Tigers for three years.

Ed Stankiewicz, centre of the Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen of the Ontario Hockey Association senior circuit, will try out with St. Louis Flyers of the American Hockey League in two games this weekend. Stankiewicz, currently the leading goal scorer in the senior loop, will play in Cleveland tonight and in St. Louis Sunday.

The combined Olympics trials and Canadian boxing championships will be held here April 24-25-26, Syd Greenwood, secretary of the British Columbia branch of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada, announced last night at Vancouver.

At Kingston, Tillsonburg Trojans, a basketball team with ambitions of competing in next year's Olympics, last night beat Queen's University Seniors 69-32. After the second quarter, the visitors had things mostly their way. From the middle of the third quarter until 90 seconds before the final whistle, Tillsonburg kept Queen's from scoring.

Pete Karpuk, speedy backfielder of the Grey Cup winning Ottawa Rough Riders, yesterday went for another first down—down the aisle of Ottawa's Stewarton United Church with Rosemary Patricia MacGregor of Arnprior, Ont., as his bride.

At Potsdam, N.Y., Clarkson College opened its basketball season last night by trouncing McGill University of Montreal 67-43.

At Clinton, N.Y., Hamilton College downed University of Toronto 69-63 last night for its first basketball win since 1949. The Hamilton Cagers had lost 20 straight before last night's game.

Recreational Program In Belleville

1.—The objective of the Recreation Committee is to create and maintain recreation facilities and provide leadership and supervision in their full use for all age groups in Belleville.

2.—It is the earnest desire of the Recreation Committee to work harmoniously with all organizations who use these facilities.

3.—We mean by recreation, to provide and promote, playgrounds, rinks, athletic fields, drama and music, crafts and hobbies, picnic facilities, swimming facilities and eventually many other activities.

4.—In the past the creation, maintenance and supervision has been by uncertain financial support. The Recreation Committee received this year a grant from the City Council of approximately one-half mill. However the following has been accomplished.

(a) Nine playgrounds equipped, maintained and supervised, also the supervision supplied for the C.N.R. playground. These playgrounds had a registered attendance of 1,500 children.

(b) Facilities made available for Pee Wee softball, Pee Wee and Minor hardball and Minor soccer.

(c) Five outdoor rinks for hockey and skating erected and maintained.

5—Recreation Does Not End Here

To develop an all round recreational program there should be committees formed to head each facet of the recreational facilities. It is the hope that existing groups would form the basis of these committees. Each committee would be responsible for their program and budget. It is our intention to provide a fuller program with better facilities and supervision. With the continual growth of Belleville additional playgrounds are a necessity.

In order that your Recreation Committee may be able to promote and develop an all round recreational program it is necessary they have an annual guaranteed income, and the only way this is possible is for every taxpayer to vote in favor of the by-law granting one mill for Recreation purposes. This actually means an additional half mill more than the grant we received from the City Council this past year.

By BOB THOMAS

Out to Lockheed Airport, where Bob Hope was leaving on yet another tour. The plane was late and ski-nose had some time to chat.

"Imagine — me waiting for a plane!" he said. "Usually, it's the other way around." This time he was off to Bellaire, O., where he is premiering "My Favorite Spy" in the home of a contest-winning housewife.

Hope was elated about his latest TV show. But asked if he will give up radio, he said: "Are you kidding? Radio is legalized larceny. It's like taking the money away. But television—man, that is work! It's the hardest work I've ever done."

While waiting for the plane to arrive, Hope sat in the phone booth in the lobby, holding conversations and signing autographs. He talked longingly of getting back to his Palm Springs home for a rest. Tours were a lot of trouble, he opined. But as he left for the wide blue yonder, you could tell he was embarking on the kind of life he likes best.

Nature Film

To a special screening of "Earthquake Lake," film made by men who took part in Walt Disney's nature shorts. This picture goes a little further, being a full-length feature about a naturalist who visits the Reelfoot Lake country in Tennessee.

The story is slight, but the picture again proves that nature study can be fascinating film fare.

And A Party

Party of the week was NBC's blow-out to honor the debut of Dinah Shore's TV show. Among those attending the function at the Beverly Hills hotel were Ed Wynn, Herbert Marshall, Joan Crawford, Donald O'Connor, furniture maker George Montgomery and a new convertible from Dinah's sponsor.

WANT MORE PAY

New York, Dec. 1 (AP)—Private cartmen who pick up 65 per cent of the refuse in New York City and Nassau and Westchester counties were struck this morning by the Teamsters' Union (A.F.L.). About 600 big and little concerns are affected. The chief issue is pay demand.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

For Sunday, December 2

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—Very encouraging and benefic aspects today favoring urgent and essential tasks as well as home, family interests, and, of course, religious services. Enjoy a healthy hobby in free time.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—You have pleasant influences. Music, good reading, family gatherings, healthy sports among top sponsored. Start your day right by going to church and praying for world peace.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—Not all inspiring for mental work, bright ideas not so plentiful, but day on whole is generous, responsive to good deeds, aiding the ill and underprivileged, and for happy family doings.

June 22 to July 23—(Cancer)—Your Moon, also Venus and Jupiter in fine array offer pleasant, helpful rays for many activities, including wholesome pleasures. The arts sponsored. First, think of your soul's needs.

July 24 to August 22—(Leo)—Set aside unnecessary laborious work for a week-day; spend this day restfully (if possible), surely in good mood. Enjoy children, worthy social events, outdoor sports. Church first!

August 23 to September 23—(Virgo)—Interests and activities in conformity with Sunday highly sponsored now. Don't look for extra hard work. Essential duties don't neglect, but do also enjoy restful relaxation.

September 24 to October 23—(Libra)—Happy outlook if you spend some time praying, aiding charity, bringing cheer to lonely hearts. Some urgent duties can be done quicker, and without strain. Pray for our Armed Forces.

October 24 to November 22—(Scorpio)— Not too stimulating, which is very good for you often too active, on-the-go folks. It should be a "must" for you to take regular periods for quieting pastimes, complete rest.

November 23 to December 22—(Sagittarius)—Your Jupiter's favorable aspects augurs well for your interests, for personal benefits, gain in whatever is necessary to attend to today. Seek strength, comfort in prayer and rest.

December 23 to January 21—(Capricorn)—Unless in the service of our country, do not invite extra difficult or laborious work. Spend some time at a diversion from your usual routine. Take family to church.

January 22 to February 20—(Aquarius)—Mild, similar to Capricorn. Day can be usefully, cheerfully sent if you are co-operative and have thoughts on God and good deeds as well as comfort. Pray; perhaps study.

February 21 to March 20—(Pisces)— No "clouds" in your cheerful sky this friendly Sunday. Personal affairs, due business interests favored. Show gratitude to God for all blessings by praying, aiding others.

..YOU BORN TODAY: Strong characteristics. Among your best are ambition, determination, industriousness and diversified talent. There are some tenedencies to be curbed, of course: perhaps sharpness of speech, manner, quick temper, sometimes irritability at sugegstions. Study, improve constantly, aim high. Prayer, music, good reading are aids always.

Birthdate: Pierre Waldeck-Rousseau, Fr. statesman; Jesse Crawford, organist.

WHY WE SAY
LUCKY RABBIT'S FOOT 10-24

. . . A powder puff

Many people today carry a rabbit's foot as a symbol of good luck. The idea got prominent from show business where a rabbit's foot was used as a powder puff. If it was missing before the act, it held up preparations and was troublesome, but if the foot was there, everything could move along as planned.

The Outsiders

By Jane Abbott

Marilyn was stirring something in a bowl when he went into the kitchen. She gave him a quick, anxious look and he had a sudden inexplicable desire to put his arms around her and say it's all right Lyn."

But he said, "I have to drive up to see Miss Forrestal for a minute. Then I'm going to the hospital in Cranford. Why don't you come along with me? We'll pick up some lunch somewhere—make a day of it."

His head spinning, George Culbert examined his face in the mirror over the washbowl in a corner of his office. One cheek was beginning to discolor and to swell, his lips were swelling and one was bleeding, his jaw and nose hurt abominably— he could not be certain they were not broken. A string of oaths fell from his sore lips. Not all were directed at John Streeter—he was acutely aware he had been a fool to provoke the man's anger.

In his ears still rang the hoot of laughter that had come from the men standing at the gate. The beater crew. "I'll fix them," he muttered.

Any minute now Eliza Forrestal would drive into the yard. He caught up a towel, soaked it in cold water from the tap, held it to his face, muttering his curses through it.

He was sitting at his desk when she came in. She stopped at sight of him and exclaimed, "whatever has happened?"

He managed a semblance of a laugh. "You ought to see the other fellow."

"But who. . ."

"I had a run-in with one of the men. They're a tougher lot than you think and not above violence you see."

She came up to the desk, looked at his face with concern. "You should have Doctor Streeter take care of this right away! It may be worse than you think. . . But no, he's gone to Cranford to the hospital. He drove up to the house a half-hour ago to tell me that he and Doctor Cook thought Dave Wilson should stay in the hospital for a while. I told him that, of course, he must— until his hand is quite well."

Culbert drew a slightly easier breath. Though he could not imagine why Streeter had not spoken to Eliza of his earlier call on him, it made the situation a little less difficult.

He shook his head. "It isn't as serious as that. Anyway, I can't let my assailant think he damaged me any! Now, for the business of the day. I've been figuring out the cut in wages I spoke about the other day. It'll save enough to carry us along until things pick up."

Eliza interrupted him. "Do we have to decide about it now?"

He looked at her in some surprise, for she spoke a little wearily and he took it as meaning that she was beginning to find the affairs of the mill too much for her. But it offered exactly the moment he had been waiting for. "As a matter of fact, we don't. For this reason—I've heard from Bendley, himself—Morris, the big shot of the mills. He wants to come over here on Thursday with some others — come to us, mind you! You can bet I said 'Come along.' I took the liberty to tell him to drive up to your house. It'd be a rather more impressive setting than this two-by-four office of yours in the other shed. Thursday, three o'clock. Okay?"

Eliza nodded her head. He continued, "looks like they're ready to talk in figures—and fast. Are you willing to let me do the talking for our side of it?"

"You'll know more about it than I" said Eliza again with what seemed to the manager almost indifference. She got up from her chair. "I'm going to drive to Cranford—I want to buy some music. You're certain you will not let me take you to the hospital to have something done for your face?"

"Quite certain and thanks, my dear, for your concern. I'll try a slab of beefsteak on it—isn't that what you do? Run along, now. Some other time and soon we'll take a day off and go somewhere together." He got up from his chair, put his hand on her shoulder. "Maybe we'll have a cause to celebrate after Thursday."

He sat down again the instant she was gone, his hand going to his aching jaw. It had taken a heroic effort to hold on to himself before her, even to talk. But he considered he had done both very well. She had seemed different this morning—to have lost that confidence in herself that had annoyed him of late, made him watch his step. Only half of her mind had appeared to be taking in what he was saying, and such divided attention had played into his hands. He smiled in satisfaction but it made his lip begin to bleed again and he went to the washbowl to put the wet towel to it.

He'd see a doctor all right, but it wouldn't be Streeter or Cook. He would drive to Edgeborough. But before he went he'd attend to the little matter of firing the whole beater crew, for good and all. They could laugh then, the other side of their faces! Post it on the bulletin board outside of the digester shed so that every man in the mill would read it. He sat down again at his desk, one hand holding the towel to his mouth.

Eliza and Hespeth were watering the petunias by the kitchen door when they heard the bell begin to ring down in the valley.

"From the meeting house!" said Hespeth, surprise in her voice. "I haven't heard of any goings on, there!"

To Eliza the deep notes echoing up and down the valley had a somber sound. She felt a little inexplainable shiver go over her as she listened.

"'Tisn't fire," observed Hespeth. "Not the way it's ringing! Jesse Willis always rings the bell and he's one pull for fire and another for death."

"Perhaps it's a wedding," put in Eliza. "Did you water these at this end, Hespeth?"

But Hespeth was not to be distracted. She began to untie her apron. "Seems like it's calling to everybody. I'm going along down."

The bell pealed again, echoed and re-echoed. Eliza followed Hespeth into the kitchen. "I'll drive down, Hespeth."

They found the Meeting House full of men and women when they arrived there. There was left only a little space on a bench near the door and they squeezed into it. Hespeth nodded to the women who sat near them but Eliza sent her glance over the heads in front of her. Looking, she knew, for Chris Cameron. . .

She had not caught so much as a glimpse o fhim since she had left him on the rock the Sunday before. Driving to the mill and away from it she watched for him but, she told herself, and believed, it was to avoid an encounter with him. Just as now if she saw him sitting on one of the benches in front of her, she would slip out and wait for Hespeth in the car.

Tom Matthews stepped up to and upon the small rostrum of the Meeting House, the hum of voices ceased, the men on the front benches sat straighter. A stir of expectancy ran through the rows of women in the back of the room.

"You all know the why of this meeting," began old Tom, in his deep rumbling voice. "To say our say as free and self-respecting men. We don't like the way things are goin' here of late and we've a right to take some action on it. Soon's we're agreed what it's to be. Some of you've talked violence but that's for when peaceable way've failed."

The last caught Eliza's full attention. She guessed instantly that this meeting was in protest to the layoff. To which she had agreed! She felt the eyes of the women around her fixed on her accusingly and to avoid them she held her own on old Tom.

"No outsider'd have the run of the mill. . ." shouted another.

"There wouldn't be no laying off and a lot of us fired without reason!"

"Except that we laughed at the skunk when he go this pretface punched!"

They were speaking of the manager, Eliza knew. With hate, an active hate. . . She drew back on the bench, panic catching at her breath. They hated her, too, in the same way.

Old Tom was holding up his hand to command silence. "You all got a right to your say but stand on your feet when you say it, like you should at meetin."

Promptly a young man in the front row jumped to his feet, turned to the others. "My say's this and I'll speak for the whole lot of us." His voice rumbled like old Tom's. "We were laid off without pay because the beater broke down and why it broke down we all know. Next we're fired and we all know the why of that. My wife's going to have a baby any day now and I need the money I'm losing and the rest of you that got fired need yours, too. We could go elsewhere and get jobs, all right, go down to the mills at Edgeborough and get higher wages, but we don't want to. We want to stay here. We grew up here, and our fathers before us and their fathers, I guess, and we and they all have worked in the Forrestal Mill and it's like it belonged to them and to us, same as this valley here does. And we want to go on living and working here—giving fair labor in return for fair treatment, like it was when the old man was alive. So I say let's come out flat—write it all out and send it to Miss Forrestal—that not a man of us will set foot in a shed until she fires that manager."

A thunder of clapping checked the speaker. The women were clapping too. It beat against Eliza's ears in waves of hate and distrust. But now she felt a great indignation rising in her. It was not fair. To her own surprise she found herself on her feet. Hespeth put a hand on her arm to draw her back down on the bench but she shook it off. "Please—" She cried into the lin and again, louder, "please let me say something!"

The clapping stopped abruptly; every head in the room turned to her. Some muttering came from one of the benches but old Tom silenced it by a lift of his hand.

Eliza's knees shook under her but she stood straight, her head high. "My grandfather brought Mr. Culbert here and put him in charge of the mill. I have confidence that everything he does or has done is with the best interests of the mill in mind. If some have seemed unfair to you, why haven't you gone to him instead of meeting like this and—and threatening. . ."

A man's voice broke in. "Mebbe you don't know all he does, Miss Forrestal!"

"He sees smart to it, you don't," said another.

Young Matthews was on his feet again. "We're wasting good time, talking! Maybe Miss Forrestal trusts her works-manager, but we don't. And we know another reason to run him out of the valley and in the old days it'd be on a rail and him tarred and feathered, but as 'tis now, law's against it. My resolution stands as I said it. Call for ayes in it, Gramp, and Miss Forrestal will see we mean what we're saying. . ."

WHY I AM RUNNING FOR ALDERMAN

● FOR THE BENEFIT OF THOSE WHO WERE UNABLE TO ATTEND THE ELECTION MEETING IN THE COLLEGIATE AUDITORIUM, FRIDAY EVENING, I HAVE PLEASURE IN PUBLISHING HEREWITH THE TEXT OF MY ADDRESS DELIVERED AT THAT TIME.

MR. CHAIRMAN, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

First of all I should like to tell you I actually had no particular desire to be an Alderman of this City.

During the last few weeks, however, I have had several people suggest to me I should and could make a considerable contribution to Belleville, by being a member of the City Council.

With me, this reached the point where I felt it somewhat of an obligation to offer my services to you.

I do wish to make it perfectly clear, however, I am not sponsored by any group or groups political or otherwise.

Naturally, since I have decided to run for the position of an Alderman of this City, I would, of course, as I am sure you can all appreciate, prefer to be elected to office rather than to still be running after the election is over.

For this reason, I have been giving of the best of my ability to this campaign.

Some people have suggested to me I have been doing far more than necessary to be elected and I would certainly like to feel sure I could share their enthusiasm, however, any success which I have had in my own business, I feel sure, has been due to a large extent to the fact I have always given of the best of my ability to that job.

Since I do not wish to still be running after this election is over, I have given of the best of my ability, whether it be right or wrong, to my campaign this week.

Similarly, if I am elected to office Monday, I can assure you I shall always do my best to play my part in order to do what I can to help make this CITY, this COMMUNITY and this GREAT COUNTRY of OURS, a better place in which to LIVE and WORK and PLAY.

No, not only for ourselves alone.

But also and perhaps more particularly for our Children and our Children's Children.

BEHIND-LINES INSPECTION PROPOSED BY REDS

Canadian Destroyer Aids In Evacuating 400 Koreans

Washington, Dec. 3 — (CP) — A Chinese amphibious force drove South Korean guerillas off an island near the Yalu River mouth Friday in the face of opposition by four United Nations warships, including the Canadian destroyer Athabaskan.

The Athabaskan, along with the British cruiser Ceylon and destroyer Cockade, threw gunfire at the reds and evacuated between 300 and 400 South Koreans.

The navy today admitted the loss of one island. It said about 1,000 Chinese took part in an overwater assault on the island which has been used as an Allied raiding base for several months.

Sailor Killed

Enemy artillery on nearby islands countered the Allied naval fire. One man aboard the Cockade was killed by a red shell. There were no reports of other casualties aboard the warships.

Planes from the United States light carrier Rendova covered the three ships that moved in close to the island. Taewha is about 35 miles southeast of the mouth of the Yalu River — the border between North Korea and Manchuria.

The carrier's action was tied to previously-announced destruction of 12 red planes, including eight bombers, by U.S. Air Force Sabre jets.

The navy said the formation of enemy planes over the area was broken up. The red planes were apparently headed south to support the amphibious landing.

Three-Wave Attack

Navy reports said the enemy landing was made in three waves. The first reds hit the island beach in small rubberized assault craft. They were followed by more men in sailing vessels which were covered by mortar fire from motorized junks.

Another island in the vicinity was lost to the reds Nov. 6, when a small group of South Koreans departed under cover fire from Allied surface vessels. That enemy operation was also supported by red aircraft.

At Ottawa, navy officials said no report has been received at headquarters on the Athabaskan's part in the operation. Detailed reports are not expected for "a day or two."

Traffic Mishaps Claim 12 Lives During Weekend

(By The Canadian Press)

Traffic accidents claimed 12 lives in eastern Canada during the weekend, bringing the total of violent deaths in the area to 15.

A Canadian Press survey today showed two persons killed by falls and one crushed to death, besides the 12 killed in traffic. Nine were killed in Ontario, five in Quebec and one in New Brunswick.

In Ontario, three children were killed at once when the automobile in which their father was driving them to see Santa Claus was struck by a train. Dead are William Campbell, 12, and his sisters, Carol 10, and Olive, 11.

A Nova Scotia seaman, Robert Penny, 23, of Bras d'Or, Cape Breton Island, was killed when he fell off a train near Toronto. Alfred Marks, 54, was killed at Toronto while helping to trim a tree.

A county constable, Monte Wood, 57, was killed when he was struck by a car in a fog at Northbrook, near Belleville, while investigating an earlier accident. Joly A. Cadman, 75, a retired farmer, was killed when hit by a car at St. Thomas.

William Reid, 32, of Brantford, was killed when his station wagon failed to make a turn and hit the ditch. John W. Pierce, 40, of Brantford died at London during the weekend of injuries suffered in an automobile accident there Oct. 31.

In the province of Quebec, two men were killed in an accident near Drummondville. Gerard Houle, 44, was helping to pull a station wagon out of a ditch when he was hit by an auto driven by Gaston Ratte, 21. Ratte was killed when his car overturned.

Mrs. Leon Proulx, 80, was fatally injured on her way to Sunday Mass when hit by a taxi at Levis, and Evariste Michael, 70, was killed in a similar accident at Montreal. In a truck-car collision at Montreal, Rene Viau, 22, was killed.

U.S. Bombers Fly To Morocco

Casablanca, Morocco, Dec. 3. (AP)—The first of the five giant United States air bases being built on the African continent went into operation last weekend with the arrival of six B-36 Bombers in a 5,000-mile non-stop flight from Texas.

The Bombers, part of the strategic air command, flew from Fort Worth to Sidi Slimane, a Bomber base in the desert of French Morocco about 50 miles northeast of here.

They are to be followed by other flights of bombers on a rotation basis.

THE WEATHER

Toronto Dec. 3 (CP)— Synopsis: Mild weather continued over Ontario yesterday, with afternoon temperatures in southern Ontario near the 50 mark and in the northern regions close to 40. Skies were generally cloudy but the sun did occasionally break through in some regions.

Mostly cloudy skies and above normal temperatures will continue today with occasional light rain throughout the province today and Tuesday. Temperatures in western sections will be a little lower on Tuesday.

Canada's Tourist Planners Meet With Optimistic Outlook for Future

Ottawa, Dec. 3 (CP) — The men who guide Canada's growing, multi-million dollar tourist industry meet here today to plan their campaign for 1952.

Attracting tourists to "vacations unlimited' in Canada is their job. Though all returns for 1951 are not yet in, business was good this year. And when they get their plans laid they believe it will be even better next year.

The occasion is the three-day sixth Dominion-Provincial tourist conference, attended by travel officials from every province. Taking a large hand in the proceedings will be Canada's number one publicity man, D. Leo Dolan, head of the Canadian government travel bureau.

As they get down to business the tourist executives will have before them a summary of reports on tourist activities in every province in 1951 and plans for 1952. It shows a healthy picture of expanded resort facilities, highways, advertising campaigns and transportation facilities.

It shows for instance that 1951 visitors to Canada's 16 national parks increased at all except four of them over 1950 and totalled close to 2,000,000. Visits to all national historic sites were up over last year.

Quebec does the biggest share of Canada's tourist business. Last year she attracted 4,380,000 tourists, an increase of 6.4 percent over 1950. Tourist revenues are estimated at $142,300,000 compared with the 1950 figure of $133,700,000.

Ontario hasn't got its 1951 figures ready yet, but it does a whacking business too.

British Columbia's tourist business is reaching toward the 1,500,000 visitors mark and revenue is estimated at $63,000,000 in 1951, compared with $60,000,000 a year ago.

The prairie provinces and the Maritimes also reported increases, though Prince Edward Island complained that lack of adequate ferry facilities was the biggest drawback to its tourist industry.

The new province of Newfoundland reported it doesn't yet know the extent of its 1951 business, but expects it will be up. It plans to spend $30,000 in publicity in 1952.

U.S. PLANE FORCED DOWN IN HUNGARY BY SOVIET FLYERS

Claim Craft Carrying Spies to Yugoslavia

Moscow, Dec. 3 (AP)—Russia reported today that a United States air force transport plane, missing in the Balkans since Nov. 19 with four men aboard, was forced to land in Hungary by Soviet fighter planes.

The Russian account, in the official news agency Tass, said the C-47—on a flight from Erding, Germany, to Belgrade—had been dispatched to carry spies and saboteurs from Yugoslavia into the Soviet Union and her east European Allies.

It added that the four U.S. crew members had been turned over to Hungarian authorities.

It was the second incident within a month involving a U.S. plane and the Soviets. Russia has charged that an American bomber early in November violated Siberia's eastern coast and was driven off by fire from red fighters. The U.S., in a complaint to the United Nations, said that plane was a meteorological craft and was fired on without warning, apparently over international waters.

Tass today gave this account of the downing of the C-47 in the Balkans:

The plane "violated the Romanian state frontier in the vicinity of Recita and then, after flying over the territory of Romania, violated Hungarian territory in the area of the town of Gyula and tried to fly over Hungarian territory."

Soviet air force fighters, "stationed in Hungary on the strength of article 22 of the (Hungarian) peace treaty," forced the plane down near the Hungarian town of Papa.

Identifies Crew

(The air force in Washington has listed the men as Capt. John J. Swift, Glen Falls, N.Y.; Capt. Dave H. Henderson, Shawnee, Okla.; Sgt. James A. Elam, Kingsland, Ark.; and Tech. Sgt. Jess A. Duff, Spokane, Wash.)

"A study of the route of the flight and the presence of a skilled crew shows that in this case we have a deliberate violation of the Romanian and Hungarian frontiers...for a definite purpose."

The purpose, Tass claimed, was to pick up spies and saboteurs in Yugoslavia, drop them on territory of the Soviet Union and her Allies.

$140,000 FIRE LOSS

Buenos Aires, Dec. 3 (Reuters) —Fire yesterday destroyed a great part of the Buenos Aires central market known as the "Mercado de. Abasto." Damage was estimated at $140,000. No one was injured.

Reds Can Have Unofficial But Real Cease-Fire on Korean Ground on Four Conditions

Seoul, Korea, Dec. 3. (AP)—It looks as though the communists can have an unofficial but very real cease-fire on the Korean ground front any time they want it.

According to information now available, all they have to do is honor four conditions:

1. Stop all attacks on Allied positions.
2. Keep artillery and mortars quiet and out of sight.
3. Send out nothing more than small scouting patrols and keep a tight leash on these.
4. Keep their heads down.

If the reds fall in with these four, points, the shoot war will come to an almost complete —if informal and possibly temporary—stop.

It is necessary to say "almost" for two reasons:

1. Since it is not a formal agreemnt reached by both sides, it can be changed or reversed on a moment's notice.
2. Since it is not an iron-clad agreement enforced by strict orders, there is nothing to prevent an occasional lapse into a shooting scrape. Such a slip might come on either side from a misunderstanding of the enemy's movements. Or it might come as a reflex action to sudden surprise.

But aside from an occasional accident, communist understanding and acceptance of the four points would bring about a de facto cease-fire.

As far as anyone knows, the Allied high command has not told the communists that in so many words.

But for the last five days the Allies have been demonstrating that policy.

Sooner or later, simply by trial and error, the communists are going to discover those four points.

In these last five days the communists should have made some deductions:

1. Allied infantry has gone into action only when attacked or to regain lost ground.
2. Allied patrols have been non-offensive.
3. Allied artillery has fired only in reply to enemy fire, or against known gun and mortar positions that threaten Allied troops.

All this sooner or later must add up to one thing to the communist high command. That it is they, not the Allies, who have provoked every attack since Nov. 27, the day the Allies decided to call off the ground war as much as possible for the time being.

No Fault of Weather if Electorate Fails to Break 1950 Vote Record

Fifteen aldermanic candidates, two mayoralty aspirants and four public utilities commissioner potentials were up and around bright and early checking on last-minute preparations for what might be one of the largest civic votes on record.

Ideal weather conditions prevailed, in fact from a weather standpoint, this election day was the most conducive to a heavy vote than any for the past several years. It was mild, with no threat of storm nor lowering temperatures.

Candidates' cars were out bright and early transporting voters from house, apartment and employment spots.

Record Vote Last Year

While some predicted an all-time record vote, a survey of some of the polls at eleven o'clock today revealed an "average" recording of ballots. It should be remembered that city voters established an all-time high of ballots recorded last year when 6,571 went to the polls, an increase of some 700 over the year previous.

This represented approximately sixty-five per cent of the city's electorate.

Other records went by the board too, last year. Mayor R. D. Potter polled a record vote over Mayor Jack Allin, while records in the board of education and aldermanic lists were established. Last year the aldermanic candidate who finished just "outside the money" polled 1,886 votes, enough to win by plenty in any previous election.

As is the custom the Ontario Intelligencer will relay election results from its battery of telephones in the newsrooms. An augmented editorial staff will take care of inquiries, starting at eight o'clock. Call 4600 for election returns—after that time.

Chinese Worker Kills 3 Persons

Singapore, Dec. 3 (Reuters) — A 45-year-old Chinese lumber worker ran amok in Benton Pahang today, killing three persons and wounding four.

He hacked three sleeping Chinese girls to death with a long knife just before dawn. Two of the girls were aged 11 and four.

He slashed their mother about the head and face but did not harm the father.

Then he attacked a Chinese cook, chopping off his arm, and critically wounded another Chinese and his wife.

Election Returns By Phone and Radio

In keeping with its policy of other years, the Ontario Intelligencer will again relay civic election returns to the public.

A battery of telephones and an augmented staff will be available tonight to provide this service.

Commencing at 8 o'clock tonight, results of the Belleville municipal election will be broadcast over CJBQ for a five- minute period every half-hour.

Six Large Stores Challenge By-Law

Montreal, Dec. 3 — (CP) — Six big retail stores today served summons on the city of Montreal to defend in court its by-law requiring them to close on certain Roman Catholic holy days. The city was summoned to appear in superior court.

Plaintiffs in the action were the T. Eaton Company, Henry Birks and Son Limited, Holt Renfrew and Company Ltd., Henry Morgan and Company Ltd., James A. Ogilvy's Ltd., and Robert Simpson, Ltd.

The by - law requires stores to close on the feasts of the Immaculate Conception, Epiphany, Ascension and All Saints' Day. The merchants claim the by-law is not within the city's power to enact.

The city is required to appear in court within a six-day period to answer the summons. Unless a court injunction is granted before Dec. 8, the stores will have to close for the Feast of the Immaculate Conception.

The by-law touched off a controversy after its passage by a one-vote margin in city council last month.

SONG WRITER DIES

Hove, England, Dec. 3 (Reuters) — George Henry Powell, whose "Pack Up Your Troubles in Your Old Kit Bag," was sung by allied soldiers on every battle field of the First World War died today. He was 71. Powell put the song away as a failure after his brother, Felix, had set it to music in 1915. Later they entered it for a competition—and made a fortune in royalities.

PROSECUTOR SAYS GEN. KURT MEYER SHOULD BE FREED

Defends Legality of Trial Which Convicted Meyer

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 3—(CP)—Bruce J. S. Macdonald, Canada's chief prosecutor at the war-crimes trial of Kurt Meyer, thinks Meyer should be freed from prison if the Canadian government is satisfied he would fight in a western European army.

But Mr. Macdonald, now crown attorney for Essex County, in a statement last night defended the legality of the trial at which the German major-general was convicted of responsibility for the killing of Canadian prisoners.

He said he has no doubt that Meyer was legally convicted in the killing of 18 Canadians within 100 metres of Meyer's command post in Normandy in 1944, but he feels "the matter should be dealt with realistically."

Meyer, 42, now is serving a life sentence. He recently was transferred from the penitentiary at Dorchester, N. B., to a British military prison in Germany. Last week he was allowed to go home on 10 days' compassionate leave but returned to prison yesterday. The news that Meyer was visiting his wife and family stirred a controversy that has flared intermittently in Canada since Meyer's sentence was commuted from death to life imprisonment.

"The present situation is largely the result of lack of frankness at Ottawa and is intolerable," said Mr. Macdonald. "The Meyer issue stands to undo all that our troops are trying to accomplish in goodwill in Germany at the present time.

Wants Reference

"Let us have a reference to the supreme court if that can settle the matter. Or, if thoroughly satisfied of his present reliability, then release Meyer to work with us for peace or victory if necessary in the future. In that way, he can better expiate his misdeeds than by languishing in a prison. Those who suffered most from them, I am sure, would prefer it that way.

He had been in touch with Clarence Campbell of Montreal, his assistant at the trial and now president of the National Hockey League, who was in complete agreement with his views.

He said he had not intended to say anything about Meyer's return to Germany. But a statement given last week by Dalton Dean of Haileyburg, Ont., who also assisted him at the trial, called for consideration

(Mr. Dean, now a lawyer at Haileyburg, said the trial did not prove that the German officer was guilty of murdering the Canadians or offering them to be murdered. He said Canada is playing the part of a vengeful nation, rather than a just one.)

Willing to Permit Neutral Observers To Police Truce

Allies Suspicious of What Countries Reds Have in Mind

Munsan, Korea, Dec. 3—(AP) Communist truce negotiators today proposed behind-the-lines inspection by neutral observers and a "complete freeze" on troops and arms in Korea. The move possibly paved the way for agreement on another step toward an armistice.

It appeared to be a major concession on the part of the reds. In the past they refused to allow observers behind their lines and have insisted on the right to build up their armed strength while an armistice is in force.

The big one—an Allied spokesman called it the $64 question—was what neutral countries do the communists have in mind to police the truce

Answer Tuesday

The communists said they will answer 21 questions posed by the U. N. command when the negotiators meet in Panmunjom at 11 a. m. Tuesday (9 p. m. EST Monday).

The offer to permit inspection teams was the reds' biggest concession, even though they stipulated that any such inspection should be limited to "mutually-agreed-upon ports of entry."

The reds sprang their surprise proposal at the afternoon session Monday. At Monday's morning meeting the two sides appeared deadlocked on the problem of supervising an armistice.

The $64 question" — which countries the communists consider neutral—might prove a major stumbling block.

Among countries; officially neutral in the Korean war are such Russian satellites as Czechoslovakia, Poland and the Balkan nations—not to mention the Soviet Union itsself.

On the other hand, there are relatively-few western countries which have not participated directly in the war or supported the Allies through votes in the United Nations.

Red Proposals

Specifically the communist plan for breaking the deadlock over supervising the armistice provides:

1. Neither side would introduce into Korea "any military forces, weapons and ammunition under any pretext during the armistice."
2. Both sides agree to ask neutral countries to form an organization responsible for inspecting such "ports of entry in the rear as mutually agreed upon" and to report to a joint armistice commission.

Bank of Montreal's Gardner Warns Wealth Comes Only from Production

Montreal, Dec. 3. (CP)—B. C. Gardner, president of the Bank of Montreal, today cautioned Canadians against thinking they can have "more and more by doing less and less".

Speaking to the bank's annual meeting he said, in part:

"It is true we have great resources. Their conversion into material wealth, however, is dependent on the sum total of the efforts of a working force of less than 5,500,000 people.

"To develop our potentialities, to make an adequate contribution to defence, to improve our standard of living—to do all this and enjoy increasing leisure too, is asking a great deal. Insofar as it is asking too much, the result is inevitably to add to pressures in the direction of higher costs and prices. . . . ."

Mr. Gardner also said, "we are beginning to suspect that one of the tools of economic management —the budget—does not necessarily produce the results claimed for it."

"It has been a maxim of 'new order' economics that severe taxation can and should be used to curb excessive purchasing power . . . .but. . . people have a not unnatural dislike for heavy taxes and many of them are able to escape the tax burden through compensatory pay increases. Under present conditions, taxes tend to be regarded as part of the cost of living and get caught up in the wage-price spiral. . .if by reason of the very size of the budget, the weight of taxation is such as to set in motion the forces I have mentioned, the efficacy of the budget as a stabilizing influence is in danger of being lost."

". . . .We have succeeded in producing, and improving, ourselves out of many of the scarcities and civilian spending, rather than rearmament outlays, had induced. From now on, however, defence requirements may accelerate all the more rapidly for having been delayed. . . .

"Most Canadians are employed today—and at a higher income level—than at any previous time in our history. . . .

Kingston Soldier Flies Home to Sick Wife

Mrs. Yard, who has been in hospital for more than a week, continues in "much the same" serious condition, hospital authorities said today.

Neither attending doctors nor hospital officials will reveal the nature of Mrs. Yard's illness.

Fog Causes Many Rush-Hour Accidents

Toronto, Dec. 3. (CP)—Heavy fog blanketed the Toronto area early today, causing scores of rush-hour accidents in which nine persons were injured.

Harold Johnson, 35, of Erindale, had both legs crushed when his truck overturned on the Dundas highway. Johnson, trapped in the cab, sipped a soft drink and calmly directed operations as police and motorists worked an hour and a half to free him.

Arthur Blankey, 45, of Streetsville, driver of the car which collided with Johnson's truck, was also taken to hospital.

Three other persons were injured when two cars crashed head-on in the fog on the Don Mills Road, east of the city.

FINE WEATHER ATTRACTS GOLFERS

While there's life there's hope and while there's good weather there's golf. Several linksmen were noticed taking advantage of the fine weather over the weekend to get in some 11th-hour rounds over the Bay of Quinte Golf Club course.

CHILDREN FOUND SKATING ON BAY

Children in the Bayview section of the city got the outdoor skating season underway over the weekend but they chose a rather dangerous spot for their sport. They were skating on the Bay of Quinte.

A resident living in the above section of the city was amazed when she saw the children on the bay and realizing they were in danger immediately called the police. Police went to the scene and told the youngsters to get off the ice.

It was just too dangerous to skate on the bay so early in December, police said.

YOUNGSTERS BREAK MANY WINDOWS

Mischievous youngsters testing their stone - throwing abilities scored almost 100 per cent over the weekend when they broke about $75 worth of windows in a new residence on Dundas St., West. Mrs. C. D. Bonistell reported to police that all the windows in the south of the new home were broken.

Philatelic Soc. Discusses Plans for Season

The first meeting of the season of the Belleville Philatelic Society was held in the Corby Library.

Business and policy for the season were discussed. A program of events was outlined. These events will include competitions, auctions, talks by members, general discussions and trading.

It is hoped that by the end of the present season the society will be able to show a strong membership and be able to cater to the requirements of collectors in all branches of the very diversified field of philately.

At the meeting late in January, there is to be a philatelic auction and all those interested who are not already members are invited to be present.

Lawyers to Give Needy Folk Legal Aid Without Charge In Hastings, Prince Edward

The Hastings and Prince Edward County Law Association announced it has established a legal aid clinic in these counties as part of the province-wide Ontario legal aid plan organized by the Law Society of Upper Canada.

R. A. Pringle K.C., of Belleville, has been appointed county director of the legal aid plan. The clinic or director will refer needy persons to volunteer lawyers in the county who have agreed to provide free legal assistance to persons unable to pay for a lawyer's services.

Mr. Pringle will be assisted by an advisory committee comprising J. D. O'Flynn, Ramsay Park and E. Gus Porter. Serving as local directors for their areas will be Ramsay Park, Trenton, and F. L. Ward, K.C., Picton.

Similar clinics are being established in the 42 counties and districts in Ontario where there are local law associations. The overall program is directed by W. Earl Smith, K.C., secretary of the law society.

The county director said needy persons requiring legal advice should apply to the county director or local directors.

He drew attention to the regulations for the plan which stipulates that aid will be given to persons with an annual income of less than $900, plus $200 for each dependent. It will also be given to any person if payment for legal services will "impair his ability to furnish himself and his family with the essentials necessary to keep them decently fed, clothed, sheltered and living together as a family."

Return to Apprenticeship System Proving Successful in Many Trades

A return to the apprenticeship system for the training of skilled workers in the building trades and in motor mechanics is seen in the city with the formation of the Belleville and District Apprenticeship Advisory Committee some months ago.

Since the formation of the committee a total of 39 young workers has been indentured as apprentices in the district. The apprentices are learning carpentry, bricklaying, electric wiring, plumbing and steamfitting and motor mechanics.

A dearth of skilled artisans in the various building trades in the Bay of Quinte district are responsible for the apprenticeship advisory committee a little over a year ago. The district takes in Napanee and Picton.

Chairman of the committee is Mr. H. H. Reed, manager of the local employment office, with Fred Eglie of Belleville as secretary.

'Experience Best Teacher'

Appreciative of the fact that "experience is the best teacher" men associated with the building trades in the district emphasize that only by hard work and long practice can workers become skilled artisans in the various branches of the industry.

Youths leaving school, however, must learn to take a long term view of the advantages of being apprenticed in their chosen trade. They must appreciate that is it only the truly skilled artisan who can demand top wages and expect merited advancement.

Vocational training in schools give the young would-be carpenter or plumber theory, but to become truly efficient it is theory plus experience that counts.

"There are very few really skilled carpenters and other construction workers in the country today," Mr. Reed pointed out. "Most of the men working at carpentry today have but little knowledge of the finer points of the trade."

"I dare say," he went on, "that very few, if called upon, could pass even minimum requirements of a carpenter."

The same was true he said for other branches of the building trade.

Eleven Apprenticed

It is to correct this situation that the apprenticeship system has been instituted in the area. Boys agree to an apprenticeship term of four years in the building trades and five years in the motor vehicle repair trade. They are required to attend special training courses set up by the apprenticeship branch of the Department of Labor, and the employer agrees to teach the apprentice all he knows of the trade.

Apprentice wages are set at a minimum percentage of the recognized journeyman's rate in each trade which in the building trade ranges from not less than 30 per cent for the first year to 70 per cent for the fourth year.

Mr. Reid said the apprenticeship advisory board provides a body to whom apprentices may bring complaints and allows channelling of apprentices to jobs in keeping with their abilities.

Since the formation of the local apprenticeship committee 11 boys have been apprenticed to the motor repair trade; six have gone into bricklaying; nine as plumbers and steam fitters; two as electricians, and 11 as carpenters.

"If our efforts produce results then they will have been worthwhile," was Mr. Reed's comment.

Marysville Boy Injured When Knocked off Bike

Knocked from his bicycle to the roadway when struck from behind by a car, Edward Ray Walsh, 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Walsh of Marysville, suffered concussion and facial lacerations Sunday evening.

The accident took place on what is known as the Old Belleville Road near Marysville. Two lads, Walsh, and Gerald McAuley, were riding on the bike when a car driven by Orville Radford, R. R. 5, Belleville, struck the machine. The driver told police he did not see the bicycle in time to avoid hitting it.

The injured lad was attended by Dr. D. C. McVicker of Deseronto and was taken to hospital by Bush's ambulance. Provincial Constables J. McBride and R. Devey investigated.

Blaze Starts In Metal Cuttings

City firemen rubbed their eyes in disbelief Saturday afternoon when they were called to the Stephen-Adamson plant south of the track to extinguish a blazing pile of metal cuttings.

"Don't tell me that steel won't burn," stated Fire Chief Vance after the blaze was put out. "We poured water from two pumpers into that pile of cuttings before we got it out."

The pile of metal cuttings had been piled outside the plant awaiting shipment and was saturated with oil from the lathes. In some manner the oil in the pile caught fire. The blazing pile was some distance from the plant and the buildings were in no danger.

Fire Precautions Urged by Chief

Fire prevention is the best form of fire fighting, it was emphasized today by Fire Chief Gerald Vance who urged that more than ordinary caution be taken from now until after the Christmas season.

Christmas trees and decorations in many instances have been the cause of disastrous fires in homes and also in public buildings and the chief urged extreme caution be used in setting these up and in keeping away from them anything which is inflammable.

It will also be the season of Christmas parties and concerts. As a precaution against fire, the fire department has volunteered to send a fireman to any public concert. Prior to the date of the concert, sponsors should contact the fire chief who will make arrangements for attendance by the fireman.

Weather Man Was Fickle In November

November was a month of contrasts with all sorts of weather being served up for the approval or disapproval of residents.

For instance the thermometer went up to a rather balmy 53 degrees and then one night recently dropped to within six degrees of zero. The mean temperature for the month was 31.7 degrees. Last November was really mild in comparison with a high of 70 degrees; a low of 17, and a mean temperature of 37.6 degrees.

Picton Children See Santa Claus At Big Parade

Picton.—A crowd estimated at 15,000 people converged on Picton Saturday afternoon when the annual Santa Claus parade was held. The mild weather attracted scores of carloads of people from as far east as Kingston, with hundreds from Belleville and Trenton and surrounding areas.

Nearly 3,000 children greeted Santa after the parade and each received a candy cane. This was 900 more than the previous year and a record for the five years the parade has been held. Hundreds more waited to see Santa during his stay in town during the coming weeks, due to the great crowd on Saturday.

Santa also visited the hospital, visiting boys and girls there and distributing treats.

Sponsored by Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce, the parade was conducted by Don Thomas and Phil Dodds. Forming at the fair grounds, it was headed by the Picton police car, followed by the RCSA trumpet band under RSM Bevvan, and twelve riders on horseback.

Many organizations were represented with floats, each depicting their work. These included the T.B. Seal organization, Salvation Army, St. John Ambulance, Girl Guides, Home and School Association, Kinsmen Club, Picton Business Girls' Association. The C.G.I.T. had a tableau depicting the Christmas story.

Prince Edward Junior Farmers had the "Old Woman in the Shoe" and her many children. Riding on the top of a tremendous load of chicken crates was a big red rooster. A miniature cow was pulled along on roller skates, while a duck waddled along contentedly. The animal population was also represented by a dog pulling a decorated wagon, another dog carrying a parcel in its mouth, two goats and several ponies.

Other floats depicted Red Riding Hood and the wolf, Punkinhead and Pinnochio, Jack-in-the-Box, Christmas bells, dairy products, and many favorite story book characters. One float had an oldtime covered wagon with pony hitched to it and driven by a little girl in appropriate costume. All floats were homemade.

There were 65 costumes with big heads, including a variety of clowns, Donald and Daisy Duck, rabbit, tiger, Pop Eye and Olive, men from the east who were 10 feet tall, the three pigs, three bears, the Bumsteads, Elsie the Cow, Red-nosed Reindeer, elephants, fat man and woman, and others, all of whom brought cries of recognition from the children.

Picton band rode in a big float decorated with evergreen. Additional music was supplied by sound systems on trucks and from fronts of stores.

Bringing up the rear of the mile-long parade was a colorful float on which rode Santa, his voice booming greetings to the crowd.

One hundred members of RCSA joined with police in handling the thousands of cars which lined every road leading into town. There were no accidents.

News Distortion Hit by Editor

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 3.—(CP)—R. A. Farquharson, editor of Saturday Night, Toronto, said here Friday night that if newspapers are to attain the respect of their readers, news direction should cease to have any political affiliation.

Speaking at a dinner session of Harvard University's Nieman Fellowship of Journalism, Mr. Farquharson said many papers "feel they are fair because they fairly report their political opponents. I want to see the day when, in the heat of an election campaign, as well as at other times, the news play is decided on the merits of the story and not on friendship to a party."

A newspaper could not lay claim to objectivity as long as political friends get more space and larger "play" because they were friends. Front-page editorials were disappearing "but there still are papers who believe they have honest news columns which distort the honesty of their news presentation by overplaying friends, by putting editorials, not always plainly labelled as editorials, on the front page."

Mr. Farquharson said he would like an attempt made to measure what influence newspapers have in reverse. He believed the overwhelming opposition of the American press to Franklin D. Roosevelt was a factor in his success. In the same way violent press criticism had been a factor in the success of the British Labor Party in 1945 and in the many elections to office of Mackenzie King in Canada.

GARDINER. — In loving memory of a dear mother, Mrs. Anna Marie Gardiner, who passed away December 2, 1949.

Two dear bright eyes, a tender smile,
A loving heart that knew no guile,
Deep trust in God that all was right,
Her joy to make some other bright.
If sick or suffering one she knew,
Some gentle act of love she'd do;
No thought of self, but of "the other";
I know He said "Well done, dear mother."

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 3—(CP) — Early afternoon stock market prices eased from morning gains today as mid-session support weakened.

Papers, steels and foods posted a majority of fractional advances to form the market's strongest section. Manufacturing companies and miscellaneous industrials weakened.

Penny golds attracted most speculative interest. Kelore was again a feature as more than 200,000 shares changed hands within the first three hours.

Consolidated Smelters jumped $3 while other market leaders including Falconbridge and Waite Amulet added fractions.

Western Oils traded irregularly. Calvan Consolidated, Federated Petroleum, General Petroleum and Vulcan showed advances ranging to about 10 cents.

Senior golds were mixed with two gains against two losses. Secondary issues showed little trend.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

10,000 Ford Employees Idle Following Dispute

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 3. (CP)—Workers at the Ford of Canada plant here went on strike today following the discharge of 26 men for "causing work stoppages". An estimated 10,000 employees were affected.

The firings came as a result of last Thursday's workers' demonstrations which resulted in a three-hour shut-down.

Officials of Local 200, the United Automobile Workers of America (C.I.O.-C.C.L.), met this morning in emergency session to consider the firings.

At noon, Union officials would make no statement on the firings.

However, news of the company's action spread like wildfire through the huge automobile plant. While Union officials denied the existence of a strike, the workers dropped their tools and walked off the job.

Windsor, Ont., —(CP)— Rhys M. Sale, president of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, today announced the firing of 26 Ford employees for "inciting fellow employees to take part in unlawful and unauthorized work stoppages."

Mr. Sale said that the discharges arose out of a wildcat strike last Thursday which "shut down most production operations for the last half of the day shift." He charged that the stoppage was one of 34 which had taken place in the plant since last May 29.

In November alone there had been 17 work stoppages which had caused a loss of 47,000 man hours of production and "cost the employees about $68,000 in lost wages."

Mr. Sale said he was "satisfied" that a large majority of Ford factory employees are not in sympathy with "wildcat strike tactics and leave their jobs most unwillingly when the stoppages happen.

Trenton—(Special)— A hockey team representing No. 6 R.D. Sergeants' Mess roared through an Ontario provincial police squad in the first game of a winter series in Belleville yesterday.

Brand of hockey dished uo by the airmen had the cops reeling by the time the last whistle had sounded, Snipers Cross and Lafay for 6 R.D. were just too cute for opposing bluecoats. The final score was 6 R.D. 9, O.P.P. 3.

WILLING TO

The U. N. command interpreted ports of entry to mean seaports, airports and rail and highway centres.

After handing communist negotiators the list of 21 questions, Vice-Admiral C. Turner Joy, chief U. N. delegate suggested that the entire matter of supervising the armistice be turned over to two-man sub-committees which would meet Tuesday at 2 p. m. (midnight EST Monday).

North Korean Lt.-Gen. Nam Il replied that he will answer the questions Tuesday, and that subcommittees could be named if the Allies accept the proposal.

Joy said he could not even consider the red plan until he had the answers to the questions.

Allied Questions

Joy's questions included:

Would the proposal prohibit the replacement of soldiers evacuated for illness or injury or sent home on rotation?

Would it bar the replacement of one military unit with another of the same strength?

Would it prevent replacement of ammunition used in training, or an exchange of weapons of the same type?

Would it permit unlimited construction of airfields?

There was no immediate opinion as to what the reds mean by inspection of points "mutually agreed upon by both sides."

Communist correspondents at Panmunjom said Sunday the reds might be willing to permit inspection of specified points at specified times.

There was no indication this would meet Allied demands for complete, continuing inspection over the length and breadth of Korea.

If the negotiators could agree on inspections behind the lines and a ban on either side building up its armed strength presumably the way would be cleared for settlement of agenda item three—supervision of the truce.

STORM HITS B. C.

Vancouver, Dec. 3 — (CP) — Another fierce Pacific storm with wind gusts reported up to 105 miles an hour rattled the west coast last night. The weather bureau here said Sandspit, some 500 miles north of here, was reporting steady hurricane winds of 95 miles an hour with gusts to 103. However, the weatherman said he didn't place too much confidence in the wind-measuring device at Sandspit because other points a little farther south were reporting winds of only 50 miles an hour.

Nine Egyptians Killed in Clash With British

Cairo, Dec. 3 (Reuters) —Nine Egyptians were killed and 62 injured in a clash this afternoon with British troops in the canal zone.

Serag El Din Pasha, Egyptian Minister of the Interior, said the casualties included one policeman killed and six police injured.

In an earlier statement to parliament the minister had identified all the casualties as policemen.

A British embassy spokesman said preliminary reports reaching Cairo said two British military policemen—an officer and an enlisted man —saw a truck load of Egyptian police near a military gasoline dump outside Suez about mid-day today.

When the officer asked what they were doing the Egyptian police opened fire, wounding one of the British MPs, who has since died.

Then an attack developed against the gas dump, the embassy reports added.

THE SAME OLD STORY

At this season, when municipal candidates from one end of Canada to the other are promising all sorts of things in their efforts to make friends and influence voters, it is interesting to note that the difficulties which many Canadian cities and towns are experiencing are not unknown elsewhere.

New York, the largest city in the world, and the wealthiest, is reported to be running into a "financial crisis." New York, it seems must collect an additional $100,000,000 to $150,000,000 per year and doesn't know where to find it.

New York State, it appears, does not allow its municipalities to run completely wild in the matter of taxation, and limits the taxes which may be levied on real property in any one year to two per cent of its value. New York City is levying a two per cent sales tax, but this is not working very well, because more and more New Yorkers are doing their shopping in the suburbs.

New York City's municipal legislators are advocating all sorts of remedies, but these remedies all have one point in common. They are all suggestions for the raising of some tax being now levied, or the imposition of some new tax.

Responsible business men in New York have pointed out that even a city the size of New York could be run by far fewer than 200,000 employees and that New York's present annual budget of $1,336,000,000 could be reduced drastically without causing hardship to anyone.

If the business men of New York are right, then men of the same type in smaller communities are right when they advance similar arguments about high municipal taxation.

ON DEFENCE SPENDING

The British are spending 13.4 per cent of their national income on defence during the current year. Canada is spending, also during the current year, 12.07 per cent of her national income on defence.

Here is what is being spent on national defence, during the current year, by some of the other North Atlantic Treaty Organization nations, in terms of percentages of their national income, according to the United Nations Economic Survey of Europe:

Belgium, 4.6; Denmark, 2.9; France, 9.3; Italy, 7; Netherlands, 9.7, Norway, 4.9.

Since comparisons are said to be odious, we shall refrain from making any, but we believe the foregoing figures are worthy of consideration.

AMERICANS HIGHLY TAXED

Paul S. Willis, president of Grocery Manufacturers of America, declares that the people of the United States are paying more in taxes than they are for food. Last year, Mr. Willis said, the Americans' total tax bill was 57 billion dollars, as against a 52 billion dollar food bill. This year, he estimates, taxes will total 75 billion dollars, food costs 55 billion dollars.

The Republicans, who are already campaigning for the next presidential election, ought to be able to do something with these figures.

One thing is certain — Thomas Jefferson, the founder of the Democratic party, would turn over in his grave, several times, if he were informed of them.

MAN WITH TWO FACES

Col. James Riley Hutchinson, who has been appointed War Office parliamentary under-secretary by Mr. Churchill, is a robust cheerful individual whose face is remarkable neither for handsomeness nor ugliness. That is the way he wants it, and unlike most of us he had some choice in the matter.

This valued Conservative member of Parliament was a Scarlet Pimpernel in the Second World War and had hairbreadth escapes while organizing the resistance movement in France and elsewhere in Western Europe during the German occupation. The Germans came to know him very well and Col. Hutchinson told that his experience was invaluable and it would be useful if he could continue, simply went to England to have his face changed.

The plastic surgeons did a noble job and even his best friends did not know him. In the esteem of Britain this is a two-faced man known for honesty, courage and ability. And he has kept his second face. — (Ottawa Journal.)

Egypt's Suez Canal Acts Said Illegal, Unwise, Dangerous

By LEWIS MILLIGAN

The Suez Canal has been very much in the news of late, and its geographical location should be well known to every school boy, but how many adults know anything about its history? Even for those who think they know all about it a brief review of the facts should be of interest at the present time when so much seems to depend upon what is happening or may yet happen in that strip of territory. To begin with: The isthmus of Suez is a desert with salt lakes and marshes which joins Africa to Asia, and is 75 miles wide from Port Said on the Mediterranean to Port Tewfik on the Gulf of Suez, an arm of the Red Sea.

The first canal was built over 4,000 years ago to one of the lakes in the centre of the isthmus. About 1,500 years later it was extended via the salt lakes to the Gulf of Suez. But it repeatedly fell into disrepair and was last restored in 640 A.D., after the Arab conquest, and continued to be used for 200 years. In 1859 the plans of Ferdinand de Lesseps, a Frenchman, were followed for the construction of the present canal, which was completed in 1869. A controlling interest in the canal was obtained by Britain in 1875. The breadth of the canal is 196 feet, the depth about 42 feet, and the length about 100 miles. It is a sea-level canal without locks, and is navigated in 16 to 20 hours. The annual tonnage through the canal before the Second World War amounted to over 30 million tons, carried in more than 5,500 vessels.

The recent blocking of the Suez Canal to British tankers by the Egyptian government which has led to the present situation, was an infringement of an international convention. The Suez Canal Convention was signed on October 29, 1888, by Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy, The Netherlands, Russia, Spain, Turkey, and Austria Hungary. The convention provided as follows:

Article 1.—The maritime canal of Suez shall always be free and open in time of war as in time of peace, to every ship of trade or war, without distinction of flag. In consequence the high contracting parties agree to make no attack upon the free usage of the canal in time of war as in time of peace. The canal shall never be subjected to the menace of blockade.

Article IV laid down that no right of war, no act of hostility, nor any act having as its object hindering the free navigation of the canal can be committed in the canal or its port of access.

Thus it will be seen that the Egyptian government has not only broken its agreement by which the British occupy the canal zone for protective and upkeep purposes, but has flouted an international agreement that provided for the free use of the great waterway link between the east and west by all nations in peace or war. That convention in itself was an invaluable insurance of protection for Egypt. But the present government at Cairo, like that of Iran, is crazily blind to its own national interests.

The Egyptians have nothing to gain, but might lose everything by the withdrawal of the British and the abandonment of the convention. They could not defend the canal, and the Suez isthmus would be an open highway for the march of an army from the east into Northern Africa. It is for that reason that the British government, backed by the Atlantic powers, is determined to hold the Suez Canal, and the Egyptians should be grateful. But there is another and more important reason; the canal is the only short route for ships between the east and west, and if it were destroyed, maritime trade and traffic between the two hemispheres would be cut off. The Suez Canal used to be called "the highway to India"; without it that and other free countries in the east would be isolated and at the mercy of the new Genghis Khans.

OUR TOWN

ON A LEASE

The recent comment here about the grubby tactics of the commercial radio stations has been upsetting to some of the boys. They're acting as if I'd dumped a jar of ants in their pants.

I've been mildly amused at some of the "answers" flooding the airwaves and, if I may say so, the refreshing sincerity of the gents behind the microphones.

Two or three of these lads are among the unhappy tribe who must spend their days extolling the virtues of cookies with that scrunchy, locked-in-goodness, or peanut butter with the new, yummy taste sensation.

They are clearly eager to have something to believe in, apart from mere merchandise.

The new approach to the subject is to compare the lot of the radio stations with that of newspapers and I think we'd better spear that one right off.

* * *

One commentator, for example, said something like this: "How would Scott react if his paper, The Sun, were forced to compete with the Southam newspaper chain under rules laid down by the Southams? He was suggesting, of course, that the independent radio stations are competing with the CBC under unfair rules laid down by the CBC.

I've a pretty good hunch that this fellow knows the answer, but I'll tell him again anyway.

The answer simply is that, unlike the newspapers, the "private" radio stations are not really private at all. They don't own the channels on which they broadcast. You and I, the public, own them.

We merely lease them to private operators with the understanding that they will treat them nicely. We reserve the right to take them back if they're abused.

This is unfortunate, perhaps, but it's the way it has to be. There can be no more than three "private" radio stations. You can have 300 newspapers or 3000 but only three commercial radio stations.

It's very plain to see, then that there must be some control. Indeed, each of the lucky and prospering operators who has been given one of these valuable licenses has not only agreed to the control, but has sworn that he will be faithful to the trust.

They were happy enough to do this to win the privilege of what is, in fact, a monopoly. Now they want to guarantee the monopoly by slipping out from under the controls. That's what it's all about.

Some of the boys have spoken about the "restrictions". By this, of course, they mean only the restrictions which keep them from further commercializing of their large jukeboxes.

There are no restrictions whatever that will prevent any so-called idependent station from good broadcasting or good taste. There are no restrictions put in their way to keep them from performing a public service.

No rules stop them from developing Canadian talent or giving a wider scope for Canadian opinion or Canadian fact.

Although they use the word "culture" as if it were something like infanticide or drug-addiction, there are no restrictions to stop the independent stations from spreading Canadian culture. Nothing whatever stops them from performing the same kind of service that the CBC performs.

Restrictions? Why, there are no restrictions that prevent the commercial stations from playing American gramophone records all day and all night or shovelling their commercial announcements at us in an avalanche of garbage or giving us news read by announcers who haven't more than a remote idea of what the words mean or pandering to the intelligence of the 12-year-old mind.

There are no confining restrictions for good or bad broadcasting. The fact that the commercial stations have chosen the bad is their own doing.

* * *

The real tragedy of this situation is that the independent stations could do a wonderful job for Canada if they wanted to.

Through their organization, the Canadian Association of Broadcasters, they might voluntarily set up a code of standards and ethics to minimize the claptrap on the air such as the telephone "give-aways" and the many commercials which are just plain disgusting.

They could, on a national basis, give opportunity to Canadian writers, actors, musicians.

They could, develop and produce on their own initiative public forum programs, documentary features, set up educational services on the local level—in short, take some of the responsibility for radio as a factor in Canadian life.

A beginning could be made immediately, in fact, simply by dipping into the fund that the CAB uses for its propaganda work.

Without that kind of a demonstration of good faith the propaganda, in the end, will mean nothing.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE LAST LEAVES

My very mind is enveloped by a peaceful mist of beauty as I look out upon the tapestry of gold, bronze and emerald shades that Autumn's last farewell spreads before my eyes. A waft of wind —and thousands of colorful leaves fall gently to the earth and spread about in a coat more exquisite than any woven fabric.

The significance is that nothing is lost in this remarkable transition of nature's forces of change. The leaves fall and they are the last of the season, but they intermingle with the last of other years, are indeed the product of them, and they themselves join the ever changing, though never changing, process of continual life. Walk through the forest and you tread upon history!

As we look out upon the glory of the Autumn, in its colorful array, we are reminded of the Springtime when tiny buds began to open their eyes to the light and to the warm sunshine. Each day those eyes opened wider until the whole landscape of trees was umbrellaed in its new green gowns.

The story of immortality is presented to us in vivid form as we look out upon these last leaves of the ending year. The Creator had a purpose behind every created thing, whether beast, bird, insect, flower or tree. In the midst of all He placed man as his greatest creation. And so we look out upon all that is of this earth. These last leaves are but one example of the universal plan.

In the foreword to his re-published book "The Outermost House", Henry Beston said this: "When the Pleiades and the wind in the grass are no longer a part of the human spirit, a part of the very flesh and bone, man becomes, as it were, a kind of cosmic outlaw, having neither the completeness and integrity of the animal nor the birthright of true humanity."

Edwin Way Teale remarked in his recent book that "Seasons begin in the sky." Perhaps that is true, but the last leaves find their nesting place upon the breast of our good earth, and there lie until the awakening!

Strength for the Day

DETERIORATION IS GRADUAL

Soil erosion is one of the desperate problems with which our country is now faced. Millions of tons of fertile soil are floating down the rivers of this country and going out to sea. Many years ago Professor Simkhovitch of Columbia University, wrote two essays, one entitled "Hay and History", and the other "Rome's Fall Reconsidered." He attributed the fall of the Empire to the depletion of the soil.

Soil erosion is a slow process but an incessant one. Little by little, unless care is taken, the fertility of the soil departs. Much of the ancient world which blossomed as the rose is arid desert today.

Transfer this concept of soil erosion over into the things of the spirit and observe what takes place. Our ideals seldom depart all at once. Little by little they are worn away by the company we keep, the thoughts we entertain, the habits we fall into. Most of all, a decline in religious faith or the neglect of religious duties causes erosion in the spiritual and moral realm to accelerate at an alarming speed.

Watch out for that slow wearing away of right habits and high ideals against which an unquiet conscience often warns you.

DIET IF YOU MUST BUT TAKE CARE OF YOUR HEALTH

Alcohol? That, said the corner druggist to the ladies around him at the PTA meeting, is one thing I never prescribe! He prescribed and sold everything else in the store to the people of the neighborhood before they got sick enough to call the doctor — or before their supply of cash gave out and they had to coast along on credit.

A fast reducing diet? That, I'll tell the man on the gate when I arrive up there, is one thing I never suggested or even approved. Nor any reducing diet at all for girls under eighteen.

Yes, Mr. Peter, I'll explain, I've always advised young women who want to reduce to make the attempt only under the supervision of a physician. And I have always cautioned women over eighteen who "go on a diet" for the purpose of reducing, that it is imperative to supplement a reduction diet or any restricted diet with a suitable daily ration of vitamins and minerals if the desired reduction is to be achieved without sacrificing health, vite, good looks and functional efficiency.

Most people who accumulate superfluous fat after thirty-five have subsisted for many years on a faulty diet — faulty in that it failed to provide enough vitamins and minerals to maintain good nutrition, vite, functional efficiency. When the diet of such persons is suddenly restricted for any reason their health, vite, personal appearance and functional efficiency, long on the borderline, quickly become so impaired that they or their friends are alarmed.

In the pamphlet "How to Lose Weight," mailed on request if you provide stamped self-addressed envelope, you will find not only an outline or pattern for a reducing diet — remember, please, it is only a pattern and not a rigid or unvariable diet— and instructions for supplementing the diet with a daily ration of vitamins and minerals — the vitamins and minerals commonly lacking in reducing diets.

Another thing I shall tell the gate man if he hesitates to let me in is that I have always advised people that it is generally better to reduce at a moderate rate, one or two pounds a week and no more, for the sake of health, vite, good looks and efficiency. The slacker flesh, in 99 out of a hundred cases, is accumulated at a rate of a pound or less a week. Why be in such a hurry to get rid of it? Give your skin a chance to keep up with the other tissues and you won't find yourself all flabby and wrinkled where before you were just plump. Follow the diet pattern in the pamphlet for, say, two days a week, and a regular diet the other five days, of course supplementing your diet with the vitamins and minerals every day. Such an easy-going schedule will reduce you a pound or two a week and you will feel just fine and dandy—provided, of course, that you refrain from gorging or drinking.

By GREGORY CLARK

Cranks and crack-pots just naturally gravitate to the left in politics. They always have. In past ages, reform has always been supported by some pretty wild-eyed characters who must have been a sure trial to the parties they adhered to. But no greater mistake could be made than to presume that all leftish political organizations are dominated by crack-pots and cranks. Some of the shrewdest minds of our generation are at work to the left of centre. Their motives are doubtless pretty average. As among us, wherever we stand, there are some who are inspired by high ideals, as well as those completely devoted to their own personal ends.

In trying to focus our attention on the leftish leaders, so as to appraise them, we can hardly be blamed if the antics of the crack-pots around them succeed in diverting our attention. In a Pullman smoker the other day, one of the leading left wing political personalities in Canada had two of his henchmen travelling with him, apparently returning from a political meeting. One of these henchmen was of the crack-pot type. He was most anxious that everybody else in the smoking compartment should know what distinguished company they had in his leader. So in a loud, scornful tone, he kept leading the conversation again and again into the most elementary declarations of left-wing policy and the rights of what he called the "wukking class." He was a Scot.

Every two or three sentences, he would address his leader by name, so that we could be under no misapprehensions as to his distinguished identity.

I never saw a man so upset and angry as that leader. To no avail he made signs with his eyes, he gave curt answers to his voluble, loud henchman, trying to shut him up. It was no occasion for a recruiting meeting, and the clever leader knew it. But the crack-pot was one of those hopeless doolies who are thorns in the flesh of whoever they champion or befriend.

London, Dec. 3 (Reuters) — The London Sunday Pictorial yesterday published letters from a chief petty officer who went down with the submarine Affray last April in which he described the doomed ship as a "terrible boat" which was "just about finished."

David Bennington's letters to his family were submitted for publication by Oscar Bennington, the young Petty Officer's father, after they had been considered by the admiralty board of inquiry. Bennington was informed that the board had been unable to find any clue which could lead to the supposition that the Affray was not fully seaworthy.

Young Bennington joined the Affray in March, 1950, a little more than a year before she left port last April 19 for an exercise in the channel, dived and was lost with 75 men. Her snorkel breathing tube was found damaged after the disaster.

In the autumn of 1950, as the Affray was preparing for operation in the Mediterranean, David Bennington wrote home: "As far as I can see, the engines have had their time.

"It's come to the stage now when I wonder what the devil is to happen next. I should not be surprised if this boat pays off and went into reserve."

British Columbia Creates Plan To Save Forests

Victoria, B.C. (CP) — British Columbia forest service has come up with a plan that will protect its forest resources and still give the small logging operator a break.

Some time ago the province set up the forest management system, whereby forest interests took over large tracts of forest land. They guaranteed a sustained yield from the tracts by scientific logging.

The logging interests conducted selective logging which gave young trees a chance to grow to maturity.

Small loggers protested the plan worked against them. They were unable to meet the cost of sustained yield planning and claimed they were being frozen out by the big operators.

The forest service now has a plan under which only 50 per cent of the province's 10,000,000 acres of forest land will be available for management licences.

The other 50 per cent will be divided into "public working circles" and will be managed by the forest service in the same way as they forest management districts.

Planning now is under way on several working circles on the mainland coast and Vancouver Island.

C.N.R. May Go Into Trucking Business—Gordon

Toronto, Dec. 3—(CP)—Donald Gordon, president of the Canadian National Railways, hinted Saturday night that Canadian railways may go into the trucking business

He told the annual dinner of the Toronto Railway Club:

"The railways has been jockeyed into a position in which newer forms of transportation are permitted to operate in their specialized fields without having to accept the general obligations which are the historic legacy of the railways.

"Naturally if the railways are to give the public full benefit of co-ordinated techniques, an expansion of their service to include highway competition is inevitable."

He also told the club, composed chiefly of executives of railways operating in Ontario, that "skilful propaganda" is building up an assumption that railways are traditionally unprogressive and lack the desire or ability to be competitive.

"There is a degree of misunderstanding and downright ignorance about railroading, and an assumption that the railways are constantly trying to cover up their own inefficiencies by gouging more money in freight rates."

There has been "spectacular improvement" in service and equipment during the last 50 years, he said, "representing progress and response to the changing conditions and requirements of the environment in which we live."

He said the railways have been setting the pace in modern transportation, although their opportunities were limited because they had to follow regulatory principles which do not hamper other transport systems.

"So long as the present rigidity of regulatory control continues to be imposed on the railways, I have little real hope about simplifying our freight rate structure," he said. "The present freight rate tariff is a structure of unbelievable complexity.

"I am not prepared to say that we can ever achieve a freight rate structure in Canada that will satisfy everyone. But I do claim that an equalizing of competitive conditions will bring that possibility far closer to reality as well as giving the railways a chance to develop along lines best suited to their great responsibilities and great capacities."

Canadian Soldiers Sail for Europe, Part NATO Plan

Quebec, Dec. 3 (CP) — The 1st Canadian Highland Battalion and other 27th Brigade personnel sailed Sunday for Europe to join other Canadian troops placed at the disposal of the North Atlantic Treaty organization defence forces.

The sailing of 700 troops aboard the 13,500 ton Canberra marked the second time the liner has taken 27th Brigade troops to Rotterdam.

The Canberra's first sailing was Nov. 5 with 500 specialists of the 5,500 man brigade. The rifle and infantry battalions and a few other troops of the brigade —about 3,100 men in all—are already stationed in Germany.

From Rotterdam, the Highland battalion and dental, provost and medical corps men, will travel by train to the brigade camp near Hannover in the British sector of western Germany.

The Highland battalion, under the command of Lt.-Col. R. L. Rutherford of Winnipeg, veteran of the Second World War, is made up of companies from the Black Watch, Montreal, the 38th Highlanders, Toronto, the Seaforth Highlanders, Vancouver, the Canadian Scottish, Victoria B.C., and the North Nova Scotia Highlanders.

It was trained at nearby Valcartier camp.

On Hand for Departure

On hand for the departure were Brig. M. P. (Pat) Bogert, director-general of military training at army headquarters in Ottawa, Brig. Frank Fleury, commander of eastern Quebec military area, and Col. D. F. Forbes, infantry director at army headquarters.

Most Rev. Maurice Roy, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Quebec and ordinary of the Canadian armed forces, paid a surprise visit to the ship to bid the troops "bon voyage."

Two men of the battalion's pipe band, which also sailed, piped the archbishop down from the Canberra before the gangplank was pulled away.

The battalion sailed in high spirits as the pipe band aboard the Canberra and the band of the Royal 22nd Regiment on the dock played favorite tunes for them.

A small group of relatives were at the dock.

The sailing was the fifth and last from Quebec since the Brigade's main advance party set out Oct. 21.

Due to the impending close of St. Lawrence River navigation, departures will be from Halifax—probably Dec. 8 and Dec. 13—bringing the brigade to full overseas strength.

Something important you should know about your husband...

You know him better than anyone else in the world. You know his bad points as well as his good ones. But one of his best points may have escaped your notice.

You know that he doesn't do many of the things he'd like to do with his money—because the family income will only go so far. And you know that he might reasonably spend money freely now — without a thought for your future. But he doesn't.

Regularly, he puts aside money to give you the protection of life insurance. True, he may gain benefit from that insurance during his own life, but that isn't why he owns it. The real reason can be found in his concern for your welfare.

Do you co-operate with his efforts to provide for you in this important way? Are you encouraging his habit of thrift?

Right now, it's more important than ever to save money. For every dollar put aside for the future helps to check inflation . . . helps to protect the value of all your money.

So check over your budget. See what new savings you can make!

Life insurance dollars serve you these other ways!

A large part of every life insurance dollar is put to work in investments that bring you— and all other Canadians — extra benefits.

Hundreds of millions of these dollars have been used in this way, helping to provide new schools, highways, power plants, oil pipelines, homes and many other vital projects that raise living standards.

Today, by their thrifty habit of paying life insurance premiums regularly, nearly five million Canadians are providing security for their families . . . working to check inflation . . . and promoting progress throughout the nation!

Skate, Toy Sale Most Gratifying

The annual skate and large toy sale held on Saturday afternoon last by the Home and School Association at Queen Victoria School was both successful and gratifying, according to Mrs. C. Powell, convener of the sale. The splendid response and moderate prices kept the "salesladies" busy as they attempted to find the right size skates for Johnny or Mary or Susie or Joe.

Mrs. Powell was ably assisted by Mrs. Else, Mrs. Soule, Mrs. Palmer, Mrs. Durno and Mrs. Fargey, while Mrs. T. Colden acted as cashier, assisted by Mr. C. Powell.

Chicken Supper Greatly Enjoyed

On Thursday evening, the Women of the Moose, Belleville Chapter 435, with the Loyal Order of Moose 1004, Belleville, held a chicken supper at the Moose Hall, Victoria Avenue. Conveners were G. Mintz, chairman of entertainment; Sr. Regt. Ruth Mintz, Grad. Regt. Kay Donnovon and Guide Marg. Mallette.

Meeting the guests at the door was the hostess Mabel Galbraith, who made each of the 150 guests feel welcome.

Serving the tables were: Joan Lloyd, Lois Akey, Joan Crawford, Marian Mintz, Pauline Van Dueson, Irene Balyx and Grete Galbraith, who were well complimented on the wonderful job they accomplished.

The tables were beautifully appointed with white linen, roses and artificial ferns for centrepieces.

Carving chickens were Florence Carufel and Don Bird. Replenishing plates were Gladys Rich, Luella Bull and Peggie Mintz. Also helping in the kitchen were Irene McMurter, Mary Van Dueson and Lena Murray and looking after the cake and ice cream were Nellie Scrymgeour and Lena Connel.

Convener for the draw on the chickens was Micky Calbury, who had two little girls come to the front to draw the lucky tickets. The winners were Lena Connel, Belleville, and Doris Ashton, of Port Hope. The little girls were Bonnie Jeffery, Trenton and Patsy Donnovon. The chickens left over were auctioned by George Mintz with William Clare and George Bird being the highest bidders. Art Galbraith looked after the selling of tickets at the front door during the evening.

A vote of thanks to all who had participated in making the evening a success was tendered by Gov. William Thompson.

After supper music was supplied by Jack Donnovon, Madeline McCallum and Kay Donnovon with Alice Hall assisting. Irene Balyx sang many numbers which were greatly enjoyed. Calling for the square dances were William Thompson and Freddy Page. Guests attended from Peterborough, Port Hope, Trenton, Cannifton and Belleville.

A special vote of thanks is tendered by the conveners to all who helped them make the evening a success. It is hoped that in the near future another grand evening may be enjoyed together.

PRECIOUS SCRAP

Police are concerned over the increasing thefts of copper, brass and lead from houses and buildings, by thieves who rush it to receivers who convert the scrap into new forms to evade investigation.

Car's Failure Brings Artist To Canada

Winnipeg (CP) — Willi Neuendorff, 54-year-old German artist now three months in Canada, attributes his arrival in the dominion to a dilapidated 1929 model automobile.

The old car wheezed its last breath late in September, 1949, on the outskirts of Winnipeg. In it were Willi's son, Gert, and three Baltic friends. They had planned to go as far as Saskatchewan before the journey was stopped at Winnipeg.

Gert had been in Canada then for a year working on Ontario farms. He headed west to earn enough money to bring over his father and mother.

"The car seemed to know that I would run into luck in Winnipeg and left me stranded here with no money to continue further," he says. "By chance I happened to meet some representatives of a local art firm and showed them reproductions of paintings my father had done."

The firm became interested at once, gave Gert a job and filed an application of admittance for his father and mother. They now live together in a tiny upstairs suite used by Willi as a private studio. One of his first paintings was a portrait of Princess Elizabeth.

Cannifton W.A. Holds Successful Bazaar, Tea

The Sunday School rooms were festive with red and green streamers and evergreen boughs as were the different booths for the W.A. bazaar and tea. The visitors were ushered in by soft Christmas carols, played by Mrs. E. Anderson and greeted by the president Mrs. D. Brenton. The Rev. Merrick after prayer, congratulated the members on their efforts and wishing them success declared the bazaar open.

Everyone seemed happy as they moved from booth to booth. The fancy work and novelties booth was in charge of Mrs. Steele and Mrs. Willis Brenton, showed the useful work woman can do when her spare moments are put to proper use.

Much credit is due Mrs. Carl Ellsworth, leader of the Mission Band and the members for boxing the candy and weighing it; also to Mrs. Kellar who assisted so faithfully. Roll of Honor Commemorates Heroic Women

London (CP) — An illuminated roll of honor, first tribute of its kind to commemorate the deaths in war service of ordinary women at home, has found a final resting place in St. Nicholas Chapel, Westminster Abbey.

To a fanfare of trumpets, the queen took her seat in the sanctuary of Westminster Abbey at a dedication service given in memory of the 241 women named in the roll of honor, and many others who died in the Second World War, "keeping the home fires burning."

"We wanted ordinary people to feel that ordinary people can be commemorated too," said Lady Reading, chairman of the Women's Voluntary Services, when the roll was first shown in public last spring.

Since then the beautifully-embellished volume, with its gold-inscribed parchment pages, bound in red Morocco leather, has toured Britain. The names and citations in the roll represent 34 counties from Renfrewshire to Cornwall.

The roll of honor was brought to the high altar by Claire Evans, the London scribe and illuminator for whom this work has been a labor of love since 1947. Lady Reading then asked the queen to unveil the roll.

The book will rest in an oak chest in the chapel and will be on view to the public. The names recorded for posterity are those of women who died serving hot food and coffee to bomb disposal squads, driving ambulances and caring for the needs of those who overnight became casualties of war.

TAKE ANOTHER LOOK—NOW!

That medicine chest in your bathroom—isn't this a good time to clean it up, to throw out those old things . . . Near-empty bottles, dried-up tubes, medicines that have lost their potency, bits of this and that of no use to you? Take another look—now. Make up a list of your requirements and drop into your drug store for replacements that are fresh and new and fully potent.

Once in a thousand times...

Perhaps only once last month did your pharmacist reach for this particular bottle . . . an uncommon drug not in frequent demand. No law requires this drug to be stocked in any pharmacy—nor the many other rarely-demanded drugs your pharmacist keeps on hand.

But how fortunate we all are to have a man like this, near us—one whose professional sense of responsibility for our welfare leads him to provide so many extra services and safeguards. His professional attitude (every druggist is a graduate pharmacist) is reflected, too, in the spick-and-span appearance of his store—in the fresh, clean stocks of such widely varied kinds of merchandise he keeps for your convenience.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"I Can't Forget Him"— Oh, Yes, You Can!

"A week or two before school opened," writes a teen-ager who signs herself "C.M.", "the boy with whom I had been going steady last summer broke off with me, and I found out that he was going steady with another girl.

"My problem is that I cannot get over him. I still cry over him when I go to bed at night. I think about him constantly, and whenever I look at his picture, I feel so blue that I start crying. Please don't tell me to forget him, because I can't."

You can't forget this boy, "C. M"?

The truth is; I get more than a little impatient with you girls who write me that you're sitting around moping over some boy who brushed you off. Specially when you throw in that line about not telling you to forget him because you can't. When you're sick and go to a doctor, do you tell him what you don't want him to do for you?

Of course, you're not going to forget a boy when you keep his picture around to cry over! Tear the picture up and throw away the pieces! You won't? I thought not.

Empty Misery.

Actually, of course, you don't want to forget him, and have no intention of doing so if you can possibly help it. You really enjoy wallowing in your misery.

As a matter of fact, I wouldn't think of telling you to "forget" this boy. We never forget things by trying to force them out of our minds.

What we can do, is to force ourselves, not to try and drive some particular person out of our minds, but to go with other friends and take a normal part in everyday activities. If we're willing to do that, after a while we find that, in spite of ourselves, we're getting interested in the people we're going with, and the things we're doing, and first thing we know we spend less and less time moping over what happened in the past. We've found something to replace it. That's what we mean by "forgetting" a hurt.

And remember this: No boy ever came back to a girl purely because she sank herself in a pool of tears over him. In fact, you'd better learn right now that there's nothing in the world that drives a male away from a female faster than her tears. Get that fixed in your head and you'll save yourself an incredible amount of trouble when you grow up and acquire, first, a fiance, and later a husband.

Attractive Smile

On the other hand, what does attract the male sex, whether boy or man, is the girl with a smiling face, a friendly attitude, a warm and generous nature, a gay disposition, and a well-developed sense of humor that enables her to keep things in proper proportion and not make mountains out of mole-hills or take herself too seriously.

That kind of girl is never at a loss for boy friends, and if one of them shows signs of straying, she doesn't sit down and wail about it. She chalks it up to the normal way life goes for teen-agers —and for everybody else until they're so old they take no more interest in the opposite sex — and dries her tears, puts on a smile and goes about her business as usual. No crying into pillows for her! No mooning over pictures of the ex-boy friend! And before long her smiling face and friendly manner have attracted another boy in whom she becomes just as interested as she ever was in the first one.

So—handle your problem with good humor and good sense; avoid making a production of your temporary unhappiness — in other words, refrain from dramatizing yourself; stiffen up your will power and keep in step with the rhythm of your crowd. If you do that, then, even though you lose the boy, you'll win something much more important. You'll win your own self-respect, the respect of your friends, and a priceless knowledge of how to take anything that happens to you in your stride.

Food for Thought

Variations in The Lunch Routine

By MARY MOORE

You surprise me sometimes. One day I'll receive a batch of mail bulging with requests for Christmas food recipes, and next day the mail will bring several letters never mentioning Christmas but saying "isn't there something you can do about lunch menus" or "we're fed up with soup and sandwiches for lunch", etc.

One lady asked for a recipe for a Tomato Custard. She says the only ingredients that she can recall are stewed tomatoes, breadcrumbs and eggs. I hope my recipe fills her order. If not, some of you faithful readers and writers will come to our rescue, I am sure.

TOMATO CUSTARDS
(Or Timbales)

One tablespoon butter or margarine, 1 tablespoon flour, 2-3 cup thick part stewed tomatoes (preferably strained or without seeds), 3 eggs, 1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, few grains celery salt, few grains cayenne. Melt butter, stir in flour, then tomatoes until thick. Beat yolks until thick and lemon-colored—then add with seasonings. Beat whites of eggs until stiff and dry, and cut and fold into first mixture. Turn into buttered custard cups, stand in pan of water, and bake at 325 degrees Fahrenheit until firm.

Variation of Tomato Custards:

Use milk instead of tomatoes and serve over them

Tomato Cream Sauce

1-2 can tomatoes (1 1-4 cups), 1 stalk celery, 1 slice onion, 1-4 of a bay leaf, 1 cup white sauce (see below), 1-2 teaspoon salt, shake of cayenne, 1-4 teaspoon soda.

Cook tomatoes 20 minutes with seasonings; rub through strainer, then add soda and white sauce. To make white sauce melt 2 tablespoons butter or fat, stir in 2 tablespoons flour, 1-2 teaspoon salt and 1 cup milk until thick. This is good on Baked Fish or poached eggs.

BAKED RICE AND EGGS WITH TOMATO SAUCE

(This is a standby in one farm home I visit. The children look for it at least once per week.)

One-half cup rice; boiling salted water, 2 cups canned tomatoes. 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 small onion sliced, 2 whole cloves, 1-2 bay leaf, 2 tablespoons each butter and flour, 5 eggs, 3-4 cup buttered crumbs, 2 to 4 tablespoons grated old cheese. Cook the rice in the boiling salted water until tender, then drain, rinse under cold water and keep hot in top of double boiler—uncovered. To the tomatoes add the salt, onion, cloves and bay leaf and simmer 10 minutes. Strain and add the hot liquid to the butter and flour which have been blended. Stir over heat until thick. Spread rice in bottom of greased casserole, carefully slip the eggs onto the rice. Cover with the tomato sauce and sprinkle with cheese. Bake at 275 degrees Fahrenheit,, for about 20 minutes or until eggs are set. Serve at once or eggs will cook a little more and get hard.

TOMATO RAREBIT

Two tablespoons each butter or margarine and flour, 3-4 cup whole milk or thin cream, 3-4 cup stewed or canned tomatoes strained, 1-8 teaspoon soda, 2 cups finely cut cheese, 2 slightly beaten eggs, shake of salt, pinch of mustard, and cayenne. Melt butter, add flour, then stir in milk or cream, and when thick stir in tomatoes mixed with the soda. Stir in cheese and eggs and heat through; add seasonings. Serve on graham toast as soon as cheese is melted. This is excellent because it is so quickly made and so full of flavor.

GOOD MANNERS

Good days are coming . . . . Christmas . . . New Year's! And a good time for good thoughts, good manners, good resolutions.

Writing invitations to carol-singing on Christmas cards

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

This will be the first Christmas we (my husband and I and our four children) have lived here in this friendly town, and everyone has been wonderful to us. We'd like to ask "everyone" to come to our home on the afternoon before Christmas to sing Christmas carols, as was our custom 'back home'. Would it be proper for me to write the invitations to this party on our Christmas cards? If so, would you please suggest a wording?

Viola M.

Yes, indeed. . .proper, festive, friendly! For example, on the inside page opposite the message write: "The Merediths hope that you and the children will come to our house on Monday, the 24th, from four-to-six o'clock, to join us in singing Christmas carols. Please do say you'll be with us!"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it really considered correct now to use napkin rings for the members of the family? I've seen this several times lately, and I'm certainly surprised. Don't I remember that a short time ago, a very short time ago, this was frowned on, considered "old hat"? What's the idea?

W. L.

Yes, it's now quite the thing to use napkin rings for the members of the family. . .the "idea" today is that it's smart to take short-cuts to convenience if the short-cuts can be done in a pleasant way. And increasingly we're seeing the return of lovely old silver napkin rings, as well as the modern ones, from sterling silver ones to the good-looking and just-as-proudly-functional plastic ones from the five-and-ten-cent stores.

Correct form of name for woman signing organization's letter

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Since you have been calling attention to correct forms of signature, particularly for a married woman's signature, I have been noticing the forms of names signed by women to letters of an organization. Today, for example, I received two letters of this kind and on the letterhead of each was the formal name (included in a list of names) of the woman signing. But on one the woman signed (for example) only "Margaret S. Thompson", while on the other the woman signed "Dorothy Brown Hall", and underneath her signature, in parentheses, (Mrs. James Alan Hall). Which is correct?

Reader

In better form, because more convenient for information and immediate identification, is the signature:

Sincerely yours,

Dorothy Brown Hall

(Mrs. James Alan Hall)

(Very often, as a matter of fact, the signer's formal name is printed or typewritten when the letter is printed or typewritten. . . so the woman simply signs her informal name, but with her maiden surname written out, not initialled.)

Fashion Flashes

AN END to fumbling in the handbag for one's compact is promised by a new gadget to be introduced next year. It is a curved bracelet, the stone-studded centre of which lifts up to disclose a compact and mirror.

SIMPLY SUMPTUOUS separates appeared in a recent showing. One beautiful dress consisted of a separate off-shoulder blouse of black silk taffeta which zips down the front, and a matching, very full skirt—both trimmed with French braid and pearl-stemmed tassels. Hip-padding of horsehair accentuates the costume look, and each piece is wearable on its own.

Fanatical Communists Waging Guerilla Warfare in Malaya Prove Big Problem to British

By LIONEL HUDSON

Kuala Lumpur, Malaya (Reuters) — It is just another bend in the road through the quiet Malayan jungle or the monotonous rubber plantations — until guerrilla crossfire shatters the windshield.

For a few dragging minutes, if they live, the occupants of the car are at the frontline of the terror war being waged by the country's fanatical Communists.

Then, at the sound of a bugle or a whistled signal, the guerrillas snatch arms and ammunition from their victims — if they can—and are swallowed up again by the olive green jungle.

The road is open to traffic again.

These ruthless hit-and-run ambushes are the spearhead of the Communist offensive in Malaya—and the main source of weapon supply for the terrorist bands, mostly Chinese, who call themselves the Malayan people's liberation army. They rely on road ambushes to keep their campaign rolling.

Careful Planning.

They plan them painstakingly, sometimes wait patiently for days for a suitable target, and rarely come off second best because they have a strong initial advantage.

Security force leaders admit that one of the most serious military problems in Malaya today is combatting road ambushes.

What is more, the terrorists have been striking more often as the widespread security drive to cut them off from food supplies takes effect.

British troops and Malayan police who have to run the gauntlet of these perilous highways day after day know full well there are stretches where the guerrillas, perched on road banks, can usually kill them at will if they are travelling in "soft" vehicles — without armor plating.

Rubber planters and tin miners know it too. They almost invariably use armored cars or jeeps fitted with bullet-proof steel shields when they leave their barbed wire defenses.

On Defensive

These men in the thick of the emergency tell you that they realize that, in the circumstances, they must remain on the defensive while travelling. Few of them, however, can reconcile the fact that so many police and troops are still such easy prey to roadside snipers, nearly there and a half years after terror broke out.

"If we continue to dish out rifles and Sten guns on a platter to these bandits we'll never break them," commented one experienced guerrilla-hunter.

From all quarters demands are heard for flame throwers, smoke screens, land mines, much more armor plating, and steel helmets for security forces when not engaged in the jungle.

Civilians Unharmed

The terrorists rarely ever shoot at unescorted civilian vehicle on the roads because they know that there is little chance of loot in the form of firearms or food.

They concentrate on police and army parties, especially when there is no armored car in sight, and never attack unless they are sure that they are superior in numbers and fire power.

All units are kept up-to-date on counter-ambush tactics but, as one officer points out, they are of use only to the men who survive the first burst from the terrorists.

"Our guns are always at the ready but at best we only get second shot," he added.

Army authorities stress that like the other two services in Malaya they are still only acting in support of the civil power and have no authority over the conduct of the "anti-bandit campaign."

Shotgun Blast Causes Injury To Man's Leg

London, Ont., Dec. 3—(CP)—Injured by a shotgun blast set off accidentally by his son-in-law, Patrick O'Neill, 50, of R. R. 1, Peterborough, is still in St. Joseph's Hospital, with the fate of his left leg still uncertain.

O'Neill was hunting near Mossley Saturday with his son-in-law, Angus Pecoskie, R. R. I, Mossley, when the accident occurred. Police said the pair had stopped for a smoke, and Pecoskie's shotgun caught in his shirt.

Doctors said last night O'Neill's general condition was satisfactory, but it would be two or three days before it would be known whether his leg would have to be amputated. They said the leg was full of buckshot, and had a compound fracture.

Residence Visa Of Press Chief Is Cancelled

Cairo, Dec. 3 (AP)—The interior Ministry today cancelled the Egyptian residence visa of Fred Zusy, Associated Press chief of bureau in Cairo. Cairo press reports charged him with "bad faith" in his news reports.

An official of the ministry's passport division told Zusy that he must leave Egypt on or before Friday by order of Interior Minister Fouad Serag El Din.

The official declined to explain whether the order was prompted by reports Zusy had written. It was the first official notice to the American of the expulsion order—news of which was carried in Cairo's pres today.

These reports were confirmed last night by Abdel Basit Al Haggagi, director of the press department of the interior ministry, who said Zusy's expulsion was ordered because of "bad faith" in his reporting. He said Zusy had been warned "several times" that his work was "aimed at harming the interests of Egypt."

Zusy denied receiving any such warning.

The American Embassy in Cairo said today it "had made representations" to the Egyptian foreign office about the visa cancellation. This step was taken without any request from the Associated press office in Cairo.

Two Canadian Nuns Sentenced, Three Deported

Hong Kong, Dec. 3—(CP)—A communist court sentenced two Canadian nuns to five-year prison terms yesterday and ordered three others expelled from China during a disorderly public trial in Canton.

Sister Saint Foy (Elizabeth Lemire, La Baie du Febvre, Yamaska County, Que.); Sister Sainte Victory (Germaine Tanguay, Canadian citizen born at Nashua, N. H.); and Sister Saint Germain (Imelda LaPerriere, Pont Rouge, Portneuf County, Que.) each ordered deported.

For years they operated a receiving station to which were brought thousands of abandoned children—many of them dying on arrival. The nuns were arrested nine month ago and held incommunicado in a Canton jail.

L. B. Pearson, Canadian external affairs minister, has called the charges against the nuns "grotesque and unfounded."

(Last night in Quebec, Most Rev. Maurice Roy, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Quebec, called the trial and sentencing "unjust". He said it was an "iniquity" to have brought charges against the nuns "who dedicated their lives" in Chinese missions.)

The trial was held in the open square in front of Canton's Sun Yat Sen memorial hall. (Sun Yat Sen was the founder of the Chinese republic.)

The broadcast said the crowd of 6,000 was made up of religious leaders, former missionary students, medical forkers and government officials.

Chief Justice Wen Hsu-Yuan opened the proceedings with this announcemtn: "The purpose of the people that all remnants of holding this trial today is to assure imperialism will sooner or ater be put to justice under the peoples (communist) law."

Crowd Cheers

The crowd cheered him. Then prosecutor Cheng Po Chen, speaking a heavy Chungking accent, read a long list of counts against the nuns. He said they had slain 2,116 orphans between Oct. 14, 1949—Canton't communist "liberation day"—and last Jan. 14.

Cheng asserted that the defendants' "crimes are comparable to those being committed in Korea by the aggression troops of the United States."

Before he had finished, spectators leaped to the rostrum alongside the prosecutor and hurled charges at the nuns. Cheng called for some to state their own accusations. Because of the shouting by the crowd these could not be heard clearly in the broadcast.

After the trial, the chief justice anounced the nuns would be paraded through Canton's streets so that all could "recognize their vicious features". The red radio did not say later whether such a parade was held.

Leafs Win Pair Over Weekend, Climb Within Two Points Of Detroit

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

TWO IN A ROW!

"Red" Doran's junior Hawklets kicked that Kingston "big ice surface" hex a lusty blow on the seat of the hockey pants Saturday night when they skated to an 8-4 victory, their second in as many nights over Max Jackson's Vics. In fact, reports from the scene state the Hawks were quite at home on the wide open spaces down thataway with Ted DeGray being in his glory. The speedy forward scored three goals, and his puck-ragging when the team was short-handed drew a round of applause from the Kingston fans. George Jacklin came through with another fine performance scoring three and getting an assist while Duke Doran accounted for the remaining paid. Hec Lalonde had three assists. Don Barclay came through with another sparkling performance in the nets as he kicked out plenty of Kingston rubber. The Hawks, now nestling on the top perch of the group ladder get their stiffest test of the season this week when they meet the powerful Lindsay squad here on Wednesday and again at Lindsay on Friday.

* * *

INJURIES AGAIN!

The injury jinx struck at the junior "B's" over the weekend with Billy Strahan out of Saturday night's game with an injured leg. Munro and Harry Brown suffered injuries to ankles in the Saturday night contest.

Three of the four casualties in the senior "B" ranks will likely see action in Peterborough Wednesday night against the Eagles. Vern Goyer's injured toe is coming along nicely while Jud Semark and Trumble who were hurt in the Kingston game here last week will be back in action. Tommy Schreider's injury has been confined to a broken wrist bone, and yesterday Tommy said he expected to be out for some eight weeks.

At the moment the Hawks are leading the group with six points while the Eagles, Petes and Kingston are deadlocked for second spot with four points each. Petes defeated their intra-city rivals on Friday night and the atmosphere up thataway is still sizzling.

* * *

A CLOSE ONE!

Bill Spafford's Glen Roys basketball squad lost a close one to the Peterborough Marines in their opening game of the district court loop on Saturday night. The Marines, always a tough squad to beat on their own court were pushed to the limit by the hard-playing Glens who emerged on the short end of a 48-45 score. Both teams displayed a fine brand of basketball for the first game of the season, but the Glens are fully confident they can take the Petes measure on their own floor. Soules led the pointgetters with 16 with Ketcheson potting 12 and Captain Johnny Hayman, nine. The period scores indicated the closeness of the game, 9-6; 21-17, 32-26 and 48-45. Glens play their next two engagements away and will not be at home until the new year.

A FINE JOB!

A strong note of enthusiastic optimism was apparent at the OMHA annual meeting held in the King Edward Hotel, Toronto Saturday. That minor hockey has undergone remarkable growth is evident in the fact that last year some 12,000 youngsters took part in over 800 teams. Quite a difference to eight teams that started the association fifteen short years ago.

There were no long-winded discussions. As has already been pointed out the efficiency of executives past and present is noted in the fact that not one amendment to the constitution was forwarded by member teams or organizations. The five presented and adopted came from the executive. Herb Parker, dynamic president of last year was acclaimed for the high seat again as were all the major executives with the exception of the second vice president. Five executive members were re-elected including Sam Curry, Tweed, who has been doing a grand job in a large territory for the past few years. The appointment of Albert Watkins, Peterborough to the executive should relieve Sam of some of his worries and work.

The suggestion that the OMHA investigate a blanket insurance for association players was unanimously endorsed. Gerry Simmonds, Gravenhurst, said he had made several queries and one insurance company had submitted a proposal at cost of $1.75 per player for $10 deductible and $250 maximum for injured players. "When we get this cost down to 25 cents per player" laughed Gerry "we'll talk business. Several insurance companies will be contacted.

While the suggestion is all right, some teams in the smaller communities might have difficulty financing the business. They have enough trouble as it is paying entry fees and costs of equipment. However, if the rate is brought within reasonable limits it is likely arrangements can be made. Parents, this corner feels, would be only too willing to help with the costs.

The "two-referee" question caused some discussion, and it was revealed that Peterborough and Brantford had been using this system with fine success. It has curbed rough play and all the teams using it were "for it". It was pointed out however that it is a breach of constitution to use two referees, but the loophole is, it can be arranged with the consent of the district convener. As this department has suggested before, the two referee system is far more effective in curbing rough play, and general officiating than is the referee-linesman idea. Let's have it.

ATTENTION BANTAMS!

Games played in the Belleville Minor Hockey Association Bantam League to date have been ruled as exhibitions because of an unfortunate mix-up in the age groups.

Several of the players have been playing bantam in the belief that they were eligible. Bantams include all boys who are under 14 years of age or who became 14 after the 1st of November.

The teams are being revised accordingly with a new schedule being drawn up this week. All boys who were over age are asked to report to the midget group on Thursday night.

All players of peewee age are requested to attend a meeting at the Y on Tuesday night at 7:30.

Triumph Over Rangers, Wings; Blues Drop Two, Hawks Split; Bentley Scores 200th Goal

By JACK SULLIVAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Now that the football season is just a memory for this year, nobody can say that hockey, at least the National League variety, isn't making hay with the sports-page headlines after weeks of playing second fiddle to the gridiron goings-on.

The pros came up with their biggest weekend of the N. H. L. campaign with 34 goals in five games, the best (anyway, the longest) free-for-all of the 1951-52 schedule and Max Bentley's 200th National Hockey League goal.

The boys fattened up their averages, particularly Toronto Maple Leafs who picked up 10 goals—a high-powered 8-2 Saturday victory over New York Rangers and a rough-house 2-1 decision over Detroit Red Wings Sunday. The double victory left Leafs only two points behind the league-leading Wings.

Black for Rangers

It was a black-bordered weekend for the Rangers and goalkeeper Chuck Rayner. The big foghorn-voiced netminder probably is hoarse today after Chicago Black Hawks sent the Blueshirts into the cellar position with a 6-4 decision at Chicago Sunday.

In all, Rayner allowed 14 pucks past him in the 120 minutes of weekend play, the worst showing of any team this year.

Montreal Canadiens remained in third place with a split in their weekend doubleheader. They defeated Chicago 4-2 Saturday and lost 4-1 at Boston Sunday as the Bruins picked up their first home victory of the season before 8,063 fans.

Toronto Maple Leaf Gardens rocked with the cheers of 13,612 spectators Saturday when Bentley, 31-year-old wheat farmer from Delisle, Sask., bagged the 200th goal of his N. H. L. career which started with the Hawks in the 1940-41 game. The Leafs picked up 22 points in the Ranger game.

Things weren't so easy against the Wings last night, although the Stanley Cup champions held a 2-0 lead on goals by Cal Gardner and Harry Watson before Sid Abel scored for Detroit in the second period. Then the fireworks started.

Fireworks Start

Eight players got into the act, four from each team, and it took officials nearly 20 minutes to straighten things out and stop the verbal wrangling that eventually involved general manager Jack Adams of Detroit. Seven assorted penalties were handed out to five men for a total of 28 minutes.

If the players have any issues to settle, they'll be given the chance at Toronto Wednesday when their two clubs meet again.

Rangers held a 3-2 first period edge over the Hawks and went into the final 20 minutes in a 4-4 tie before Chicago, paced by Bill Mosienko who scored two and assisted in three other goals, came up with the winners. A crowd of 10,117 saw the game.

Boston Bruins, who haven't had much luck after an early-season spurt, sewed up the game Sunday night against Canadiens with a 2-1 second-period lead on goals by recruits Dave Creighton and Jack McIntyre from Hershey in the American League. Veterans Dunc Fisher and Milt Schmidt wound up the Boston scoring in the final period.

Bruins had gone nine straight games on home ice without a victory and had not taken a decision anywhere since they won Nov. 4 in Chicago. Dick Gamble, who scored a goal in Montreal's Saturday victory over the Hawks, netted the lone Canadiens tally.

Browns, Rams Appear Headed For Grid Title

By JOE FALLS

New York, Dec. 3 (AP)—With two weeks to go, it seems like a good bet that the Clevelard Browns and Los Angeles Rams again will meet for the National Football League championship.

Both took long strides toward that goal yesterday by racking up impressive, one-sided victories.

The Browns moved to within one game of clinching the American Conference title by smashing the Chicago Cardinals, 49-28, behind Otto Graham's brilliant pass work.

And Los Angeles took over the top spot in the National Conference with a 42-17 victory over the once-mighty but now-ordinary Chicago Bears.

This victory, coupled with Detroit's loss to San Francisco, dropped the Lyons from first place and all but ended the Bears' hopes for the conference crown.

San Francisco, playing the roll of spoiler, upset Detroit, 20-10.

Los Angeles (7-3-0) and Detroit (6-3-1) collide next Sunday on the west coast in the game that could decide the conference title.

Meanwhile, the dogged New York Giants retained their slim hopes in the American Conference by blanking Pittsburgh, 14-0. However, Cleveland (9-1-0) can end this race by defeating Pittsburgh next Sunday. The Giants have a 7-2-1 record, their only losses coming to the Browns.

In other games—which had no bearing on the leaders—the New York Yanks won their first game of the season, shading Green Bay 31-28, and Philadelphia outlasted the Washington Redskins 35-21.

Marlies Beaten By St. Michaels; Share Top Spot

(By The Canadian Press)

Toronto St. Michael's kept their inter-city rival Marlboros from claiming sole possession of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A League leadership yesterday when they handed the Maple Leaf farm club a 5-2 setback before 4,245 Toronto fans.

The win boosted the second-place college crew to within six points of top slot and left the Marlies and Guelph Biltmores deadlocked atop the 10-team standings.

Saturday night the Marlies moved into a tie for the league leadership when they drubbed St. Catharines Teepees 7-1 on the losers' home ice while Guelph Biltmores were stalled in Galt when the fourth-place Black Hawks came up with a 7-6 victory.

Other O.H.A. Junior A tussles Saturday saw Waterloo Hurricanes chalk up their third straight victory—5-3 over St. Michael's at Waterloo while the cellar-dwelling Windsor Spitfires downed Kitchener Greenshirts 6-3. Oshawa edged Barrie Flyers 4-3 in the fifth Saturday game.

Stratford Indians increased their Ontario Hockey Association Senior A lead to give points Saturday when they clipped second-place Hamilton Tigers 5-2 at Stratford. Sarnia Sailors moved back into a tie for fourth place with Owen Sound by dumping the Mercury's 9-4.

Up north, the league-leading Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds lost their second Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior A game of the season by bowing 6-4 to the tail-end North Bay Black Hawks. In Sudbury, the miners clipped the Wolves 4-2 for a second-place deadlock in the loop.

Panthers Win Intermediate Title From West in Lacklustre Grid Tilt

Hamilton, Dec. 3. (CP)— The Hamilton Tiger-Cats may have been eliminated from the Grey Cup Hunt, but nothing stopped Hamilton Panthers in their quest for intermediate grid fame.

Saturday the intermediate crew blanked Norwood-St. Boniface Legionnaires 18-0 in Canada's first east-west intermediate football final. With the win went the Percy E. Robinson Memorial trophy, given in honor of the late secretary of the Canadian Rugby Union.

The intermediate title was Hamilton's second grid gain in two weeks. Just 14 days before, the Tiger-Cat Juniors swamped Edmonton Leafs 22-1 for the Canadian Junior crown.

With a record crowd of close to 10,000 looking on, the easterners gave their visitors little chance to score, even though the Westerners held Panthers to a 1-0 score throughout three-quarters of the tussle. A 17-point final clinched the issue.

Ordinary Affair

With the exception of the gate, the game was a rather ordinary affair. The travel-weary St. Boniface Club, who had arrived by train a few hours before, failed to put on a convincing show. It was their first game in five weeks and they were stale, despite continuing practice sessions.

At the turnstiles, the whirring gates put the Hamilton Club back in the black after a money-losing season and probably did more for intermediate football than anything in the past quarter-century. An ambitious group of sportsmen had worked hard to make the affair a success and earned much of the credit.

Play was mostly along the ground with the winners racking up 19 first downs to three for the westerners. Unbeaten in 13 games this season, the Hamilton crew were highly favored and showed their stuff in the final session after Glen Dawson booted a first quarter single.

Bill Melnick and Fred Hamilton ploughed across for Majors while Joe MacFarlane booted two singles to make up for the attempted converts which failed in both cases. The Panthers' final five points came when Bernie Saunders intercepted a St. Boniface pass on the west's 45-yard line and galloped untouched down the sidelines for the Majors.

Panthers tried nine forward passes, completing three and having one intercepted. Legionnaires attempted 14, but completed only three. They had four intercepted, one for the final Hamilton touchdown.

Hawks Defeat Kingston 8-4 In Rough, Boisterous Game To Take Over Junior Lead

Belleville Hawks took over the lead of the junior 'B' group in Kingston Saturday night defeating the Kingston Vics 8-4 for their second consecutive win over Max Jackson's crew. Hawks lead the group, by the margin of one point over the second place Lindsay Kinsmen.

The game was a wild boisterous affair with no less than 22 penalties being handed out by referee Pete Nye of Peterborough, 13 of them going to the Hawks. Four major sentences were handed out with Wilson and Lalonde guilty for the Hawks and D. Senior and P. Hagarty sitting out for five minutes for the Vics. Wilson was the bad man of the Belleville squad with a major and three minors.

The first period perhaps saw the best hockey of the game but the second and third developed into near-Donnybrooks with both squads carrying sticks, elbows and knees high. Referee Nye started to clamp down from the first face-off and it worked fairly well for the first chukker but tempers flared in the last two heats and the game assumed a steady parade to the hoosegow.

Never Headed

The Hawks scored the only goal of the first period when Duke Doran sizzled the puck past B. Senior in the Vics net and from then on the Doran crew never looked backwards. Don Barclay in the Hawks nets played a starry game throughout standing out especially in the first period when he hurled back the Vics attackers. Again in the hectic third heat, the blond goalie rose to heights with an uncanny display.

The Hawks raced to a four-goal-margin in the second period with Doran hitting the hemp for the second counter 40 seconds after the session opened. Two minutes later George Jacklin and Hector Lalonde teamed up in a neat passing play for the Hawks third goal with the former hitting the mesh. The duo raced in again five minutes later and Jacklin again took Lalonde's pass to put the Hawks four up.

Play was rugged, rough and rollicking with 12 penalties being dished out by the official. Wilson drew a minor and major with P. Hagarty also drawing a major sentence.

The desperate Vics, four goals down tore into the attack at the beginning of hostilities in the third heat and Redmond broke the scoring ice for the homesters on the second play of the game, beating Barclay when he took N. Hagarty's pass from close in. Ted DeGray, one of the Hawk's outstanding stars of the night flitted through the Vics team to get that goal back but Vics again hit the mesh later when Chevrefils combining with Mulholland slipped the rubber home to make the count 5-2.

DeGray, Jacklin Get Three

Jacklin got his hat trick soon after, firing the rubber home following a neat combined effort with Lalonde and Pat Gilmour. Vics, however, roared back into the picture with two quick goals, Reid scoring with assists from Vallier and B. Senior, and a minute later D. Senior raced in to score alone.

Ted DeGray had the spectators standing seconds after when he sifted through the Vics team to score the Hawks' seventh goal and with a minute to go he repeated the performance to end the sniping for the evening.

DeGray, Duke Doran, George Jacklin, Hector Lalonde and Don Barclay scintillated for the Hawks with the former outstanding. Strahan was unable to play because of an injury incurred on Friday night.

DeGray and Jacklin led the Hawks scoring parade with three goals each with Uuke Doran getting the remaining two. Hector Lalonde was credited with three assists. Pat Gilmour got one.

Redmond, D. Senior, Chevrifils and Reid were the Vics snipers.

Five Big Major League Questions, Problems of Minor Loop Convention

By JOE REICHLER

Columbus, O., Dec. 3—(AP)—Five big major league questions remained to be answered and five important minor league problems waited to be solved as the minor leagues opened their golden jubilee convention here today.

Some 1,200 baseball people representing 49 leagues from all corners of the nation were in attendance.

These are the questions:

1. Will Eddie Stanky manage the St. Louis Cardinals?
2. Will Joe DiMaggio announce his official retirement?
3. Will Ted Williams be traded?
4. Will the New York Yankees get Ned Garver?
5. Will the Brooklyn Dodgers get Ewell Blackwell or any of the other star pitchers of the Cincinnati Reds?

The five problems confronting baseball, are open classification for the higher minors; radio and television inroads on minor league attendance; high school rule; abolition of 24-hour recall of players sent to lower classification and trimming of big league roster from 25 to 23 players; placing an eighth club in, the International League.

The cold war between owners Fred Saigh of the St. Louis Cardinals and Horace Stoneham of the New York Giants continues as the canny Redbirds boss declared he has three other candidates in mind besides the Giants' scrappy second baseman, Stanky.

The Giants have asked for outfielder Chuck Diering and southpaw Max Lanier. Saigh refuses to part with any of his pitchers. He has offered a second string infielder along with Diering for Stanky.

Lou Boudreau has just about decided to take Ted Williams' name off the market. The new manager of the Boston Red Sox is not satisfied with any of the offers he has had for his star slugger.

Buzzy Bavasi, young energetic vice-president of the Dodgers, said he was still hopeful of landing Ewell Blackwell, Howie Fox or German Wehmeier of the Reds. He also was seeking righthander Bob Bush of the Chicago Cubs.

Minor league president George M. Trautman said he was in favor of the open classification, keeping the high school and the abolition of the 24-hour recall.

The new classification creates a class midway between the triple A and the majors," he said. "It would mean that a player would have to have five, instead of four, years in the minors before he could be drafted."

Trautman said he believed the current 24-hour recall rule was bad.

"Bringing up kids from the minors after they have endeared themselves to the hearts of the fans in a particular city is dangerous" Trautman said. "It kills off the interest and attendance in that town."

An amendment wiping out all restrictions on televising and broadcasting of games is on the agenda.

"Radio and television has hurt us a lot," said the red-haired boss of the minors. "Our attendance fell off 20 per cent. Since 1949 we have dropped from 43 million attendance to 28 million."

The two first-place clubs of the American Hockey League's eastern and western divisions were defeated in Sunday games.

Johnny McCormack of the Bisons led the attack upon his former mates with two goals. The other Buffalo scores were made by Eddie Mazur and Les Hickey. Andy Barbe, Tim Horton and George Armstrong tallied for the visiting Hornets.

Playing at home, St. Louis protected its second-place margin of two points over Cincinnati in the circuit's western division.

OMHA to Investigate Possibility Of Insurance for Member Players

By GEO. CARVER
Sports Editor

The largest convention in the history of the Ontario Minor Hockey Association gave its executive full authority to investigate the possibilities of blanket insurance to cover all players under its jurisdiction at the 18th annual meeting held in the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, on Saturday.

The association was told it was in receipt of one proposal from an insurance company which would insure all players at a cost of $1.75 per capita under a policy calling for ten dollars deductible and a maximum of $250 for injuries. With its new power, the executive will investigate all angles in an effort to bring the cost to a minimum. If a satisfactory arrangement is made, teams will be asked to include insurance premiums with entry fees.

Endorse Five Amendments

Five proposed amendments were endorsed by the convention with the "linesman - referee" article producing lengthy discussion. Brantford, Peterborough and some other centres preferred the two-referee system while others wanted the linesman-referee set-up. Two referees may now be used if the consent of the district convener is given.

The convention also endorsed a motion that any team requesting neutral referees after a game has been played in a home-and-home series, must bear the cost of the officials.

No refunds of protest fees will be made to clubs submitting and losing protests. Players in C and D series must not sign for or play in two series. Life members were restricted to eight. Only signed players and permit holders, stick boy and trainers will be allowed on the players' bench.

Importation of players from one centre to another for a season was stopped by an amendment that said the player must be a resident of the community he plays for prior to November 1st and a continuous resident thereafter. Exceptions were given to players moving from one locality to another with their parents.

In his report Secretary Jack Christie pointed out the growth of the association "which has never looked back since its inception in 1935". 848 teams were registered with 330 entering the playdowns. This meant 12,740 players took part in OMHA or affiliated leagues. Christie deplored the lack of attendance at playoff games and urged efforts be made to increase it.

Curry Re-elected

Twelve nominees stood for election to the executive with two contesting the second vice presidency. Fred Norman, Simcoe defeated R. Kinchsular, Whitby for the latter post while five executive members were returned to office. These included Sam Curry, Tweed, Frank Doherty, Thorold, Ted Elmes, Galt, Jack Oakes, Strathroy and Gerry Simmons, Gravenhurst. New members are Albert Watkins, Peterborough and Frank Cudmore, Wallaceburg. Defeated were Frank Black and Bill Campbell, Oshawa; Jim Austen, Stouffville; B. Schram, Port Dover and Dr. Robert Storey, Collingwood.

Outstanding tributes were paid at the banquet following the business session. Merv. Duke, Elmira public school principal, was presented with the Honor Award Trophy for outstanding work over a period of seven years in minor hockey. Overtime Vital Part of Hockey Says Boucher

Toronto, Dec. 3 — (CP) Frank Boucher, general manager of the New York Ranger Hockey Club, Saturday reiterated his opinion that overtime hockey is "a partial solution to the attendance problems which plague three United States teams in the National Hockey League."

He was speaking to a general meeting of the Toronto Hockey League.

"Overtime is a vital part of hockey," he said. "We should reinstitute the 10-minute sudden-death overtime period to convince the fans that we are at least trying to come to a decision."

"The game of hockey, like all things, should progress. We can get rid of the red line, but there must be something positive to replace it."

Elimination of the red line would allow players to shoot from their own end of the ice at the opposition goal without being called for icing the puck if it misses.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

There is a minnie for every bid in bridge. Any bid by any player in any spot shows a specified minimum. The values promised by that bid should not fall below that minnie.

A takeout double shows a minnie that is not less than an opening bid of one. Among other things, it shows a minnie of five tricks. No opening bid or takeout double should contain less.

A takeout double forces partner to keep the bidding open. If no bid intervenes, partner must bid to keep the bidding open. Therefore, such a bid may be with an extreme minnie; a trickless hand.

How, then, could a player in such a spot show a strong hand? By making a jump bid. And a jump bid is a signal that promises enough tricks to make a game. That is, with what partner has already promised.

The takeout doubler promises a minnie of five tricks. The jump response promises the balance of tricks needed to make a game. So the balance depends on whether the jump is in a minor or a major suit.

Suppose the responder to the doubler jumps in a minor suit. He shows a minnie of six tricks. Because it takes 11 tricks to make a game in a minor suit.

Suppose the responder to the doubler jumps in a major suit. He shows a minnie of five tricks. Because it takes only 10 tricks to make a game in a major suit.

South opponent starts with an opening bid of one heart. Your partner in west doubles for takeout. If north passes, your reply is two spades with this east hand:

♠K 10 4 2
♥9
♣J 4 3 2

Do you have enough for this jump? Count one trick for each high card (ace or king or queen) and one for each short card. The three highs and two shorts in hearts are five tricks.

Your minnie should never be too skinny.

Men's Commercial Bowling League

Star Welding topped the loop on Friday night with a 3733 three game score, high for the year, and took seven points from Rockets in the process. They still remained one point behind Boziaks, however, as the latter defeated O'Neil Sales by the same margin.

Stephens-Adamson were defaulted seven points by Legionnaires while Welding Gases, Gourley Motors and Moose Lodge rolled to 5-2 wins over Alemite, Mead-Johnson and Balyx Brothers.

Notable scores for the night were made by prexy Jimmy Doig 854, Jack Fitzgerald 779, Art Whalen 778, Stew Hill 744, Jack Young 724, Joe Valchar 718, Max Peoples 705 and "Doc" Vance 702.

With one-third of the season spent, the records show Gar Anderson leading the loop with an average of 238. "Lefty" Reid's triple of 983 will be hard to improve on as will the 375 single by Joe Valchar.

Other notable triples have been made by Joe Valchar 871, Gar Anderson 869, Jimmy Doig 854 and Vince Sagriff 834. Jack Fitzgerald has a single game of 369, followed by "Sugar" Martin 354, "Lefty" Reid 354, 353, and Jim Barriage 353. Star Welding hold high team average of 1102 per game.

League standing still finds Moose Lodge still holding a six-point edge over Boziaks with 73 points to the later's 67. Star Welding follow with 66, after which come Gourley Motors 51, Rockets 45, O'Neil Sales 45, Welding Gases 45, Stephens-Adamson 43, Alemite 39, Balyx Brothers 31, Mead-Johnson 25 and Legionnaires hold down the cellar with only 16 points.

Glen Roys Lose To Petes 48-45 In Hoop Opener

By DON DOLAN

In Peterborough on Saturday night the Glen Roy A. C. basketball team, local representatives in the Quinte Basketball League dropped a close 48-45 decision to the Peterborough Marines.

The Petes, paced by Nipper Payne and Harold Grafstein were never behind after the first few moments of play, although their lead never extended to more than eight points at any one time. At the end of the first quarter the Petes led 9-6; at the end of the half it was 21-17 and the third period score was 32-26.

The game was played on a very small floor, thus making it quite difficult to set up plays. Also, because of the smallness of the playing surface, the game was rough. Players had to group together and many fouls resulted.

Score Free Throws

One of the major factors in the Peterborough victory was the ability of the Peterborough team to hit consistently from the free throw line. The winners threw in 8 free throws in 13 attempts while the Belleville team made only 7 out of 15.

As was mentioned previously the game was very close. Not until the final minute was the Peterborough victory assured.

In the second half, the Glen Roy squad paced by a fifteen-point scoring splurge by Doug Soules came very close to tying the score but in the final minute, two quick baskets by Peterborough put the game on ice.

Nipper Payne of Peterborough led all of the scorers by dumping in 19 points. Next high scorers for the winners were Grafstein with 11 and Kidd with 8.

Top point getters for the Glen Roy quintet were Soule, Ketcheson, and Hayman who contributed 16, 10 and 9 points respectively.

On Wednesday, December 5th, the locals will make their second start of the season when they will journey to Picton.

Lineups:—

Peterborough 48: Payne 19, Dadson, Grafstein 11, MacPherson, Trimm 2, Kidd 8, Ceresino 1, Thompson 7.

Belleville 45 — Hayman 9, Ketcheson 10, Batchelor 2, Summers 2, Watson, Muirhead 6, Soule 16, Fitzpatrick, Garrow, Lockyer.

FRANKFORD

Rockets Break Losing Streak

Frankford—The big news in the Frankford Bowling League is that Ed Tomeceks' Rockets have done it. After four consecutive seven point losses, the Rockets fought back with a vengeance with Russ Hogg's Inkspots taking the brunt of their fury. In response, the Inkspots said they got the Christmas spirit early. Three other contests of lesser importance also took place. The Fireballs, under the leadership of Jack Farley held onto first place taking five points from Harry Hearn's Hotshots. Herb Rankin rolled a 357 game, to cop the current league uhigh single. The Pinpoppers stayed in the game as Gene Lohnes' crew took five from Ray Scot's Skeeters. Bob Morglan's Bobsmob took four points from Ross Huffman's Crackpots, losing the high total.

An executive meeting was held after bowling and it was decided that the Frankford Bowling League would hold their turkey roll on December 13.

New Storm Hits North California

San Francisco, Dec. 3 (AP)—Another storm blew into northern California today, but less severe than Saturday's gale, which forced closing of the Golden Gate Bridge for the first time in its 14 year history.

Rain started falling late last night from San Francisco bay north. High winds were expected today as the new storm moves inland and southward.

Northern California still was repairing power and communication lines and clearing debris left by Saturday's deluge. Two duck hunters were drowned and several others endangered by the storm.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

For Tuesday, December 4

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—Some surprises; some matters slightly adverse, some not adjustable now. Take all in stride, like a true Arien. Sufficient will and desire without excess flare can overcome much.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—Waste no time skirting about duties and tasks to be performed. Get diligently to them with proper desire. The very level-headed attack itself will be the winner in many contests.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—In acting, speaking, be accurate; refer to facts exhorting a cause or proposition. Have a clear, honest start which everyone needs this day of uncertainties, misunderstandings.

June 22 to July 23—(Cancer)—Mild in spots. Watch each commitment carefully; avoid all time-wasting contention. Willingness to co-operate lessens trial of tasks, gets assistance in return. Don't heed flatterers.

July 24 to August 22—(Leo)—Things may appear difficult, but keep your humor and you have battle of day half won. Make it plain to all that you are in there fighting for right.

August 23 to September 23—(Virgo)—You mentally keen, fair-minded zodiacal natives have a rather rough course in places. Don't accept anything you dislike after proper study, unless its your duty. Logic!

September 24 to October 23—(Libra)—No time for loose, foolish efforts on important issues, or half-heardtedness. That's not like the true you anyway. Lead others where you can; use freedom, privileges, rightly.

October 24 to November 22—(Scorpio)— Not all encouraging. Freeze out unruly emotions, look at things sanely, in rational manner. Be agreeably persuasive. This and real effort can bring many advantages.

November 23 to December 22—Sagittarius—Peruse money transactions, and any matters where immediate returns are expected with special care. Your initiative will eventually produce good results. Exercise tact, too.

December 23 31 January 21—(Capricorn)—Lack of progressive influences should not stop you Press forward industriously, work for future strength. Hold to rules, but be amenable.

January 22 to February 20—(Aquarius)—Don't go as the wind blows, rather as your better judgment tells you. Some special interests strongly favored now. Test values first. Are they for you? Watch tricky condition.

February 21 to March 20 —(Pisces) — Beware subtle talk, issues that may seem harmless but carry trouble. Don't let doubt or fear into your picture. Diplomacy in private affairs essential.

YOU BORN TODAY are innately generous, sometimes to a fault. Are active, energetic in business, and socially. You pitch in with real stimulus. Usually religiously inclined; fond of trying the unusual, something new, and here we urge you investigate to know first all about what you are about. Will travel readily. Do not let little things make you gloomy; avoid forcing opinions, rather study the art of astute persuasions. Bright future if you stay reasonable and within your capabilities.

Birthdate of: Thomas Carlyle, famed essayist, historian; Edith L. Cavell, nurse, martyr; Deanna Durbin, actress.

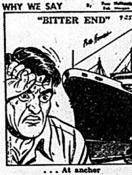
WHY WE SAY



. . . At anchor

Many people have guessed how this popular expression began, but few have hit upon the real explanation. The "bitter end" comes from two small fixtures on the decks of ships which are called bitts. When a boat is at anchor, a cable is stretched and at the end of the cable are bitts . . . so naturally when the ship goes to the extreme limit of its anchor cable, it is at the "bitter end."

Sleek Addition to Canada's Navy

As it slid gracefully down into St. Lawrence River at Montreal, H.M.C.S. St. Laurent presented impressive evidence of efficiency of Canada's three-year $200,000,000 naval shipbuilding program. As much equipment as possible is concentrated below decks giving the 360-foot sub-killer a low streamlined silhouette. This feature also affords added crew protection against atomic bombardment. The 2,500-ton St. Laurent and her 13-sister ships now under construction, constitute most modern units of two ocean fleets of 100 ships which Canada expects to complete by 1954. — Central Press Canadian.

Pigs and Hens Help to Apply Brakes on Climb

Ottawa, Dec. 3—(CP)—Pigs and hens are helping to apply the brakes to a record climb in living costs.

With pork and eggs now reaching peak production, prices of the two items have eased. Lower pork and egg prices helped take most of the steam out of September's cost-of-living index rise.

How successful the hens and pigs will be in October, will be disclosed tomorrow when the Bureau of Statistics issues its latest survey of the prices barometer.

During September the index made the smallest climb in five months—six-tenths of a point to a peak of 190.4. This compared with the record monthly climb of 4.5 points in February. The index is based on 1935-39 prices equalling 100.

During that month, the bureau observed, lower pork and egg prices offset gains in other food items to push down the food sub-index for the second consecutive month.

So far this year, the index has made one climb after another, boosting the index 15.2 points to 190.4 from 175.2 in January.

New Trend Appears

But lately a new trend appears to be developing on the prices horizon. The bureau reports that during October, wholesale prices declined for the third successive month. The general index, based on 1935-39 prices equally 100, declined to 239.6 in October from 240.1 in September and 241.5 in August. In July it was 244.2.

Whether that will have any immediate impact on retail family budget items is questionable.

On perishable goods, retail prices are quick to follow declines on the wholesale side, but on durable goods, storekeepers sometimes stockpile goods for months ahead. They are not in the market for new supplies until they have disposed of current stocks.

Rents will be included in tomorrow's estimate.

Food, 251.1 (249.7); rent 142.7 (142.7); fuel and light, 150.2 (149.5); Clothing, 213.8 (205.9); home furnishings, 200.1 (199.1); miscellaneous, 144.3 (144.0).

Australians Told Of Strange Subs

Melbourne, Australia, Dec. 3 (Reuters)—A report that unidentified submarines were sighted off the northern coast of New Guinea was dismissed today as "not feasible" by Navy Minister William McMahon.

Neither the navy nor the air force had been sent to the island, 90 miles north of Australia, he added.

Today's Melbourne Argus had reported that a foreign submarine recently surfaced near Emirau Island, west of the Admiralty Islands, and landed two men who inspected an airstrip there.

The Argus said another submarine surfaced off Finschhafen, on the north New Guinea coast, some time ago and was seen by residents.

Canadians Entering Germany Peacefully for First Time

By DOUGLAS HOW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

With the Canadians in Germany (CP) — The Canadians are marking out new military frontiers over here. A tough old seadog named Ginger and two little German girls reminded them of that on the way in.

They met Ginger off Dover in the thick of a November night. Ginger is a North Sea pilot who brought several Canadian officers out to board the troopship.

He runs a small motorcraft and she came out of the wall of darkness and pins of light that were Dover at night and bobbed frantically far below the soldiers on the rail.

A young soldier shouted down, "What place is this?"

"Never heard of it," shouted the young, young soldier.

Coaches Craft

He went about his work, coaching the tossing craft against the lowered ladder, a hard and violent thing to do, and the men got off the launch at last and Ginger — by then an indelible, cussing character — went away across the heaving seas and his farewell words were right out of the heart and lexicon of England.

"Cherrie, mites," he bellowed, "all the best."

And it came suddenly to someone at the rails that one of the strange facts about this movement of Canadians into Germany is that for the first time they are bypassing the motherland of Britain on the way.

The little girls were at Bentheim, first stop inside Germany. The train stopped there and the soldiers leaned out of the windows and watched some Germans load machinery on a flatcar. The women ignored them.

Children Gather

Slowly a number of children began to gather. They watched the German workmen and then, almost imperceptibly, they strayed nearer the train so that, in time, ten children were leaning against a rail a few feet from the soldiers.

They were quiet and they didn't talk to the soldiers nor did they seem to watch them though they were face to face. It was a strange thing. The children were there because of the train and the soldiers, but they talked among themselves and acted as though the soldiers weer not there at all.

Then as the train rolled away, they looked up but only two of the children waved and they were very young. They were so young that they would not even be as old as the new peace.

It came to someone then that though this is the first time the Canadian army has gone into Germany the easy way, the yesterdays live on.

Vancouver Builds Huge Canyon Dam For Water Supply

Vancouver (CP) — Sixty-two years after it was envisioned by the builder of Vancouver's first waterworks, a giant dam is being put across the Capilano River on the north shore of Burrard Inlet.

H. B. Smith, who constructed the city's first waterworks in 1889, visualized the dam which would store enough water to satisfy Vancouver's needs.

The $8,500,000 dam is being built in a narrow, deep canyon where the Capilano cuts through solid rock.

When it is finished in December, 1953, 185,000 cubic yards of concrete and 1,800 tons of steel will have gone into it. Then, when the spill gates are closed, a man-made lake will be filled with 13,000,000,000 gallons of mountain water.

The domestic water outlet will supply 220,000,000 gallons of water for the city and surrounding districts daily.

Because of the narrowness of the canyon, preliminary work on the dam has to be done almost completely from the air, with derricks and overhead wires.

All in Day's Work

It is an everyday story to lower a 15-ton power shovel 300 feet down the face of the canyon to a 10-foot-wide ledge.

To carry workers and small tools up to a 60-degree angle to the top of the canyon, the contractors have built the shortest railway in the province.

A moving platform, officially noted by the department of transport as a railway, rattles up and down a 300-foot section of greased beams to and from the water's edge.

Work is being completed on a 31½ foot wide tunnel blasted through a 963-foot section of the mountain-side. The river will be diverted through that while the dam is being built.

All trees and debris below the water line of the man-made lake are being cleared away to prevent water contamination.

The dam will be called the Cleveland dam, for Dr. E. A. Cleveland, commissioner of the Greater Vancouver water board since its inception in 1926.

Allied Authorities Want Germans To Make Arms

A responsible allied source said today one allied leader in Germany already has proposed to his government that the west should permit full-scale German arms production. He declined to identify the official or his government.

This source said the argument runs like this:

Mass production of tanks, planes and artillery would speed up the equipping of 12 German divisions planned for the European army.

The Germans could also help equip the armies of Italy, Belgium and The Netherlands which now are receiving weapons from Canada and the United States.

This would insure Britain and France priority on American arms shipments.

The source emphasized that the question had not progressed beyond the talking stage. It is certain to encounter stiff opposition from many quarters

The informant said some high-ranking officials here fear the cost of arming German contingents for a European army may be prohibitive unless the Germans are allowed to produce their own equipment.

German leaders estimate the first year's cost of creating 12 divisions at $6,000,000,000. But some allied sources put the figure at $14,000,000,000.

Stalin to Meet Head China Red

Milan, Italy, Dec. 3—(AP)—A meeting of Premier Stalin and communist China's Mao Tse-Tung in December is being planned in Moscow, the rightest independent newspaper Corriere d'Informanzione reported today.

A dispatch from Stockholm said the meeting might be a prelude to a conference between Stalin, Prime Minister Churchill and President Truman.

Corriere d'Informazione, an afternoon newspaper published by Italy's well-known Corriere Della Sera, added:

"Stalin may wish to reach a personal understanding with the two western leaders because he is worried about the present pace of American rearmament."

South Africa To Recall Advent Of First Settlers

Capetown (CP) — Great plans have been completed for festivals marking the 300th anniversary next April of white settlement in South Africa.

Sports and pageants, music and drama, agriculture, industry and commerce are among the many aspects of the celebrations centred on a huge festival fair built on reclaimed land between Capetown and the sea.

The principal exhibition, from March 14 to April 5, portraying developments of the three centuries, will be staged in about 25 halls and on large outdoor spaces, some of which will hold pavilions containing exhibits from overseas.

A national day of thanksgiving, March 30, has been proclaimed for the opening of the main festival dates, with special services in all churches and at the festival stadium.

Prime Minister Daniel Malan on April 1 will proclaim the Cape's famous landmark, Table Mountain, as an historical monument and symbol of South Africa when he opens a new park on the slopes of the flat-topped peak.

Among many special performances is a display by 3,000 torch-bearers on April 1 after they have brought a symbolic "flame of civilization" in stages from the four provinces of the union and from south-west Africa and Rhodesia.

The landing of the original white settlers in 1652 will be re-enacted on April 4. It was Commander Jan Van Riebeeck of the Dutch East India Company who brought the first settlers aboard his flagship, the Dromedaris. A model of the ship has been constructed for the festival ceremonies.

The Cape of Good Hope had been discovered long earlier, by the Portuguese Bartholomew Diaz in 1488, but no attempt at settlement was made until the Netherlands East India Company established a fort at the cape in 1652 and occupied the adjacent lands. The cape was formally ceded to the British crown in 1814.

The festival of sport will include national tournaments in athletics, cycling, swimming, baseball, women's hockey, bowls and polo, and a national regatta and motor and motorcycle races. The athletics tournament and swimming and cycling meets are Olympic Games trials.

Armies Necessary in Spite of A-Bomb, "Ike" Tells NATO

General Dwight D. Eisenhower tells the North Atlantic Council in Rome that "baby" A-bombs eventually may cut Europe's military requirements, but for the present he wants as many well-armed divisions as can be supplied. Eisenhower warned that Europe must "do the impossible" to gird itself against communist aggression and destroyed many hopes that atom-bomb supplies would reduce the need for vast armies of infantry. — Central Press Canadian.

Garment Makers Say High Prices Ruining Market

Winnipeg, Dec. 3 (CP) —Three top officers of the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union (TLC-AFL) said yesterday that unprecedented high mark-ups by chain stores is one reason for a general recession in Canadian needle trades.

The three officers—vice-president Bernard Shane of Montreal; Sam Kraisman, manager for the Toronto area, and Sam Hearst of Winnipeg, western Canada representative—convened here during the weekend.

In a press release, Mr. Shane said a survey of Canadian markets showed a general recession which could be traced to:

The high cost of living;

The abnormal cost of materials which increased selling prices. A yard of woollen cloth which cost $3 a year ago now costs $7 or more;

High mark-ups by chain stores;

Large amounts of garments imported by department stores and the dumping of distress merchandise in Canadian markets.

The release said the recession had created a desire among some employers to lower wages and working conditions.

Virginia Maniac Slays Taximen

Newport News, Va., Dec. 3—(AP)—Two taxidrivers— one a double amputee—were slain brutally over the weekend in this tidewater area. Police said the slayings were "the work of a maniac."

Police today listed robbery as the motive in both killings—one Friday night and the other Saturday night.

The body of Luther M. Callis, 55—stabbed four times with an ice pick and the head crushed by a blow from auto jack—was discovered early Sunday.

Just 24 hours before, the body of Anthony Michael, 28—stabbed nine times around the abdomen and waist—was found about five miles from the spot where Callis' corpse was located.

Callis lost both legs years ago in a railway accident.

FIND BODY IN RUINS

St, Thomas, Dec. 3. —(CP)— Searchers today found a charred body in the ruins of the Hotel Talbot, destroyed by fire Nov. 25. The body was believed to be that of Fergus J. Ferguson, 73-year-old retired railwayman who disappeared during the $300,000 fire.

[illegible]

The body was found in the basement. It was believed to have fallen from an upper storey.

Vishinsky Mum When Queried On Disarming

Paris, Dec. 3. (AP)—The western powers tried today to pin down Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky on whether Russia would agree that the prohibition of atomic weapons and the start of international atomic control could become effective simultaneously. They got no answer.

Following a secret 2 1-2-hour disarmament discussion among the Big Four—Russia, Britain, France and the United States—a western spokesman said U.S. delegate Philip Jessup asked Vishinsky:

"Would the Soviet Union admit inspectors the very day after the United Nations General Assembly passed a resolution on prohibition?"

Vishinsky did not reply, he said.

The west maintains that there can be no unconditional prohibition of atomic weapons without a foolproof international inspection system to guarantee obedience. Russia demands immediate prohibition of the bomb and then discussions of controls.

However, western sources described the meeting, under the chairmanship of U.N. Assembly President Luis Padilla Nervo of Mexico, as "helpful" and held in a "sober and a constructive atmosphere."

The three spokesmen, representing Britain, France and the United States, told a joint press conference that the Big Four began a paragraph-by-paragraph dissection of the three-power disarmament resolution and the Soviet amendments.

There was no news from the Soviet delegation which took part in the meeting.

Inco to Produce Sulphur Dioxide To Make Paper

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Dec. 3—(CP) —Dr. R. M. Dorland, director of research for the Abitibi Power and Paper Co., said last night possible shutdown of the company's newsprint mill in Sault Ste. Marie has been averted by development of a new process for making sulphur dioxide.

Dr. Dorland said sulphur, used by the newsprint mill to manufacture sulphur dioxide, is becoming extremely scarce. The supply situation was becoming more critical because sulphur was channelled from private industry to war production.

The International Nickel Co., at Copper Cliff had developed a roasting process to separate nickel ore from sulphur. The process produced liquid sulphur dioxide and Canadian Industries Limited had developed a new method of purifying this liquid gas.

A new plant was being built at Copper Cliff to produce the gas which would be supplied to the Sault mill in huge tanks.

The Outsiders

By Jane Abbott

But Hespeth, one arm firmly around Eliza's shoulders was drawing her out of the room. "You're not going to stay and listen to such talk!" she sputtered. And, in the car, "I don't know what's got into them, going on like that, or why old Tom allows it. Next to your grandfather, he's been the one they always looked to and seem's if he could've kept them in hand! It'll make your grandfather roll in his grave!"

Eliza drove beside her in silence. Her flare of indignation had spent itself, leaving her with only a heavy sense of failure.

"You go straight up to bed," urged Hespeth at the house. "And don't you keep it on your mind. Let those men find out which side their bread's buttered on!"

"I can't do anything but let them," said Eliza tiredly. "And I will go to bed. Good night."

She realized suddenly how wholly Hespeth was giving her loyalty over to her side. She put her hands up on the old woman's shoulders. "Thanks, Hespeth. I—I'd like to kiss you. good night!" She kissed Hespeth's leathery cheek.

Startled, red with embarrassment, Hespeth returned it with an awkward peck, then gave Eliza a little push toward the door. "Go along, now, child, and don't you miss one minute of your sleep."

Eliza did not go to the mill the next morning. She did not think she ever would go again. She could not forget the hard set of the men's faces as they had turned to her last night, when she spoke, or that horrible clapping of their hands.

She carried the old ledger to the desk, turned the pages of it slowly. Her grandfather's life, it seemed —the valley life. "We were born here and raised here." She heard that young man saying it as he had at the meeting. "It's like the mill and the valley belonged to us!"

"But not to me," thought Eliza, with a weary bitterness. These people branded her as they did the mill manager—an outsider. As they had her mother.

The telephone rang and Hespeth answered it and then called to her. "It's that manager."

"Hello!" George Culbert's voice seemed surprisingly cheerful to Eliza. "You and I need to go into a huddle, my dear. May I drive right up?"

He appeared almost at once. Hespeth opened the door to him and he walked past her without a word and into the study. He held a paper in his hand and he waved it jubilantly in the air before he put it down on the desk.

"A walk-out at the mill! There it is in writing and something to laugh at, too, way it's written! Old Matthews came in and handed it to me and 10 minutes later every one of 'em was walking out of the gate. The Wilson dame stayed behind long enough to tidy up the picking shed—how's that for the woman's touch?"

"But . . ." Eliza was looking at him with astonishment. Obviously he was rejoicing in the turn of events which to her was failure.

He sat down on the desk, leaned toward her. "I'm very much obliged to you for giving me the plug you did at that meeting last night!"

"But you weren't there!"

"No, I wasn't there but I got a blow-by-blow account of it from Smead, willing purveyor of all the valley news. You had courage to get up and speak your mind and I take it as proof that we're better pals than I dared to think we were!"

Eliza dropped her eyes from his smile, somehow repelled by it. "It was just that it struck me it wasn't fair to you—not to say something. Couldn't we try to talk to the men? Urge them to come back to work? Take back the beater crew you laid off—and the man who struck you?"

Culbert laughed though he gave her a sharp look. "My dear girl, we don't need to! Let 'em play the funeral march! The Bendley people are coming this afternoon. We'll sell to them. . ."

Eliza looked up at him, startled. "I'd forgotten!"

"And that old hellion here. Give her some job to do half-way up the hill. We don't want her listening in!"

"She isn't a hellion and she doesn't listen in!" answered Eliza indignantly.

"All right, a right, she doesn't."

George Cubert slid off the desk his smile curling a little. "Three o'clock, and on the dot. No, there isn't anything more, now. I'll go along. See you later."

He left her and Eliza went ti the window and stood there looking down into the valley, seeing it a lake. A "pretty" lake, stretching from hillside to hillside. She identified a gable that showed through the treetops as Annie Wilson's. It would be deep under the water, the other houses too—some of them built a long, long time ago. She thought of the map the first Forrestal to come here had made, parcelling out land to his friends.

Suddenly there came to her an intolerable longing to talk to Chris Cameron. She did not fight it; the aversion she had tried to make herself believe was her only feeling toward him and failed her utterly. She dropped her forehead against the window pane and let her desire to see him have its way.

Then it died and her heart was only empty. He would not come, he would not try to see her again, after what she had said to him. The way she had said it.

They came at three o'clock, three men and George Culbert. They shook hands with Eliza ceremoniously, spoke with respect of her grandfather. At George Culbert's suggestion they drew chairs up to the desk and at his suggestion, Eliza took one by the fireplace, a little out of the circle they made.

Each one carried a briefcase. George Culbert took a blueprint from his, unrolled it and spread it out on the desk. "I had this map of the valley made last month—the red lines mark off the property Miss Forrestal owns. See, here along the river and these parts of the valley. . ."

At a sign from Morris Bendley one of the men took out a similar blueprint. Morris Bendley said, smiling a little "we had our own survey made two years ago. We're ready to talk figures today. . ." his glance touched Eliza but he spoke to the manager ". . . and go on from there."

"We're ready to listen," said George Culbert, importantly.

The men from the Bendley Mills opened their briefcases, took out papers. They did it with considerable formality and Morris Bendley took some horn-rimmed glasses from his pocket and settled them with deliberation on his nose. To Eliza it had no reality, these men here and these strange papers on her grandfather's desk, the purpose of them. . .

Morris Bendley separated one particular sheet from the others in his hand. "We've assessed values all here, Culbert." He tapped the paper with the point of a gold-mounted pencil. "There can't be any argument over them. We're not interested in this site up here on the hill—or in the upper hillside across which is owned by Miss Forrestal. . ."

It was unreal to Eliza that she should be sitting here. No one of the little group so much as glanced toward her, not even George Culbert.

"We've figured what we will probably have to offer the others who own homesites in the valley. With the mill gone we don't anticipate much trouble in persuading them to sell. . ."

Morris Bendley's was a heavy, authoritative voice and Eliza had the sensation of its pushing her ahead. She held the arms of her chair but still it pushed. A funeral march. Her grandfather walked in it, and those Forrestals before him.

The voice went on. "The only value of the mill itself is the land it is on. The machines, as you have said, are scarcely worth scrapping. Here's what we put on it. . ." He moved the paper toward George Culbert, though he did not let it out of his hand. "You have your own figures—how do they compare?"

The man on the other side of Morris Bendley began to speak. Of the laws covering the diversion of waters, and the technicalities and the red tape involved with meeting them. The expense too. Now and then he looked down at the paper he held, as if what he was saying were written on it. The others listened attentively, nodding their heads every now and then in agreement. And Eliza's fingers tightened on the chair arms.

"There's a kinship here in the valley stronger than blood ties —a very special kind of neighborliness." Chris had said it. And it was going to be scrapped along with the old machines.

Morris Bendley cleared his throat, sat forward in his chair "This is our offer." He picked up a paper. "Fifty-four thousand. No more. If we can't get together on that, we're through —no longer interested. He put the paper into his briefcase and sat back in his chair.

In his turn George Culbert drew forward. His tongue moved over his lower lip. "As you know Miss Forrestal is leaving the decision to me. Ive gone over with her the whole situation here, and she's agreed on selling if we had a satisfactory offer. And I'd say yours is that. Now all we have to do is sign on a few dotted lines. . ."

At that moment a woman and a boy passed outside the window. Eliza saw them, Annie Wilson and Tod. Tod had his violin under his arm. He had come to play and Annie had come to listen, Annie's dreams. . . She sprang up from her chair.

"Wait, please. I don't think I will sell!" They were frowning at her, George Culbert's the darkest, and she went on quickly. "I certainly wouldn't until I knew that everyone here in the valley wanted to, and I don't think they ever will. They belong here. . ." She stopped. She felt a little light-headed. To get to the door she must walk around them all and she willed her knees to carry her. "If you'll excuse me. . ."

She drew away from him. "I'm sorry," she said a little vaguely in the direction of Morris Bendley, and then she got to the door.

Annie and Tod were in the kitchen. "Oh, I'm so glad you came!" she cried breathing so fast that her voice trembled.

"If you're busy—Hespeth said that there were some men meeting in there with you."

"I'm through with them. They will go in a minute. Then Tod will play for us. . ."

Hespeth was beaming on Eliza. "You did just what your grandfather'd do, child. Send them packing!"

Eliza dropped into a chair with a little half-hysterical laugh "Then you did listen, Hespeth!"

"I'd a right to! I wasn't going to let them put anything over on you! If you hadn't said it, I'd of gone in and said it myself to them! This valley isn't for sale!" She snorted. "They've gone now you go in and have your music, and I'll fix some supper. I was just saying to Annie that there

"And I might have thrown all this away!" But neither Hespeth nor Annie heard it for she said it to herself.

Bank Bandits Escape With $35,000

Police believe looting of Royal Bank in Leaside, Ont., latest of recent epidemic of bank robberies in Toronto area, may be the work of Ontario's number one bank artist, Edwin Boyd, who recently escaped from Toronto's Don Jail where he was sentenced on six charges of bank robbery. The Leaside hold-up resembled quiet, efficient work of the so-called Boyd gang. Led by a Sten-gun-flourishing thug, band of six men forced 12 customers and 15 bank employees to line up against the wall, while gunmen calmly scooped $35,000 from tellers' cages into two pillow cases. Police, who later found bandits' getaway car abandoned in nearby ravine, are staging all-out search for the robbers. — Central Press Canadian.

Six Drowned When Pleasure Boat Overturns

San Diego, Calif., Dec. 3—(AP)—Six of 11 persons were drowned yesterday when waves and currents tossed a Sunday pleasure boat over like a cork at its home port entrance here.

Lifeguards said they understood a 12th unidentified man was missing, but survivors listed only 11 on the boat.

The 40-foot "Dot", a converted former navy landing craft, was hit by heavy ground swells in an outgoing tide in the narrow Mission Bay entrance channel.

City lifeguards, watching from a lookout tower, were at the scene in a few moments. They pulled nine from the water—four dead and five alive.

Two others were swept out to sea, with darkness halting the search for them.

The dead included Mrs. Dorothy cutright of San Diego 34, only woman in the party and the only one wearing a life preserver when the boat capsized.

Another Clash Reported Between British, Egyptians

Both Sides Suffer 115 Casualties in 24 Hours

Cairo, Dec. 4 — (CP) — An estimated 20 Egyptian police and civilians were killed or wounded and two British soldiers injured when fighting broke out again in Suez today for the second time in 24 hours.

British sources said today's battle broke out when Egyptian police and civilians fired on British soldiers who then returned the fire.

Today's clash in the troubled canal zone brought the dead and wounded on both sides to about 115 in the last 24 hours.

British casualties have been:

Killed—Three British soldiers, eight Mauritians (Colonial troops.)

Wounded—Three British soldiers.

Egyptian casualties — which vary — are:

Twelve listed as definitely killed — the Egyptians say 16 — 68 wounded plus today's indefinite total of about 20 killed or wounded.

British troops drew a circle round the city of Suez today sealing off the trouble spot where British and Egyptians battled yesterday.

An Egyptian government communique on yesterday's fighting —the bloodiest outbreak in two months of sporadic encounters between Egyptians and British troops — lists 13 Britons and 16 Egyptians — two policemen and 14 civilians — dead.

The communique said a battle involving 70 British armored cars raged for six hours on the outskirts of the city of Suez, southern terminus of the 100-mile-long canal.

British forces today increased their casualty estimate, reporting a total of 15 dead yesterday. These included four Egyptians, eight British led Mauritian troops, two British troopers and a British major missing and "presumably dead."

With the Egyptian count of 29 slain yesterday, the unofficial total of dead in the British-Egyptian skirmishes rose to a maximum of 86.

The Egyptians said 68 persons, including 55 civilians, were wounded. British accounts said only four Egyptian and one Briton were wounded.

Renewal of fighting ended an uneasy truce which was agreed on after a stiff battle at Ismailia, mid-way along the canal's 100-mile length, took the lives of 18 persons on Nov. 18.

British sources said 25 persons were captured.

Open Fire on Police

The Egyptians said yesterday's battle was touched off by British soldiers who opened fire on a squad of policemen.

The British account said the Egyptians started the fracas when "terrorists"—later joined by policemen—fired on British troops moving gasoline supplies. It said a British corporal was shot in the back in a separate incident.

Allan A. Lamport Elected Mayor Of Toronto

Toronto, Dec. 4. (CP)—A 210-pound former football player, who says he believes in fewer parking tickets for errant motorists, will head Toronto's civic government in 1952.

Allan A. Lamport, 46-year-old insurance broker, yesterday ousted Hiram E. McCallum as mayor of Canada's second largest city by a 13,156-vote margin. The office eluded him last year by 1,607 votes.

Nathan Phillips, an alderman for 28 years, was last in the three-man field. He had hoped to become Toronto's first Jewish mayor.

The complete vote:

The vote of 156,951 was 42.7 per cent of the eligible 367,402. Lack of a major campaign issue contributed to a comparatively light turnout. The record of some 177,000 was set in 1950 when Mr. Lamport, who had led throughout the vote-counting, was nosed out by a last-minute flood of McCallum ballots from north-end wards.

One new face will be on the 1952 Board of Control, the city council's executive body. Ford Brand, who received strong support from organized labor, was elected to the post he failed to gain last year.

Others on the four-man board will be Controllers David Balfour, Leslie H. Saunders and Louis Shannon, all re-elected. The voters turned an emphatic thumbs-down on former Controller Stewart Smith, a communist candidate, and Fred Vacher, who never has been elected in many attempts.

WINDSOR PLANT OF FORD COMPANY IS STRIKEBOUND

10,000 Workers Idle As Key Men Fired

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 4—(CP)—Rain-drenched pickets clad in Sou'westers marched up and down today in front of gates and office buildings at the giant Ford of Canada Windsor plants, stalled by a walkout of 8,800 factory workers.

The pickets, members of Local 200, The United Automobile Workers of America (C.I.O.-C.C.L.), bargaining agent for the company's production workers, were grim but cheerful. They turned back approximately 100 Ford company office workers who reported for work.

Signs of organization appeared shortly after daylight this morning when union headquarters was opened in the basement of a nearby church. Here, picket captains reported for instructions and drenched pickets sought temporary relief as they were spelled off by new arrivals.

More than 10,000 Ford office and factory workers are idle following walkout which began shortly after noon yesterday when 6,700 factory employees left the final assembly plant and the big machine shop. They were joined by an estimated 2,200 afternoon and night-shift workers. Twelve hundred office workers were sent home at mid-afternoon.

It is thought that more than one-third of the city's population is directly affected by the walkout.

The entire action took place peaceably as pickets formed at all gates. The afternoon's only "incident" took place at the main gate of the powerhouse when 30 Ford employees entered and persuaded a group of construction workers, engaged in building an addition to the power house, to leave their jobs. There was some shouting but no violence.

26 Union Men Fired

Immediate cause of the strike action, described by union officials as "spontaneous," was the firing of 26 key union workers. These were named by the company as "ringleaders" in "wildcat work stoppages" of the past week.

Union leaders have called a mass membership meeting this afternoon at which they say their policy for the strike will be decided. They will present at the meeting the report of a conciliation board which came here Oct. 8 and 9 to consider a union-company dispute over the workers' 1951 wage contract, pending since last May 29.

Both union and company officials said today that the six-month-long failure of union-company negotiators to reach agreement on the 1951 contract is the underlying cause of the dispute. Last year's contract, which provides a $1.32-an-hour basic rate at the Ford plants, is still in force. Union officials say they have been asking for a 30-cent-an-hour "package" increase.

A statement issued by Jack Taylor, local 200 president, laid responsibility for the strike on the conciliation board's deal in submitting a report.

Allies Object to Four Limitations Placed by Reds on Truce Supervision

Munsan, Korea, Dec. 4 — (AP) — Communist negotiators today insisted on four limitations to supervision of a truce in Korea. The Allies objected to all four.

The reds may have other restrictions the Allies don't like. But trese four came out in response to lengthy questioning by United Nations' delegates in a newly-created sub-committee:

1. The reds would be free to build air fields during an armistice. So would the U. N. command. But the Allies have plenty and the reds haven't a single usable field in Korea.

2. Neutral inspection would be limited strictly to ports of entry. The Allies want inspection teams free to go anywhere in Korea.

3. A ban on troop rotation. That would mean an end to American veterans coming home after a year of service.

4. No interference with or inspection of any reconstruction in Korea. Communist reporters at Panmunjom said much construction work in North Korea is underground and the reds don't want the Allies to know where it is.

"They seemed puzzled themselves," a U. N. spokesman said.

The new sub-committee — two men from each side — was created today in an effort to beat a Dec. 27 deadline. A previous sub-committee drew a cease - fire line across the front to become effective if an armistice is signed by them.

Vice - Admiral C. Turner Joy, head of the U. N. negotiating team, proposed another sub-committee to start work on a clause for exchanging prisoners. North Korean Lt. - Gen. Nam Il said he would give an answer. But he didn't say when.

Churchill Discusses Dollars, Germany With Harriman And West German Chancellor

London, Dec. 4 (AP)— Prime Minister Winston Churchill tackled dollar problems and Germany's role in defence of the west in two separate meetings yesterday with W. Averell Harriman and Chancellor Konrad Adenauer.

Churchill lunched with Harriman, American administrator of the mutual security agency and head of a committee of 12 experts seeking a formula on rearming the west without bankrupting it.

The prime minister also received a courtesy call from Adenauer the first German Chancellor to visit Britain since 1931. Anenaur is making a five-day official visit to Britain and will lunch with Churchill today.

Before flying back to Paris last night, Harriman told reporters he and Churchill talked about dividing the $7,200,000 U.S. military and economic aid fund among the members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and "command relationships." Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden sat in.

Harriman's N.A.T.O. committee today begins in Paris the task of writing a report on how much of the military needs, as estimated by the generals, is possible economically, and how the burden is to be divided among the 12 nations.

Wants Some Materials

In addition to military supplies, Britain is hoping to get about $300,000,000 in economic aid. As part of the mutual aid pie, she wants some materials, particularly about 1,500,000 tons of steel to fulfill her defence program, an informed source said. The U.S. has agreed to allocate 400,000 tons over a 12-month period.

Britain wants to get on a basis of reciprocity, not charity, with the United States, the informant added. He said Britain recently diverted some of its aluminum to help ease an American shortage.

Harriman's comment indicated he also had discussed with Churchill Britain's objections to appointment of an American admiral to head a new North Atlantic naval command.

Churchill's talks with Adenauer were expected to turn on the Paris negotiations for a European army in which Germany would make a contribution of manpower to western defence.

The Conservative government has made plain that it refuses to put troops in such an army but is willing to "associate" with it in some manner.

Food Shortage in Far East Menace to World Peace Gardiner Tells Conference

Ottawa, Dec. 4 — (CP) — Agriculture Minister Gardiner said today there can be no world peace until the food shortage problem in the Far East is solved.

He was confident, he said, that great strides will be made by international organizations to accomplish that task in the next five or 10 years, but warned that the first step must be to tear down the walls that exist between peoples.

Opening the 10th annual federal-provincial agricultural conference, Mr. Gardiner recalled that the problem of feeding the Far East had been brought up at the last conference of the Food and Agricultural Organization in Rome.

Canada's natural markets for food, said Mr. Gardiner, lie not in the Far East, but in the United States and the United Kingdom.

But in selling to these markets, Canada could help ease the Far Eastern problem by allowing Australian farmers, who shipped to Europe and U.S., to send more of their supplies to India and other Asiatic countries.

However, Canada was meeting international barriers to her trade — both in the U.S. and the U.K. "We are less free to send food across international boundaries today than we have ever been in our history," the minister said.

The U. S. had told Canada as far back as 1940 that she could not ship wheat into the American market. Last year Canada had been told she could not ship part of her small surplus in cheese into the U.S.

Britain stated — for one thing — that she will continue to buy wheat from Canada in the years ahead, and will find dollars for this purpose. But if Canada did not get the wheat to her when she wants it, then Britain would buy wheat from other sources.

This winter, he said, many Britons likely will be fed with American wheat, simply because bad weather conditions last fall held up prairie thrashing and Canada was not able to move all the wheat to seaboards she would have liked.

There was little use in blaming the railways for what took place. Prairie farmers "lost" six weeks in harvesting by bad weather and there was no way of making this up.

The result would be that Canada might have about one - third of her crop to thrash next spring, leaving her with wheat to sell next summer, even before her new crop is grown.

MAYORS CONVENING

Montreal, Dec. 4 — (CP) — Civil defence, housing and the high cost of living will be on the agenda when Canada's mayors meet here Wednesday in a two-day gathering of their federation.

U.S. Demands Airmen's Release, Return of Plane

Budapest, Hungary, Dec. 4—4(AP)—The United States today demanded the release of four American airmen forced down in their plane by Soviet fighters in western Hungary on Nov. 19.

The return of the plane, a C-47, also was sought.

The action was taken through Charge d'Affaires George Abbott, who has headed the U.S. legation here since the retirement of U.S. Minister Nathaniel Davis last summer.

"I was informed by Mr. Kiss that our request will be transmitted to the competent Hungarian authority and I will be advised when a reply is received," Abbott told newspaper men.

$100,000 Fire Loss in Buffalo

Buffalo, N.Y., Dec. 4—(AP)—Flames ripped through a freight warehouse last night, leaving a wake of $100,000 in damage and seven persons injured.

The blaze, which may have been started by a children's bonfire, forced 10 families to flee their scorched homes. Electric power was temporarily cut off in the immediate area when power and telephone lines were burned.

The blaze destroyed the warehouse property of the Western New York State Freight Lines.

Two firemen were injured fighting the flames. Three others were hurt, along with two doctors, in a collision involving a fire truck and an ambulance.

At least a half a dozen drums of oil in the building exploded as the fire spread, but their damage was confined to the warehouse.

Police Sgt. Charles Haggerty said the owner of the warehouse had reported that young boys had been seen building a bonfire near the building.

32,817 ENLIST

Ottawa, Dec. 4 — (CP) — Enlistments in the armed forces totalled 32,817 during the first 10 months of 1951, the defence department said yesterday in a return tabled in the Commons. Of this number 1,978 have been discharged from military service.

COMMONS BEGINS CLEARING DECKS FOR NEW SEAWAY

Federal and Provincial Govts. Sign Agreement

Ottawa, Dec. 4—(CP)—Parliament today begins the job of clearing the decks for all-Canadian construction of the navigation end of the St. Lawrence seaway project.

With a newly-signed federal-Ontario agreement on river power development before it, the Commons is due to deal with Transport Minister Chevrier's motion for setting up a "seaway authority" to build and operate the deep-ship channel.

The minister is expected to make a major speech on his motion for the $300,000,000 agency. It is likely he will go into detail on the government's decision to go ahead with the seaway without the participation of the United States government.

Later in the session, the House will deal with a government motion for ratification of the agreement between the federal and Ontario governments, authorizing Ontario as the Canadian authority in the development of hydro power in the international section of the river between Cornwall and Prescott, Ont.

In the Commons yesterday, Prime Minister St. Laurent tabled this agreement a half-hour after its signing. Under it, Ontario would share with some U.S. agency—still undetermined—the $400,000,000 cost of the hydro development and the 2,200,000 horsepower of energy it would yield.

Will Modify Agreement

The Prime Minister told the House that, in the event of Congress ratifying the 1941 Canada-U.S. treaty for a joint project, the federal and Ontario governments would modify their agreement in the light of the international arrangements.

(President Truman has informed the Canadian government he will give his consent to Canada undertaking the seaway alone unless Congress acts before too long. For the implementing of the federal-Ontario agreement, the approval of the international joint commission also is needed. The commission controls the use of boundary waters between Canada and the United States.)

In signing the agreement in his office, the Prime Minister threw out a suggestion that it might spur Congress into action.

Volcano Erupts in East, 141 Reported Burned to Death in Hot Rain

Rescue workers, clawing frantically in smoking ashes which covered half a dozen settlements, expressed fear the casualty toll would reach several hundred. The Red Cross said the figure was growing hourly.

Scores of Filipinos burned by red hot ash or streams of lava were treated at makeshift hospitals set up on Caniguin Island.

The volcano blew its top like an atomic explosion. It spread a layer of thick ash over a half a dozen sitios, crossroads clusters of farm houses.

The Philippines weather bureau seismologist said about four square miles on Camiguin Island was covered. He said ashes and noxious fumes limited rescuers to working on the outer fringes of the volcano's destruction.

A U.S. air force amphibian plane will leave early Wednesday with needed medical supplies and several doctors. A U.S. navy seaplane will follow with Red Cross workers and more supplies.

Land planes cannot reach the island directly. The nearest air base is 40 miles away on Mindanao Island.

The seismologirt said the overall situation at the volcano apparently had improved but added he had "no confidence" that the eruption was subsiding.

The official, whose name was not available, said smoking ash covered about four square miles in the vicinity of the 5,620 foot peak. He said rescue workers could only search around the fringes.

The Red Cross worker, a Miss Bonfacia, told headquarters in a telegram: "areas affected still dangerous. Many victims as yet unrecovered from danger zone. More victims still coming in."

All Philippines naval vessels south of Manila were ordered to speed to Camiguin to aid in evacuation. The island, with 45,000 population is in the Mindanao Sea just north of Mindanao.

Philippines air force planes will fly to the area Wednesday with Red Cross workers.

Hibok Hibok, quiet since a mild eruption last July, shot a flame-filled tower of smoke and ash into the air at 7.15 a.m. today (6.15 p.m. EST Monday). It gave no warning.

The weather bureau seismologist on the three-mile long island said the blast was "atomic like."

The captain of a ship in the Mindanao Sea compared the cloud to that of an atomic explosion.

Gov. Paciencio Ysalina of Misamis province said the eruption was worse than the big blasts of 1948 and 1950. A blast Sept. 15, 1950, killed 63 persons. In the September 1948 eruption, 30,000 residents were evacuated and five deaths were recorded.

Dog Brutally Stabbed With Screw Driver

The dog, the family pet of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Kennedy, is now in an animal hospital in a serious condition.

Mrs. Kennedy is at a loss to understand the motive of the person who committed the brutal deed since the dog is gentle and a general favorite of the immediate vicinity.

The inhumanity of the deed has shocked the neighborhood.

"The owner of the screw driver can have his weapon, if he has the nerve to call for it," Mrs. Kennedy commented bitterly today.

Santa Planning Special Visit To This City

Santa Claus is coming to town! Yes, Saturday Dec. 8 Santa Claus is planning a special visit to the Belleville Armories to give a big hello, a hearty smile and a Christmas wish to every child ten years of age or under in South Hastings County.

The Kinsmen Boys Band will lead a special CNR train up Pinnacle Street at exactly 1.30, Saturday afternoon, and Santa will disembark at the corner of Pinnacle and Bridge Streets, make his way into the Armories and take up a position where he will be able to greet one and all who come to see him.

The Belleville Retail Merchants division of the Chamber of Commerce through the efforts of Enos David, Jim Walker, Jack Mulvihill, Harold Farrow, Stuart Martin and James Davis have been busily employed the past two weeks to make Santa's visit a complete success. The Armories is undergoing a complete renovation and considerable time and effort are being expended to make this gala children's party a complete success.

Tickets have been sent out to all public school teachers whose schools are located south of No. 7 Highway in Hastings County. These tickets, issued to all children up to and including 10 years of age, entitle the holder to a free gift from Santa Claus, a pull in the fish pond, soft drinks, ice cream, candy and movies. The movies will be shown to about 400 children at a time in the Armories.

Children of under school age who have not obtained tickets will be able to obtain them as they enter the Armories on Saturday afternoon.

Assisting Santa Claus in handling an expected 4,000 visitors will be the Boy Scouts and various members of the service clubs under the direction of Bill Van Tassel.

J. Allin Submits Cables in Support Of His Pre-Election Statement

In support of his pre-election statement by radio broadcast that Belleville was not represented by pictures in the window of Ontario House, London, at the time of his visit last summer, ex-Mayor Jack Allin has received the following cable from Lt. George Taylor, Ontario Government House:

"No picture Belleville in windows, but you will recall my showing you booklets and photographs received from Rollins that day. Regards, Taylor."

The above cable was received by Mr. Allin following a request by him to Mr. Taylor for confirmation of his statement. His cable to Mr. Taylor follows:

During his election campaign in a radio address given Tuesday, Nov. 27th, Mr. Allin made the following statement:

"I shall never forget my first visit to Ontario House, London, when I looked up at the two large windows filled with pictures of our thriving cities and towns. Was Belleville represented—no. On enquiring as to the reason, the answer was, Belleville does not seem to want to co-operate."

Steam Engine Built in 1825

Ancestor of City Resident Assisted In Building Stephenson Locomotive

A brief news item in the Ontario Intelligencer recently about the development of the steam locomotive had special interest for Dr. O. A. Marshall, of this city, for his great grandfather had a hand in building one of the new machines. He also has in his possession the picture from which the engraving shown above was taken.

Dr. Marshall is the great grandson of Tom Marshall, an Englishman, who assisted the inventor, Stephenson, with the construction of an early locomotive. One of his earliest memories was hearing his grandfather relate some of the many difficulties the inventor and his assistant experienced during the period of construction.

Early locomotives covered a route of about 10 miles at a speed of about 10 miles an hour Dr. Marshall recalls. A little later, an improved locomotive, called "The Rocket," made its appearance. "The Rocket" was used to haul passengers. It achieved a speed of 25 miles an hour, which the public deemed "reckless" in those days.

The steam locomotive has been in commercial use since the early part of the nineteenth century. It was about the year 1825 that manufacturers in Europe and America began earnestly the construction of locomotives. Prior to this time, such locomotives as had been built were the results of individual inventors. A Frenchman, Nicholas Cugnot, exhibited the first model of a steam locomotive, or steam carriage, as it was then called, in 1763. This is the earliest on record.

In 1769, Cugnot built a similar locomotive for hauling loads on ordinary roads. Its maximum speed was four miles an hour and it had to stop every 15 minutes to build up steam pressure. This device was considered dangerous and a menace to public safety. The authorities ordered it locked up.

In 1784, William Murdock, an Englishman, produced a newer locomotive, which seems to have been more of a success. In 1790. Nathan Reed, of Salem, Mass., produced a locomotive, also intended to run on a highway, which was apparently the earliest in the United States.

The first steam-propelled vehicle intended to run on rails was the product of an Englishman named Richard Trevithick. His machine was patented in 1802. It proved practical, and was used in South Wales. It was able to haul 10 tons of freight at a speed of five miles an hour. The railroad which used Trevithick's locomotive was incorporated in 1803 and can claim to be the world's first railroad.

Three Patents

The English inventor Stephenson, of whom Dr. Marshall's great grandfather was an associate, is listed as one of the several men who greatly improved the original locomotives and were largely responsible for the efficiency of the modern locomotives. Stephenson patented three types of locomotives, two in England, in 1815 and 1825 respectively, and a third in the United States in 1831.

Retail Prices Of Eggs Tumble 4 Cents Dozen

Toronto, Dec. 4 (CP) —Retail egg prices tumbled four cents a dozen today for grade A large. Prospects were that they will fall another five cents Wednesday, to 62 cents a dozen.

Spokesman for a large retail outlet said today that top-quality eggs are selling at 67 cents, a drop of four cents from yesterday and eight cents from a week ago.

"It's almost certain that tomorrow eggs will drop another five cents to 62 cents a dozen," he said.

"The decline reflects the drop in U.S. markets, which have been supporting us for the last three weeks."

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 4 (CP) —Irregular mid-session support today held early afternoon stock market prices mixed and trendless.

Industrials made little headway in opening dealings as investors hesitated to extend yesterday's moderate gains. Light selling pressure balanced weak support.

Constructions formed the market's strongest section with a scattered list of fractional advances. Papers and steels were firm while utilities, agricultures, foods, refining oils, banks and textiles held gains and losses in balance.

In base-metals International Nickel and Noranda strengthened while United Keno Hill weakened. East Sullivan, Mindamar and Normetal climbed pennies.

Western oils made little headway. General Petroleum A, Home Oil, Central Explorers, Royalite and Western Homestead edged upward. Devon-Leduc, Federated Petroleum, Okalta, Security Free and Vulcan slipped.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Dec. 4 — (CP) — At the Ontario stockyards today the supply was mostly stockers and plain quality killers. Prices were about steady. Receipts: cattle, 800; calves, 120; hogs, 400; sheep and lambs, 300. The leftover from Monday was 1,800 cattle.

A few choice weight steers brought $35.50-$36. Common to medium light steers and heifers sold from $23-$32 with good heifers selling $33. NEAR RECORD

No Records Produced

The election while attracting a little over sixty per cent of the electorate to the polls did not produce any records.

The total vote in unofficial figures amounted to 6132 as against 6289 in 1950, when Mayor R. D. Potter defeated Mr. Allin. In 1949 the total figure was 5898.

Mayor Potter's record of leading the polls still stands. He established it when elected alderman in 1949 with a total vote of 3213. C. Arthur Bateman's total of 3092 yesterday was the closest approach. Last year Alderman Harry Rollins balloted a poll-leading vote of 2986.

The totals of successful aldermanic candidates from Bateman to Alderman Argue ran on a par with those of a year ago. Argue polled 2034 votes for seventh position yesterday while a year ago Alderman H. J. Clarke was given 2064 for last spot.

Never in Doubt

The election of Alderman Haig was never in doubt following the receipt of the first returns. He swept into an initial lead and "never looked backwards" from that point on. His majority crescendoed steadily and with eight polling subdivisions heard from his lead was over 500. It rolled onward and upward until 9:30 when with approximately two-thirds of the returns tabulated, ex-Mayor Allin conceded the election.

Mayor-elect Haig swept the entire polling list with the exception of two. Coleman 16 gave Allin 127 votes to Haig's 116 with Murney 18B giving the defeated candidate 81 votes to the winner's 54.

Three aldermen were re-elected to the "seats of the mighty" for another two-year term, while two ex-alderman failed to make the "charmed circle" of city government.

Veterans Charles Hyde, Claude Tice were returned to the municipal fold with each garnering aggregates that eclipsed any of their former successful attempts. Alderman Hyde rose to second place with a total vote of 2392, while Alderman Tice finished in fourth spot with a total vote of 2272. Alderman William Argue was returned in seventh place with a vote 2034.

Four New Faces

Four new faces will grace the council chamber when the new council meets in 1952. C. Arthur Bateman polled an impressive total of 3092 to head the polling list with Donald McNevin finishing in third place with 2363. It was Alderman-elect McNevin's first attempt successful or otherwise to enter municipal government.

Robert Temple, who was defeated in the 1950 elections came back strongly this year to poll 2091 to finish in sixth place, while Bruce Smith, also defeated a year ago finished strongly in fifth place with a poll score of 2138.

While Alderman-elect Arthur Bateman, like the new mayor took an early lead which he never relinquished, the race between the next four caused plenty of excitement to spectators in the city council chambers where the returns were tabulated. Bateman's majority steadily increased and he led the poll throughout the evening.

Stage Close Race

The fight for second place swung first one way then another with Alderman Charles Hyde and Claude Tice staging a close race. Alderman-elect Don McNevin swung into the picture early as did Arthur Keegan, but the latter fell away during the second third of the fight and was ultimately defeated. Bruce Smith, Robert Temple and Alderman Argue also ran close races after the latter surged strongly during the latter part of the evening. Ex-Alderman Armstrong's returns were spotty.

The feature of the entire election from a contest point of view was the near "photo-finish" staged by Alderman Urias Lummiss and Percy McGuire for the public utilities commissionership. The other aspirants Messrs. Enos David and William Harvey were practically left at the post and were never in the race after the first two or three returns had been submitted.

Last Poll Decides

But the McGuire-Lummiss battle kept the capacity packed city council chambers almost on its feet until the last return was submitted, for it was not until then that the issue was decided.

Alderman Lummiss took an early lead and his majority mounted steadily until it hovered around the 150 mark. McGuire always in the rear started to whittle at the Lummiss lead cutting it down steadily until with two subdivisions to hear from, he went out in front for the first time by a margin of five votes. The last ballot provided the "clincher for McGuire giving him a majority of 29 to earn a majority of 34.

It was the closest race for a municipal office staged in city elections over a long period of years.

By-Law Defeated

The by-law requesting the city council to set aside a mill of the tax rate for recreational purposes also staged a close race with the by-law being defeated by a majority of 152. The issue was in doubt throughout the entire evening despite the fact the "yeas" maintained a slight lead with the exception of once during the early returns. The "nays" drew away in the late returns to win by the narrow margin.

There were no electoral contests for the Public School Board since all candidates were given an acclamation to office.

Interest in the election reached a new high with the city council chambers being packed to capacity with a cross-section of city life. The crowd spilled out into the second floor corridor while the offices of the mayor and city clerk were also filled with the curious.

Chambers Quickly Filled

At seven forty-five when the first returns came in a bare handful of spectators was on hand but as the evening lengthened the crowd quickly filled the chambers. There was some good-natured heckling while a few cheers came from supporters of various candidates as their favorites were given satisfactory returns.

Promulgation of the returns was made quickly, being relayed via phone and courier from the various polling booths to the council chambers where Messrs. Drury Denyes, city treasurer and Leighton Thompson, city assessor quickly tabulated the returns. They were in turn transferred to a large blackboard placed conspicuously on a platform near the mayoral chair where George Whitman, city welfare officer, relayed them to the waiting crowd. Other information outlets were this newspaper and radio station CJBQ which had microphones installed in close proximity to the tabulation tables.

Mayor-Elect Heard

Cheers rang out in the council chamber when mayor-elect McLean Haig entered shortly after 10 o'clock. He was given a fine ovation following a brief address of appreciation.

He had prepared two speeches, he said, and was proud to use "this one." He expressed his appreciation to those who worked for him in a successful campaign "and to those who did not support me I promise that with my council we shall do our best to conduct your affairs to the best of our ability. Many problems face us but I assure you we shall meet them squarely."

Defeated candidate ex-mayor Jack Allin also expressed his appreciation to those who supported him. He had found the new chief magistrate an able alderman and "I know he will make you a good mayor."

Utilities commissioner elect, Percy McGuire told his audience that he had weathered a very close fight, and hoped he would prove worthy of the confidence placed in him.

"I accept this victory in all humility," said alderman-elect C. Arthur Bateman, in thanking his supporters. "And under the city's new mayor I will serve you to the best of my ability."

Appreciates Confidence

Alderman Hyde appreciated the continued confidence placed in him and promised he would "watch the treasury." Ald. Tice thanked all for splendid help given in his election for fourth time.

Other brief addresses of appreciation were given by Alderman-elect Don McNevin, Robert Temple, and Alderman William Argue.

Defeated for the utilities commissionership, Alderman 'Sandy' Lummiss said he appreciated the support given him in one of the closest fights of his career. He congratulated Mr. McGuire, adding he would continue to serve the city as he had always done.

An augmented editorial staff in the news rooms of the Ontario Intelligencer relayed returns to the public from eight o'clock until 11. A battery of telephones was kept busy all evening keeping the public informed of what was going on. The first call for election returns was registered at 4.10 in the afternoon.

Again the switchboard operators of the Bell Telephone Company did an outstanding job in assisting with the distribution of returns to the public. There was no delay in transference of calls and as a result the returns were given out almost as quickly as received.

PARENTS DIE IN PACT

Chatham, Dec. 4. (CP)—A man and his wife, parents of six small children, died early today in what police termed a murder and suicide.

Police said Percy Worth, who had been living with his wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Mankiss, arose early today, went to his own home and shot his wife as she fed their baby. Then he turned the gun on himself.

Police blamed domestic strife for the tragedy.

General Manager W.L. Somerville Speaks on Toronto Stock Exchange

The assistant general manager of the Toronto Stock Exchange W. L. Somerville, told the Rotary Club of the inner workings and mechanics of trading of his exchange at its weekly luncheon on Monday.

Mr. Somerville stated that stock exchanges in the United States dated back to the period following the revolutionary war whereas there was none in Canada until 1921.

"Prior to the present system, stocks and bonds were sold in the open air and on street corners" he stated, "but as the system developed, there was a limited trade among the exchange members. Eventually there became a New York Curb Exchange which today has its own building, erected with funds of the original members."

Before the Second World War, Mr. Somerville added, European investments on the North American continent were 70 per cent in the United States, whereas today that figure is reversed, 70 per cent of the outside investments coming to Canada.

The Toronto Stock Exchange is rated second on the North American continent, according to Mr. Somerville. In 1950 it did a business of $12,000,500,000, which amounted to 55 per cent of Canada's total, he said.

The speaker explained the regulations covering brokers with regard to working capital, advertising business by telephone, and listings. He said that in order to become a member of a stock exchange today, one must have a working capital of approximately $75,000.

In conclusion, Mr. Somerville said that the Toronto Stock Exchange was proud of the part it is playing in the development of Canada. He extended a personal invitation to Rotary members to visit the exchange on their next visit to Toronto.

The speaker was introduced by Rev. Duncan McTavish and thanked on behalf of the club by Ed. Bernstein.

James Allen introduced the visiting Rotarians and guests, who included Gordon Campbell of Picton, Gerald Farrar of Trenton, and S. E. Goodwin of Belleville.

Birthday roses were presented by Harold Parker to Stewart G. Robertson and Rotary president Courtland F. Miller.

Announcement was made that the next big event would be the family party to be held next week.

Upsets in Civic Elections Seen In Province

(By The Canadian Press)

Some new faces will appear on Ontario municipal councils next year.

Upsets in civic elections in many cities and towns across the province yesterday included the election of Allan A. Lamport as mayor of Toronto and of Dan Jessup as Sudbury's chief magistrate. Comely Mrs. Michael P. Smith will head Woodstock's municipal government in 1952.

Communists fared poorly. Mrs. Edna Ryerson, re-elected to Toronto's board of education was the only one of six communist candidates in that city to win civic office.

Windsor turned down a proposal to observe daylight time in summer decided to elect its entire council every two years—instead of part one year and part the next—and gave two newcomers places on its council.

Other centres that held elections yesterday included Brantford, Brockville, Galt, Guelph, Waterloo, Niagara Falls, Peterborough, St. Thomas, Aylmer, Sault St. Marie, Stratford, Welland and Belleville.

London township voted down a proposal that 16.25 acres of its area should be annexed to London. In a petition last month, 250 residents of the suburban township asked for the annexation.

Stratford ratepayers authorized a $60,000 debenture issue for a municipally-operated bus system and $50,000 in debentures for road resurfacing.

Sudbury elected its first board of control.

In Sault Ste. Marie, Mayor Herb Smale was re-elected. He defeated Anthony Nino, veteran alderman for a west-end riding.

Allan J. Rush, former police detective elected mayor of London last year won re-election in a three-way race. One of his opponents was George Wenige, whom he defeated a year ago. Voters gave overwhelming approval to a proposal for a $3,000,000 addition to Victoria Hospital.

Brantford ratepayers approved inclusion of a third band as a recipient of proceeds of a municipal levy.

Mayor E. C. Sargent was re-elected in Owen Sound, but Mayor Vernon Bauman went down to defeat in Waterloo.

Eight-Cent Wage Increase Given Ford Employees

Toronto, Dec. 4—(CP)—A pay increase of eight cents an hour for all employees of the Ford Motor Company at Windsor Ont., retroactive to June 1, was recommended by a conciliation board in a report released today.

In addition, the board recommended an "escalator" clause tying Ford's Windsor wages to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics cost-of-living index which means about another five cents.

This pay adjustment, to be made quarterly would be one cent an hour for each increase of 1.3 points in the index over the June index of 184.1.

(The November index was 190.4.)

The cost-of-living bonus—but not basic wage rates—would be subject to reduction at the same rate if the index drops.

Headed by Judge Lane

Report of the board, headed by Judge W. S. Lane, of Picton, Ont., was made public as more than 10,000 Ford employees were idle at Windsor in a walkout which union officials said was caused by the firing of 26 key union workers.

The employees are members of Local 200 of the United Automobile Workers of America (C.I.O.-C.C.L.).

Both union and company officials said a six-month delay in efforts to reach agreement on a new contract was the underlying cause of the dispute.

Last year's contract, which provided for a $1.32-an-hour basic wage rate at the Ford plants, is still in force. Union officials said they asked for a 30-cents-an-hour "package" increase.

THEY GOT ACTION

Not long ago, the assessment of the city of Sudbury as raised 40 per cent. The citizens of Sudbury took a dim ew of this action, so dim, in fact, that a mob of more an 1,000 of them gathered in and around the city hall at e first sitting of the court of revision, threatening dire ouble in all thirty or forty of the languages which are oken in the Nickel City. Squads of police were rushed the city hall before the members of the court of revision d the assessors felt they could breathe easily again.

Previously, the ratepayers of the city had formed an ganization and engaged counsel to fight the increased sessment. They claimed that the new assessment evaluated their properties considerably above the sale value of ose properties.

While talk about legal action apparently brought no sults, the threat of direct and immediate trouble of a hysical nature seemingly did. In any event, Sheriff rthur J. Manley, a member of the court of revision, has nnounced that "most" Sudbury ratepayers will pay next ear's taxes on the old assessment. A Canadian Press ispatch from Sudbury described the court of revision's ecision as a "major victory" for the ratepayers.

Thus it would appear that taxes can be brought down r kept down if the people who have to pay those taxes aise a big enough storm.

PRIVATE ENTERPRISE READY

A committee of the House of Commons has been investigating radio and television broadcasting in Canada. One of the witnesses who has appeared before this committee is T. J. Allard, general manager of the Canadian Association of Broadcasters.

The committee members asked Mr. Allard all sorts of questions about broadcasting, particularly in connection with whether private enterprise could provide satisfactory television programs for Canadian audiences.

Mr. Allard stated that private enterprise could provide Canadians with all the television programs they would want, of the best quality, at no cost whatever. He pointed out that American television stations are already providing television programs, absolutely free, to about 100,000 Canadians who live close enough to the border to enjoy them. He estimated it would take private enterprise from 18 to 20 months to deliver the goods, after having been given the "go ahead" signal.

If private enterprise is prepared to provide good television programs free, why should it not be given an opportunity to do so?

TOO MANY CONTROLLERS

Out in British Columbia, there is a milk control board, set up by the provincial government and vested with authority to regulate the dairying industry and its distributors.

The British Columbia Milk Control Board caused a dairyman to be brought into court and fined for selling milk with too high a butterfat content. The dairyman appealed the conviction, and the judge of the superior court quashed the conviction.

There are a good many people who will hope that the action of the British Columbia judge in throwing the British Columbia Milk Control Board for a loss will establish some sort of precedent. There are altogether too many control boards and controllers in this country; so many of them, in fact, that Canada is no longer nearly as free a country as it was even fifteen or twenty years ago.

Those who are no more than barely middle-aged can well remember when we had none of these controllers, or very few of them, and unless our memory is bad, we got along splendidly without them.

ARE "INNOCENT BYSTANDERS" EXTINCT?

There were two bank robberies in Ontario within the last few days, yet in the newspaper accounts of neither was there any mention of the traditional "innocent bystander" getting shot, trampled, or even pushed.

This is an important departure. Those who are addicted to reading about robberies have become so accustomed to an "innocent bystander" suffering injury that we have come to skip through the story breathlessly to see how badly he was hurt and by whom.

Perhaps present-day bandits have changed their methods and are more careful than the old-time bandits about injuring an "innocent bystander." Perhaps the police and the bank personnel also are exercising greater care than formerly to see that no "innocent bystander" stops a stray slug.

SANTA DISCOVERED

A first class detective is little Miss Six.
I'd say, with a head full of Hopalong's tricks.
With a ten gallon hat and two guns at her side,
And blue jeans and boots and a cowboy's long stride,
She discovered old Santa
Claus' tracks in the snow.
That he's watching her brother she's letting him know.

"You'd better watch out what you're doing," said she.
"You never can tell what old
Santa will see.
You'd better be good. He's already in town.
In the dining room window—the curtains weren't down—
He was looking last night. Just come out and I'll show
You the footprints he made as he walked in the snow.

"Do you know something else?
It was plain to be seen
Your hair wasn't brushed and your fingers weren't clean.
Your school books were open.
You hadn't begun
To start with your homework and get it all done.
Come out and I'll show you where Santa Claus stood.
So, Pardner — I'm telling you, start to be good."

A HERO'S TREK

Blind loyalty—that is to say, believing in a cause that's hopelessly lost and not really worth fighting for, anyway—blind loyalty, as I say, is sometimes a touching thing and I have been deeply moved by the example of Mr. Clancy Sorenson.

Mr. Sorenson, the president of the Canadian Restaurant Association, has just completed a 10,000-mile eating tour of Canada. He has announced that Canadians "can be proud of their restaurants."

Gad! The mind reels at the self-sacrifice and the raw courage of this simple Canadian. The exploits of Simon Fraser and those other earlier travelers pale into insignificance before the modern saga of this man Sorenson who faced nameless horrors, dark terrors—indeed, death itself—and somehow lived to tell the tale.

As a newspaperman I am ashamed that the press has given such shoddy treatment to the man and his monumental achievement. The particular account I have before me is a scant two paragraphs in length. This is a terrible commentary on the judgment of today's editors, the kind of men who would put the news of Christopher Columbus' discovery of America back next to Mary Worth and the bile pill ads.

A thousand questions come to mind. Is Mr. Sorenson now on a diet of warm gruel? Were there ever moments when, confronted by the congealed peas and carrots so familiar in Canadian restaurants, Mr. Sorenson faltered in his crusade? What has medical science to say about this seemingly impossible feat? What hospital is Mr. Sorenson in?

Other Side

I've more than passing interest in "Iron Stomach" Sorenson's gastronomic pilgrimage. It is now just about a year since I arrived home with my loved ones—poor wretches! — after a tour in which we sampled the culinary art of Canada from Vancouver to Halifax, a coast-to-coast case of indigestion.

In giving my own humble opinion of Canadian restaurants I speak, as always, conservatively and without recourse to broad statements, which are so easily made by less thoughtful men. I will say, simply, that Canadian restaurants are the worst in the world.

I'm sorry, "Iron Stomach." The truth must be faced. In nine out of every ten Canadian restaurants the patron confronts a mess of insipid, pallid fodder at shocking price, served with a sullenness rarely seen outside of police line-ups.

Like the Canadian school teacher, the Canadian chef is a forgotten man, unsung, underpaid and all too frequently in his profession because he never learned to boil an egg—ergo, he is a chef. The Canadian restauateur is a man who will invest in nine miles of cerise neon tubing for the front and employ a sad and aged farmer at the skillets in the rear.

There is a kind of chain reaction that sets up because of this. It is too much to hope that any waiter of waitress, confronted with the disagreeable task of coming face to face with dissatisfied customers, could possibly maintain a facade of good cheer. Where there is no pride there is no service. Only an actor of the calibre of, say, Laurence Oliver could manage the pretense of a smile over a plate of groceries cremated in the typical Canadian hash-house.

Mine host, himself, seems content to lurk behind his cash registers flanked by display cases of alkaline tablets and solutions for the relief of gastric disorders.

The Problems

Nobody knows all this more—or would deny it quicker—than the proprietors. It is a thankless, tough business in this country and never more so than right now when the cafe men flirt constantly between raising their prices or trimming the bacon another quarter of an inch. If the quality isn't going down noticeably it is only because there wasn't much lower it could get.

The fact is, as "Iron Stomach" must know, there's no more discouraging business. Unlike the United States we're not a nation of "diners-out" and because of that there is no worthwhile demand for distinctive dining.

Another important factor, of course, is the Canadian liquor laws. The operator of a restaurant serving cocktails is a two-time winner. He makes a good percentage of profit on his drinks and is able to improve the quality of his cuisine to attract discriminating patrons.

This is the reason why dining in French Canada is such a delight. Montreal alone has more good restaurants than all the rest of Canada and even in Quebec City or Hull or little Three Rivers you find a much higher level of the art—for such it is—than in larger cities elsewhere. Beyond the borders of Quebec a well-prepared meal is an accident and a lovingly prepared one doesn't exist.

Still, blind loyalty is an appealing thing and Mr. Sorenson has my admiration. I hope this convalescence is speedy and complete.

Strength for the Day

FORMULA FOR POPULARITY

The word "tact" comes from a Latin word which means "touch". A tactful person is a person who has the gift of gentle and pleasing touch.

We wonder sometimes why certain people are popular and other people are unpopular. There are many reasons, of course, which help to explain each of these states. But usually the popular person is tactful and above all makes other people feel that they have some inmportance. Regardles of what else he is the unpopular person is usually untactful and has a stupid disregard for the feelings of others.

Above everything else, people like to believe that they are of some importance at least. And away down under, everyone likes to feel that he is an independent thinker—whether he is or not. So if you want to be popular, forget about yourself and try—to the extent you honestly can—to make other people feel that they have some real capacity for thought; in other words, that you respect their opinions.

The bigger you make a person appear in his own eyes, the bigger and better you will appear in his eyes. The more you make even a casual acquaintance feel that his ideas have worth, the more he will respect your opinions. We like the people who appear to appreciate us, and who make us feel that we're worthwhile.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE "SELF-MADE" MAN

All my life I have read and heard of the so-called "self-made" man. I have never met one. No one has ever introduced me to one. There is no such man! There are men in all walks of life who have risen greatly through their own efforts, their will and their determination, their ideas and set purpose, but they owe more to their contributors than anything else.

Other people, scores of them, through their books and examples, are who help to make each one of us all that we are. We are not self-made but other-made. A great father or mother, friends, historic characters, all are contributors. That invisible teacher, embodying all nature, is forever helping to make us what we are, giving us first lessons, pointing out laws to us, and reminding us of the eternity of things.

Without the friendliness of nature and its ever enlarging suggestions, how could we ever have had a Thoreau, of a Fabre, or a Muir? We are other-made, nature-made, and God-made, as well. We are immortal selves, spliced by love, the knowledge of the ages, and an inbred hope and faith.

How often we hear the expression: "I made him what he is!" No such thing occurs. Each one of us is a gatherer of fagots that burn a flame within us, from which we evolve into a entity of worth and character. Oh, what debtors we are! How much we owe to all, with whom we ever come in contact. To all life, to all creation, to the stars, the waters of the earth, and to every floating influence in the world, do we owe a world of gratitude and thanks.

The self-made man? Who made or fashioned his tools? He borrowed them all—and how often has he failed to return them to their owners! And to whom do we owe our abundant blessings from day to day, Who can say that God didn't have a hand in them all? Self-made? We are merely self-adaptors, doing a job in the workshop of the world!

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Signed Letters, Not More Than One Page, or 100 Words long, Pertaining to Personal Health and Hygiene, Not to Disease, Diagnosis or Treatment, Will be Answered by Dr. Brady if a Stamped, Self-Addressed Envelope is Enclosed, Etc.

IODIN DEFICIENCY AND BED-WETTING

Correspondent moved from Connecticut to Michigan three years ago—Connecticut, close to the sea, Michigan, far inland—or from any area where soil, water and locally grown food (fruit, vegetables, cereals, meat, milk, eggs) supply natural iodin to an area where iodin deficiency is general if not universal.

Since moving the correspondent has gained forty pounds for no apparent reason. Her husband has not gained weight but he has grown logy and somewhat short-tempered.

Before moving to Michigan their four-year-old child had ceased wetting the bed. Soon after they moved to Michigan the child began wetting the bed again and the habit continues although the child is taken up several times in the night to go to the bathroom. The correspondent supposes it is far-fetched to assume this bed-wetting might be caused by iodin deficiency.

Not at all. Many physicians have reported the correction of iodin deficiency seems to correct bed-wetting in many instances.

Pamphlets on The Iodin Ration and The Bed-Wetting Habit are avaialble on written request if you provide stamped self-addressed envelope — either pamphlet free, but if you ask for both please enclose ten cents.

The correspondent adds a note that pleases me a lot, although it brings on a kind of nostalgia: "I sincerely wish you a long long, life, Dr. Brady, for the world sorely needs . . . Would that we had fewer self-styled 'specialists' and more real physicians a la Dr. Brady!"

Flattery will get you anything you like, Ma'am, but, coming down out of the clouds, the truth is that people get the kind of medical care they prefer. And the present state of the doctor business in Yankeeland shows that people overwhelmingly prefer trick specialists and the "clinic" racket to real physicians.

The correspondent, and indeed every one who has had manifestations of iodin deficiency for many months, needs not merely the minimum daily requirement of iodin which nutrition authorities agree that every child or adult needs to prevent simple goitre and other deficiency conditions, but for the first month or two at least ten times as much in order to correct the trouble. This applies to the correspondent and to her child—and it can do no harm for her husband to follow suit.

Ten times the ordinary daily ration of iodin is advisable for the first month, particularly for the bed-wetting child who is undersized, has irregularly placed teeth and perhaps signs of adenoids

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Do You Call That Coffee?

Have Ben Told that drinking warmed over coffee will cause hardening of the arteries due to the oil . . . (H. T.)

Answer—That's nonsense. But warmed-over coffee? Ugh! Send 25c and stamped self-addressed envelope for the red book What To Eat And Why. A chapter in it deals with coffee.

Join The Nineties

I have been taking your iodin ration for years. I enjoy good health Passed my ninetieth birthday last month. Look upon you as my doctor. (N. M. B.)

Answer—Thank you. I'd like to hear from other readers in their nineties—nineties, I said, not nighties—whether they have followed this column all their life or only a few years. You, Mrs. B. my bowling crony, Dr. T., my mother, Mrs. Ellen B, who went away at 93, and, say, nine others, if they will be good enough to write me a line about themselves, should make a quorum for the organization of the nineties.

The Inundation

Some say wine and beer peps up low blood pressure . . . (Mrs. H. S. A.)

Answer—Beer and wine will neither increase low blood pressure nor lower high blood pressure. The quantity of beer and wine drunk on television, to say nothing of the liquor consumed on the movie screen should be sufficient to keep the parents dazed and the children thoroughly indoctrinated with the vicious idea that alcohol in one form or another is a panecea, and that everybody who is anybody uses it.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Patience is a virtue, according to somebody who lived a long time ago. In these times, it is fairly obvious that the impatient are at the top of the ladder, and the patient ones are somewhere down near the bottom. The most famaliar characteristic of a good executive is his impatience. It is feared by everybody in his command.

The patient ones are those who endure the impatience of their managers, foremen, bosses. If patience is a virtue any more, it is seldom found among those in the high income brackets, except those who patiently watch their investments grow.

The most interesting demonstration of patience and impatience is between five and six o'clock in the evening at any downtown business corner. On the one hand are those with enough authority in the world to own motor cars. And with car horns tooting, engines revving up, as they creep and chivvy and push in on one another, these thousands of home-going motorists are consumed by impatience. They fairly vibrate with it.

Without moving your eyes, you can there and then behold patience at its worst or best: the huddled throngs of half - frozen citizenry standing on the corners, waiting for street car or bus. Like their enmotored brethren, they too have been working hard all day. They too are tired and anxious to get home to supper and a little rest and relaxation.

But they are possessed of patience. There they stand and wait, cringing from the winter wind. The cars don't come. And when they come, they are too crowded, so that the most patient turn away and wait philosophically for the next one.

Their patience is supposed to be a virtue. But when you compare it to the impatience of those horn-tooting, grinding, pushing motorists, there seems to be something monstrous about it. You become impatient with the very sight of them, huddled there so meekly.

Plane Crashes Over Wide Areas Kill 18 Persons

New York, Dec. 4 (AP)—At least 18 persons, including 17 United States servicemen, died Monday in the widely-separated crashes of three military planes and a twin-engined private craft.

Six air force personnel and five civilians were injured in the mishaps.

Two of the planes—at Denver Color., and Reno, Nev.— came down in residential areas and smashed a number of homes. But no one on the ground was killed, and the only injury was to a maid in a demolished Denver home.

Eight airmen lost their lives in the Denver crash, which also accounted for all the military injuries. Their plane, a big B-29 bomber, slashed through five houses and set them afire as it came in two miles short of a Lowry air force base runway.

Authorities today sifted the wreckage to determine the cause of the crash. The plane had reported a failure in one of its engines.

In Reno, the crippled plane bounced off the roof of one house, narrowly missed another, and careened into a vacant lot. The pilot died, while four passengers suffered only minor injuries.

Six servicemen died at Pensacola, Fla., when their navy plane plunged to the ground at the edge of a residential area and just 30 feet from the scenic highway overlooking Escambia Bay.

The plane, coming from Miami, was reported making a standard instrument landing at Pensacola's Corry Field minutes before it crashed. On board were two marine crew members and four passengers from the air force, army and navy.

A twin-engined air force C-45 transport, carrying three crew members, crashed 12 miles north of Evansville, Ind., in a heavy rain storm. All aboard were killed. The plane was bound for Evansville from Tullahoma, Tenn.

Tientsin Churches Being Taken Over By Chinese Priests

Hong Kong, Dec. 4 (Reuters)—All Roman Catholic Churches in Tientsin are being taken over by Chinese priests sympathetic to the communist regime, a report reaching here from the China mainland said today.

They have launched a "brainwashing" campaign from the pulpits to cleanse the minds of congregations of "imperialist" church teachings, the report said.

The official communist journal Sin Wen Jih Pao of Shanghai said Chinese priests are delivering sermons and lectures on "thought reform" and patriotism. More than 6,000 Catholics had joined the "learning campaign."

Meanwhile, Catholic authorities here awaited the arrival from China of three Canadian nuns whose deportation was ordered by the people's court in Canton last Sunday.

Nothing further has been heard here of two other Canadian sisters sentenced last Sunday to five years' imprisonment before deportation.

All five were convicted of charges of murder and maltreatment of 2,000 children at the Holy Infant Orphanage in Canton. Church sources have said that neglected and sick waifs are admitted in large numbers, accounting for a high mortality rate.

Only One Communist Elected in Toronto

(By The Canadian Press)

Communists had scant success in yesterday's municipal elections in various Ontario communities.

Six ran in Toronto. Only one, Mrs. Edna Ryerson was successful and she won re-election to the board of education.

One of the six, former controller Stewart Smith, was soundly trounced in his attempt to regain a seat on the city's four-man board of control. Two others sought aldermanic seats and the remaining two were board of education candidates.

Windsor's only communist candidate, Michael J. Kennedy, came sixth in a contest for controller. Nine candidates sought the two available seats.

Woodstock Has First Woman Mayor in History

(By The Canadian Press)

The southwestern Ontario city of Woodstock has the first woman mayor in its history. She is Mrs. Michael P. Smith, who yesterday nosed out 1951 Mayor F. Childs 2864-2360 in his bid for re-election.

The attractive brown-haired housewife, an alderman in 1949 and 1950, won easily in her first bid for the mayoralty.

Elsewhere, also, women scored victories in the municipal elections.

Grace Burke McFarland won a three-way race for the mayoralty in the town of Leamington.

Mrs. Edna Ryerson won re-election as a Toronto public school trustee. She was the only communist to attain civic office in that city in yesterday's voting.

Parkhill gained its first women town councillors in Mrs. Aleta Pennington and Adelaide Gibbs.

Mrs. W. C. Richards won a town council seat in Tilbury and Mrs. Vera Bueglas was equally successful in Hanover. Mrs. Ada Sullivan obtained a board of education seat at Prescott. Mrs. M. Mills was elected town councillor at Ingersoll. Mrs. E. E. Lover and Mrs. B. Haines won school board seats in St. Thomas.

But Mrs. Agnes Spence lost her council in Strathroy, Marjory Kemp campaigned unsuccessfully for election as public school trustee at Tillsonburg. Wallaceburg's Mrs. Jean Huchtwith lost out in a bid for the office of deputy-reeve and in the same town Mrs. Mae Bubuque tried in vain for a council seat.

C.E. Way's Truck Stolen, Wrecked

Tweed—On Friday evening the delivery truck owned by C. E. Way was stolen from where it was parked on Victoria Street, almost in front of Mr. Way's show rooms.

The truck was found abandoned at the foot of Sulphide Hill on the other side of the River.

Apparently some person took the truck and went for a joyride. Apparently in coming down this hill the truck went out of control, skidded into the ditch, turned around in the opposite direction and crashed into a post, causing extensive damage. Two persons were seen jumping from the wreck. No arrests have been made.

Peasants Flee As Landslide Swallows Town

Rome, Dec. 4 —(Retuers) — Peasants in remote canals fled their homes today as a huge landslide threatened to swallow their small town, perched on a mountain slope in southern Italy.

News of this new danger came as floodwaters, which recently covered more than 900 square miles in the north continued to gush into the Adriatic Sea.

A massive weight of rock and earth loosened by the October floods which killed 80 persons in Calabria, was moving slowly but relentlessly down towards the town and neighboring farms.

Some of the 3,500 inhabitants abandoned the town last weekend, when an avalanche sent rock hurling down the mountainside.

For two days the little town's church was packed with people praying that the moving mountainside would halt.

Government engineers reported that the town is doomed. Even if it is not obliterated in the next few days, they said, the loosened mass above it would make it uninhabitable.

BAD LOSER

Dunnville, Dec. 4 — (CP)—Police are looking for a bad loser who returned to a crap game Sunday after losing his money and robbed the three remaining players of $1,000.

U.S. Military Works Toward Japan's Defence

Nagoya, Japan, Dec. 4—(AP)—United States air, ground and sea forces are working toward a "Pearl Harbor-proof" defence of Japan.

The pattern follows closely the intricate military plan developed to safeguard North America if an atomic war is launched.

The U.S. will carry the burden of Japan's defence after the occupation of this defeated country ends. Air, ground and naval units will remain here under the U.S.-Japan Security Pact.

The key link in the defence chain in the 314th air division. It is supported by National Guard divisions, anti-aircraft batteries and ships and planes.

A 2,500-mile trip through Japan's most vulnerable points reveals a bristling defence that grows stronger daily.

The rocky shores of Hokkaido are dotted with radar stations. Their screens sometimes pick up communist planes flying over red territory on training missions.

Jet interceptors patrol night and day in all kinds of weather. Some reconnaissance patrols range far out to sea.

Surprise practice tests are run continually to keep pilots on th toes.

The defence of Japan is divid into three zones—northern, cent and southern. Headquarters is Nagoya.

An intricate communicatio network keeps every installatio in close contact with headquarte

High-level agreements alread have been reached for the opera tional control of all military unit in this part of the world if a attack on Japan should come.

WEDDINGS

ASHE—DERRY

A quiet, but pretty wedding was solemnized in the Ivanhoe parsonage by Rev. B. J. Beckel, Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 28, when Elizabeth Annie Beatrice Derry, of Eldorado, became the bride of Robert Arthur Ashe, of Crookston. The bride wore a street-length dress of blue taffeta with navy accessories and carried a bouquet of Sweetheart roses.

Miss Bernice Ashe, sister of the bridegroom, was bridesmaid, and wore rosewood satin with wine accessories and a corsage of Sweetheart roses.

The bridegroom was attended by the bride's brother, Mr. Herbert Derry, of Eldorado.

The happy couple will reside at Crookston, Ont.

EMANUEL—MARACLE

Tall standards of white chrysanthemums lined the chancel in Central Presbyterian Church, Park Avenue, New York City, for a lovely November early evening wedding when Alma Maracle, of Woodside, Long Island, fourth daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norway Maracle, of Shannonville, Ont., became the bride of Constantinos Emanuel, of New York City, son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Emanuel. The Rev. Mr. Reiss, pastor of the church, officiated in the double-ring ceremony.

The wedding music was rendered by Dr. Giles, and the soloist, Mr. Howard Shahbaz, sang before the ceremony, "I Love You Truly", and during the signing of the register, "Because".

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was radiant in her bridal gown of white satin and Chantilly lace fashioned with molded bodice and bouffant skirt ending in a cathedral train. She wore a fingertip veil of French illusion with scattered lily-of-the-valley and carried a shower bouquet of orchids and lily-of-the-valley.

Mrs. Fred Dugan, of Woodside, Long Island, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore a floor-length gown of rust velvet with matching hat and gloves and carried a shower bouquet of white chrysanthemums.

Mr. Stanley Emanuel, of New York City, brother of the bridegroom, was groomsman. The ushers were Messrs. Salvatore Brancoto, of Philadelphia and Allen Emanuel, of New York City.

The candlelight dinner for fifty guests was held at the Hotel Pierpont roof garden, where the bride's mother, wearing a floor-length gown of pale orchid, and corsage of orchids, received the guests. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother, gowned in pale rose, with orchid corsage. The bride was toasted with champagne and the dinner and dance music furnished by the Roger Stanley Orchestra.

Following the reception dinner, the bride chose a navy blue suit with matching accessories for the wedding trip to the Pocono Mountains. Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Emanuel will reside at Jackson Heights, Long Island.

Out-of-town guests were present from Rochester, N.Y., Philadelphia, Pa.; New Jersey, and New York State.

Teacher McKim Writes Book On Dutch Boy

The lad clutched his father's hand and stared wide-eyed at the department store nearby.

The teacher, Audrey McKim, had been shaping a children's story in her mind. Why not make the Dutch Boy her storybook hero?

The result: "Here Comes Dirk", (Oxford) Miss McKim's first published book.

Six-year-old Dirk Willem comes to Alberta with his "moeder and vader." He is too shy to follow his older sister, Anna, to school.

"It happens so often," Miss McKim says. "The new youngster is afraid of the first day at school. And imagine how much more frightening for a little boy in a new country."

But gradually, with the school picnic, the Christmas concert and a wise and kind teacher, young Dirk begans to feel at home.

Miss McKim knows what the seven-to-10 age bracket likes to read. A number of years ago she was a faithful contributor to "Jack and Jill", the "Country Guide," and Sunday School papers.

She used the impressive nom de plume "A Fulton Peers"—a combination of her grandmother's maiden names.

"But that name didn't last for long," she says. "And I was soon back to my own."

Miss McKim is the author of a novel, unpublished. Called "Lexy O'Connor", it is a sprightly story of a young girl's first year as a teacher in rural Alberta. In 1950 it tied for first place with Barbara Villy Cormack's "Local Rag" in the Alberta I.O.D.E. contest.

Miss McKim got the idea for "Here Comes Dirk" in 1947 when after a term in Ottawa as an exchange teacher, she took a summer course in juvenile writing at Columbia University, New York.

She was struck by the ignorance of Canadian customs among her fellow students.

"For instance, they hadn't heard of giving children 'The Bumps' on birthdays", Miss McKim recalls. "That's when I began to think of contrasting the Canadian and Dutch ways of life."

New Synthetic Fabrics Provide Many Clothing Improvements

By DOROTHY ROE

New York, (AP)—Is it animal, vegetable or mineral?

The old game is up against some tough sledding in the new fabrics that are on the market today. A generation ago the answers were simple. Most fabrics were either cotton or linen (vegetable) or wool or silk (animal).

But now we have clothing, upholstery fabrics, automobile tops and tires, awnings and outdoor furniture covers that are none of these. They are members of the vast new family of synthetics which are changing our way of life faster than we think.

The woman who goes shopping in the new wonderland of miracle fabrics, with the purpose of getting the most for her shrinking dollar, needs to be fully informed as to the specific advantages of each.

Many Improvements

The man-made fibres are getting more and more wonderful—but they are arriving on the market so fast that most average shoppers are confused as to which is which and why.

Most women are familiar with the first of the synthetic fabrics, rayon, used in a great percentage of feminine apparel. But many do not know the difference between its two forms—viscose and acetate. Viscose rayon, the first to be evolved from chemists' test tubes, is sturdy and tough, can be laundered almost as casually as cotton, does not melt under ironing.

Acetate rayon, introduced shortly after the stock market crash of 1929, is a more luxurious fabric in drape and appearance, requires greater care in handling. A move is now under way to require specific labeling of rayon fabrics as "viscose" or "acetate" or a blend of both, for consumer guidance in correct cleaning and care of garments.

Next and most sensational of the synthetic fibres was nylon, which was introduced late in 1938 and since has revolutionized the stocking and lingerie market. Because of its great strength and quick-drying properties, nylon has become a staple wardrobe item in most North American homes. Nylon stockings have replaced silk almost entirely, and most women have a wide range of nylon wearables, including nightgowns, slips, girdles, bras and blouses.

Instant Success

Nylon was an instant and sensational market success, and the demand for it still exceeds the supply. Its resistance to wear and its easy laundering endeared it to women almost overnight.

However, there were some points in which nylon was found lacking. Nylon curtains were found to shrink or stretch according to weather conditions. It did not withstand exposure to sunlight well.

So the chemists got to work and produced a new fibre, orlon, which had many of nylon's favorable characteristics and in addition stood up under all kinds of adverse weather conditions. Orlon has greater absorbency than nylon, a softer feel and is impervious to humidity changes. It is used for a great variety of outdoor fabrics, one of the most important of which is automobile tops. It also is used in curtains and in experimental quantities in clothing.

Newest of the synthetic family is dacron, which promises to give men a new freedom from cleaner's bills. This man-made fibre, on the market now in small quantities, is used in men's suits and in women's blouses and other wearing apparel. Its greatest value, in addition to quick-drying and easy laundering, is its ability to shed wrinkles.

Dacron Tough

Men's suits of dacron have been submerged in a swimming pool, dried, and then worn without pressing, looking as fresh and smooth as if they had just come from the tailor.

Still other synthetic fibres are still in the test tubes. Newest of all is Du Pont's "fibre E", a form of viscose rayon which will be used for upholstery and rugs, is impervious to moths, resistant to wear and weather and promises new fields of usefulness.

So when you go shopping, read the fabric labels well and remember what they mean: viscose rayon, for sturdy wear; acetate, for luxury fabrics, to be handled with care; nylon, for quick-drying and resistanec to abrasion; orlon, for weather resistance; dacron, for crease resistance; "fibre E", for long-wearing upholstery and rugs.

All of them offer a new horizon of luxury and usefulness at prices within the reach of average budgets.

Rev. J. A. O'Neill Gives Talk on 'Citizenship'

Marmora — The November meeting of the Catholic Women's League was held in Sacred Heart Hall last Thursday evening. Mrs. Charles Cook presided over a large attendance of members. The meeting opened in the usual manner with prayers led by the director, the Rev. J. A. O'Neill, following which prayers were said for two deceased members, Mrs. Michael Gallagher and Mrs. John Quinn, who had passed away since the last meeting.

After the correspondence was dealt with the treasurer's report was given by Mrs. Joseph O'Neill.

Eighteen Visits Made

Mrs. H. English reported for Social Welfare and Mrs. H. Brady and Mrs. J. A. Shannon reported 18 visits made to the sick and shut-ins. Mrs. B. Hughes and Mrs. J. McCrodan volunteered for next month.

The annual Christmas party was discussed and the date was set for Thursday, December 13th. Names were drawn for the exchange of gifts. Mrs. W. A. Shannon volunteered to be program convener for this event to succeed Mrs. J. Black.

It was decided to send a gift to a member who has recently left the parish and arrangements were made for the purchase of the gift, and also to send a donation of $15 to "Our Ladies" Missionaries.

The president thanked the members who had taken part in the drive for subscriptions to the Canadian Register.

Another box of bandages will be packed and sent to the leper colony.

The Rev. J. A. O'Neill then addressed the members on "Citizenship", and spoke on the Canadian Register Drive. He also gave an enlightening address on "Evolution".

Mrs. J. Black, program convener, took charge, and the following numbers were much enjoyed:

A reading by Mrs. Bernard Hughes, "The Sacrilege"; Rosewigs, "Ave Maria", rendered by Mrs. H. Brady and Miss Genevieve Shannon; a reading by Miss Mary Hughes "St. Peter and the Golden Gate", a piano solo by Mrs. Carl McCoy; a reading by Mrs. J. Black, "Petition of the Holy Souls."

Refreshments were served by the ladies of Group 7, and the gathering dispersed.

Rev. Sister M. Josephine has returned to Smiths Falls after visiting her mother, Mrs. John O'Neill.

Property Purchased

Mr. A. J. Maynes has purchased the building now occupied by Mr. George Forestell as a garage and service station. Owing to the fact the Department of Highways has given notice that the gasoline pumps must be removed from the street not later than January 1952. The business could not be successfully carried on without the sale of gasoline and it was decided to sell the property.

Mr. Maynes plans to have the present building torn down and a new one erected in the spring. The new building will be almost the full width of the space between the Plaza theatre and Mr. McTaggart's radio and appliance store. Present plans are to make two long stores and a restaurant for rental purposes.

Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Kilpatrick attended the funeral of the late Samuel George Both at Northbrook on Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. J. M. Brownlie spent a few days in Toronto this week.

Grant Airhart, of Deloro, has returned home from St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Freeman have moved to Tweed.

Mr. William McCallum is quite ill at his home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Clemenger and son John, visited Mr. and Mrs. Chester Cole at Vansickle on Sunday.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Don't confuse excitement with a serious attachment

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 17 years old, and very much in love with a man of 22 whom I have known for about a year. We are both the quiet type and like the same things, so that we are very congenial.

A few months ago, he was drafted. After that, I went out with other boys, but I couldn't seem to enjoy myself. Last month when he came home on furlough, he told me for the first time that he loved me. We both became very emotional, but being the thoughtful, wonderful guy he is, he thought of me first and kept his emotions under control.

Now I don't know whether or not I should be honest with him, and tell him that while I still feel the same about him, I have a wandering eye. What I mean is that he seemed to wake me up emotionally, so that I'm more conscious of men, everything about them. I know I am not ready for love yet, but I can't help my feelings.

Should I try to forget my love for the soldier, and maybe lose him, or make up my mind that he is the only one for me, and pay no attention to the other boys?

Jay

Dear Jay:

The fact that you have become so emotionally aware of the other sex makes it quite plain that, as you say yourself, "you are not yet ready for love." To try to persuade yourself, at this point, that you have found the man you want to marry, would be reckless indeed. Obviously, you had reached a stage of development where you were ready for an awakening, physically and emotionally, and this particular man— doubtless the first one who ever really made love to you—happened to bring it about. Don't confuse this with a serious attachment for him.

If you see what happened in its proper light, it should be a great help to you in appraising your feelings as you make friends with other young men. I don't think you should feel you need to explain yourself at all to the chap in question. Simply indicate by the kind of letters you write him—friendly, but not over-sentimental—that you are fond of him as a friend, but that you intend to make a lot of other friends before settling on a special one.

Her best friend likes her boy friend

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been very close friends with a certain boy for more than a year. The problem is that my best friend says she is crazy about him, but I know he doesn't care for her that way. She knows nothing about my feelings for him, and I dread the day when she finds out. I don't want to hurt her, but the time has come when I feel we just can't go on any longer under false pretenses. The boy and I are both completely puzzled as to what we should do. Neither of us wants to hurt her because she is so sweet and sincere in everything. Do you think we should tell her how things stand, or just let it ride?

J. S.

Dear J.S.:

It seems strange that if this girl is your best friend, you could have gone with a boy for over a year without her knowledge. Best friends are usually more confidential with each other than that.

However, if you want to be really aboveboard about this thing, I think the next time the subject of the boy comes up, you had better explain the situation to her as tactfully as possible. If you don't but keep on concealing the fact that you are going with the boy, it will not only make you uncomfortable and self-conscious when you are with your girl friend, but when she does find out, as she certainly will eventually—and probably from someone else—she will be more hurt than if she heard it frankly from you. Don't you agree?

Food for Thought

Low Calorie-Count Meals

By MARY MOORE

It was to Miss M.B. I made a promise to give more calorie-count meals.

This is such a popular topic I sometimes wonder if folks have substituted counting calories for enjoying meals.

A lot of calorie-calculators could save themselves the bother if they use raw fruits for dessert, thus skipping, all of those weight-builders like pie, cake, pudding, cookies and other sweetened desserts. Drop to a minimum butter, gravy mayonnaise sugar and cream, too. Then if your protein intake is high and you use whole wheat bread instead of white all that is left for you to eat in unlimited quantities is fresh foods—fruits and vegetables. Presto!—you will be lean and what's more, my hearties, healthy.

BREAKFASTS

(1) Six ounces orange juice, 60 cal.; 1 slice whole wheat toast 75 cal.; 1-2 pat butter 38 cal.; 1 egg 80 cal.; clear coffee 0 cal.

(2) One-half grapefruit (no sugar) 50 cal.; 3-4 cup hot whole wheat cereal with added wheat germ 105 cal. with 2 teaspoons brown sugar 27 cal. and 1-2 cup whole milk 75 cal.; 2 cups clear coffee 0 cal.

(3) One whole orange sliced or sectioned 75 cal.; 1 scrambled egg on unbuttered whole wheat toast 165 cal.; clear coffee 0 cal.

LUNCHES

(1) Three-quarters cup (6 oz.) homemade vegetable soup 105 cal.; 2 slices whole wheat bread sandwich, no butter, 1 1-8-inch thick slice lean meat 250-275 cal.; 8-oz. glass skim milk 80 cal.; 1 orange 60 to 70 cal.

(2) Two slices whole wheat bread sandwich no butter, 1 hard-cooked egg chopped, 1 thick leaf lettuce, 1 teaspoon mayonnaise 265 cal.; 1 8-oz. glass skim milk 80 cal.; 1 banana 100-115 cal.

(3) Three-quarters cup homemade cream of tomato soup 160 cal.; salad with 2 1-2 tablespoons cottage cheese, 1 small heart celery, 1 medium tomato, 2 thick leaves lettuce, 1 teaspoon mayonnaise 130 cal.; 1 slice whole wheat bread with 1-2 pat butter 120 cal.; 8-oz. glass skim milk 80 cal.

DINNERS

(1) One 4-oz. cake ground beef broiled (not fried) 200 cal.: 1 small baked potato 100 cal. including skin (with 1-2 pat butter 138 cal. altogether); 6-oz. serving unbuttered chopped boiled carrots 45 cal.; all-green, all-fresh salad with 1 teaspoon French dressing (1 cup salad) 25 cal.; one-half grapefruit (no sugar) 50 cal.; clear coffee 0 cal.

(2) One 3-4-inch pork chop fat trimmed off (broiled) 250 to 275 cal.; 4-inch square piece baked squash with 1-2 pat butter 75 cal.; 6-oz. cooked spinach with lemon, no butter 30 cal.; fruit cup, 6 oz., with fresh orange, grapefruit, banana and seeded grapes, no sugar 80 to 100 cal.; clear coffee 0 cal.

(3) Broiled pickerel fillet (not fried) with lemon 150 cal.; 6-oz. serving scalloped tomatoes 50 cal.; 6-oz. serving boiled or steamed cauliflower, 1-2 pat butter 75 cal.; 1-4 head lettuce no dressing 15 cal; 1 dessert pear or apple 45 or 70 cal.; clear coffee 0 cal.

GOOD MANNERS

And "Christmas messages", said Charles Dickens, who was very knowing about the meaning of Christmas, "are a great accumulation of friendly recollections." "Friendly recollections". . . . heart-warming, endearing, treasures of Remembrance!

It makes sense. . . .to use print-stickers on Christmas Card envelopes

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I now have a home of our own. . . "at long last!" After his long service in World War II, he started in a new position, and then we started to try to find a house we could afford. Now I'm so thrilled and proud to have a "real, permanent address" that I ordered several packages of stickers printed with our name and address. This year he and I though it would be a good idea for us to send quite a few Christmas cards, with the hope of getting in touch with friends we haven't seen or perhaps haven't even heard from for some time (some of his war buddies, for example), as well as keeping in touch with relatives and friends.

Now I am wondering if it would be correct for me to use these printed stickers on the back of the envelopes of our Christmas cards. In so many cases we are uncertain about the present addresses, and also here is the plain printed information about our correct for me to write the name new address. Or would it be more and address?

"Happy Home"

Please use your "proud new" stickers . . . this indeed is proper, sensible, much more practical than writing your name and new address. Christmas is a busy season for everyone. . .certainly for post office attendants. . . and therefore every sensible short cut to definiteness and clarity is welcome! Everyone to whom you send the cards will be informed of your new address. . . or, if an addressee is not located, the Post Office has the printed information by which the card will be returned to you. So have fun sending lots of Christmas cards . . . .with the stickers caroling the good news of your "Happy New Home"!

An engaged couple may send Christmas cards together

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I wish you would tell me that it would be correct for Ken and me to send our Christmas cards together! We just became engaged last week—and we think it would be thrilling if we could do this. However, neither one of us has ever seen this done. Please say "Yes", if you can!

Ken and Kate

Yes! It would be correct, and, as you say, "thrilling" . . . .bless your happy hearts! But . . .are you listening? . . . such intimate cards should be sent only to your and your Ken's relatives and intimate friends.

A particularly delightful way to send these twosome cards is for you to sign your name on the card below the message (which, preferably, may be handwritten, but of course may be a printed message), and for your fiance (how do you like the sound of this new-word-in-your-life?) to write his name on the line below. (No title before either name, of course . . . .no "Miss," no "Mr.")

BEAUTY

Housework and exercise

You take your life in your hands if you suggest to a homemaker that she needs exercise. Her response will be violent. If she has no household help, tends several small children, goes through the daily treadmill of bed-making, cooking dishwashing and a hundred and one small duties like answering the telephone picking up toys and hanging up coats and hats she will fancy— and with reason—that her activities are sufficient. Her idea of bliss is a nap in the afternoon and a good long sleep at night.

Nothing takes the place of outdoor exercise. Even a brisk walk for several blocks will bring her a change of thought will air-condition her lungs and give her a pick up. Woman's place may be in the home but if she doesn't get out occasionally she may suffer from boredom and monotony. No matter how much one love's one's home the old routine can get one down especially if one is a demon housekeeper must have everything just so. Then there is the danger of what might be called the kitchen sink figure.

Time does not improve a woman's shape. How she carries herself is important. During the daily duties every effort must be made to maintain proper stance so that youthful lines will not disappear and unlovely ones take their place. The backbone must be extended the chest held high; shoulders must have an easy pose and the tummy must be held in and up.

There must be perfect body balance; it is an insurance against excessive fatigue. Shoes should be comfortable. The oxford is best. It must have flexible leather soles so that there will be freedom of movement. It should conform to the outline of the foot, provide support. Women who trail around at home in half-worn-out party slippers will soon find themselves beset with foot ills.

When picking up articles from the floor bend at the line of the hips, not at the waist. Hips are natural hinges.

When using the vacuum cleaner or carpet sweeper, do not bend far forward with chest contracted. You can make an exercise of this chore, if you try.

The kitchen sink should be the right height. If it is too low, place something under the dishpan to lift it higher, so you won't be bending over.

Endeavor to save steps; you'd never believe how many you take in a day. If possible, find moments for complete relaxation. Perhaps you can catch forty winks when the baby has his nap. No doubt you need them.

RAWDON

rs. Percy MacMullen Reviews ifty Years of W.M.S. Activity

Rawdon — On Wednesday ening, November 28th, Mount asant - Rawdon United Church mmemorated 50 years of Mis-onary activities in this com-unity without the traditional rthday cake and entertaining other societies as has been the ustom of past years on other nniversaries. The West Hunt-gdon United Church choir of ver 20 voices under the direc-on of their leader, Mrs. William rant, presented their sacred antata, "The Rolling Seasons," omposed of Caleb Simper. Mrs. orley Clarke A.T.C.M. gave xcellent piano accompaniment hroughout the presentation. The hoir was assisted by Mr. Don ichardson, Thomasburg, also y Mrs. Arthur Hassall and Miss argaret Haggerty of St. An-drew's Presbyterian choir, and he pastor Rev. Morley Clarke.

acred Music

The choir of mixed voices ren-dered choruses, solos, trios, quar-tets and the beauty of reverence was carried through the various selections. "Fear Not, O Lord be Glad and Rejoice"; "They That Trust in the Lord Shall be as Mount Zion"; "Before Jehovah's Awful Throne"; "Praise Waiteth For Thee"; "O Thou That Hear-est Prayer"; "Onward Ever On-ward"; "Symphony"; "Thou Makest the Earth Soft With Showers"; "The King of Love My Shepherd is", and in closing. "Thou Crownest the Year With Thy Goodness."

The pastor of the church and Mrs. Ross Hoard, president of the W.M.S. both extended thanks and appreciation to the choir for their fine rendition.

Rev. R. R. Bonsteel gave a brief synopsis of the missionary activities down through the years which he had prepared from previous reports compiled in 1938 by the late Mrs. Allan Bailey and in 1950 by Mrs. Percy MacMullen.

Organized 1901

He told how Mrs. Levi Massey, district organizer for the Methodist W.M.S. was responsible for a circuit organization on September 30th 1897. Later, the ladies at Mount Pleasant, decided to have their own organization and Mrs. Massey organized this group in June 1901 with Mrs. James Williams, president; Mrs. Frank Potts, recording secretary; Mrs. Frank Williams, treasurer and ten charter members as follows: Mrs. Daniel Johnson, Mrs. Nancy McConnell, Mrs. Rueben Hoard, Mrs. Allan Bailey, Miss Phronia MacDonald, Mrs. Will Johnson and her daughter, Miss Lottie Johnson. These ten ladies have all passed on to their reward but there works still follow them.

Mrs. James Williams served as president for the first ten years and the meetings were held in the church as that was a central place. Each year Mrs. Williams, with her assistants canvassed every home in the community and that took several afternoons in horse and buggy days. Any lady giving $1 had her name placed on the membership roll and lesser amounts were written down as contributions.

Every fall Mrs. Williams arranged a concert at the church with a mixed program half of which was sacred. She chose selections for the pupils of the Williams School and Allan School to sing and recite and paid a special visit at both schools and solicited assistance from the school teachers.

The writer well remembers the thrill of the first piece which she recited at the age of seven entitled, "The Little Dog Under the Wagon". the selection was chosen by Mrs. Williams and is still in the reciter's possession.

A Member 50 Years

In September 1901, Mrs. George Weaver came as a bride to Mount Pleasant. She joined the society that autumn as in Methodist days the year began May 1st one year and ended April 30th the next year. Mrs. Weaver helped to canvass in those early days. She served as president three years 1926-27-28 and has been a life member since 1927. All through the 50 years, Mrs. Weaver has contributed time, talent and money to the cause of missions.

Mrs. Allan Bailey served as the second president from 1911-1916 five years, and she also knew the hardships that accompany a small organization to promote missions. Each year more women were becoming interested in the organization but the house to house canvasses were made, sacred concerts and missionary plays were sponsored.

In 1912 the W.M.S. ladies offered ardent prayer for a Mission Circle leader and Mrs. Robert Pounder guided that group of nine girls for six years. The meetings were held in the various homes. Ready money was scarce so the girls pieced quilt blocks twice yearly, then Mrs. Pounder made into quilts for sale and the proceeds was used for Circle work.

Mrs. Pounder also made her large patch of rhubarb available to the girls to sell at ten cents a basket and she also thought up various other ways of raising money for missions.

One year the girls sold names for an autograph quilt which had been pieced by Mrs. Daniel Johnson and quilted by the W.M.S. The writer earned the quilt and over $20 and this was used to make herself and another girl Miss Lulu Johnson, life members of the Mission Circle.

In 1915 the Mission Circle and Epworth League staged a three-act play and a varied concert at the church and realized almost $50. Two interested men, both now deceased, Messrs. Gilbert Smith and Manson McConnell, gathered the quarters at the door and equally divided the money between these two organizations.

Mrs. Allan Bailey became a life member in 1927 and was active in the work all through the years until her death in 1950. Her memory is still with us.

Third President

The third president, Mrs. John Reid was unable to be in attendance at this 50th anniversary. She served five years 1916-1921. Sacred concerts were held each autumn to raise money for missions during her regime.

Mrs. Thomas McKeown, who now resides in Springbrook, served two years as the fourth president 1922-23 and a series of ten cent teas was held to raise funds. Mrs. McKeown also served another year in 1930, and was honored last year at the June celebration.

Mrs. John Holmes became a life member in 1926. She served the last year 1924 as president of the Methodist group and in 1925 as the first president of union and another couple of years in 1948-49. Mrs. Holmes is honorary president of the organization and the pastor regretted her absence from this gathering.

Thirteen Presidents

Rev. Bonsteel read a list of presidents not mentioned previously which are Mrs. Ross Hoard, a total of four years; the late Mrs. F. G. Joblin, two years; Mrs. Percy MacMullen, seven consecutive years and a half year as vice president; Mrs. T. F. Townsend, three and a half years; with one year terms for Mrs. Arthur Phillips, Mrs. Wilbert Jeffs and Mrs. Roy Thrasher. There have been a total of 13 different presidents in the 50 years.

The pastor also paid tribute to those faithful members who have never acted as president but who have given service to the organization throughout the years.

Life Members

The six life members have each contributed their own $25 with the exception of the latter, who had that honor bestowed on her at Odessa this year. They are as follows: 1920, Mrs. Frank Jeffs; 1926, Mrs. John Holmes; 1927, Mrs. George Weaver; 1942, Mrs. Ross Hoard; 1947, Mrs. Percy MacMullen, 1951, Mrs. Charles Bonsteel.

There are 18 annual paid members but Mrs. Arthur Phillips moved to Belleville and only was able to attend the January meeting.

The allocation for the W.M.S., Mission Band and Baby Band is $260 for 1951 which is the highest allocation since Union, but all realize that when the value of the Canadian dollar dropped to a new low, it was necessary to raise more funds for repairs to buildings and continued hospital work.

Previous to depression days the allocations ranged from $300-400 and there have only been a very few times during the 50 years that the allocation hasn't been met and exceeded.

One of the traditions down through the years has been that all money was remitted to Presbyterial treasurer at the end of December and more was even kept over.

Had Faith in God

The women had faith in God and the society has been richly blessed despite the fact they have always been few in numbers.

Since depression days, the society adopted systematic givings by envelope and it is only on special occasions that any event is staged to raise money.

In June 1951 a special celebration of 25 years of Union was held at the church under the direction of Mrs. Roy Thrasher and the groups were able to exceed their allocation of $255 by over $25.

Last year the Dominion Board sent out an appeal for an extra dollar for every year of union and a large number of auxiliaries across Canada responded. The 40th anniversary was celebrated on June 1941 at the church in the afternoon with a Memorial service for 22 deceased members.

The 45th anniversary was held at the church hall in the evening on November 20th 1946 with Mr. Kenneth Stewart as guest speaker. Over 150 people attended each of these gatherings.

Mission Band

During Mrs. Joblin's presidency a Mission Band was formed with two groups convening at the Williams and Allan Schools.

Beginning in 1929, both groups were combined under the leadership of Mrs. Frank Hutchinson of Deflor, for two years after which Miss Helen Smith, Mrs. Elgie Joblin of Muncey, served a two year term.

Miss Edna Thrasher, Mrs. Milton Shaw of Ivanhoe, served as leader for six years after which Mrs. Cyrus Summers acrried on this department for seven years.

Beginning in 1935 the Mission Band received their first certificate of recognition from Presbyterial and continued to have that honor until 1950 when the Band lost out because they did not use the prescribed Study Book. Until the church was newly decorated these certificates were given an honored place on the back walls of the church and many visitors remarked on the wonderful achievement of the Mission Band.

In 1949 Mrs. John Mulheron as Band leader forwarded to Presbyterial treasurer $50.55. This was the largest amount ever remitted by the Mission Band as their usual giving is around $35. The Mission Band children sell Christmas cards to augment their funds under the leadership now of Mrs. Herbert Smith.

Baby Band

The first leader appointed was Miss Eileen MacMullen, now Mrs. Sid Demorest of Stirling, with Mrs. Cyrus Summers as assistant. There were 17 members enrolled the first year and over $5 remitted to Presbyterial.

Mrs. Sid Demorest again took over this department on her return from Newmarket and carried on until she moved to Stirling where she is now leader of St. Paul's Baby Band.

Mrs. MacMullen then acted as leader and in 1948 the sum of $22 was remitted and has been the highest contribution from the Baby Band during their eight years of organization. Mrs. Frank Spencer Jr., is the 1951 leader.

The district convention was held at Mount Pleasant just previous to union and two sectional rallies have been held since, on September 28th, 1933 and in October 1945.

Rev. R. R. Bonsteel paid tribute to the grand work accomplished by this small group of women throughout the 50 years and said the W.M.S. had given strength to the church as a whole and their services would never be forgotten. He commended the members for their endeavors in trying to carry on the great task laid down by those pioneer women who led the crusade for missions in this community in days of yore.

Sixteen Members

There were 16 members of Mount Pleasant Women's Missionary Society in attendance. Mrs. Ross Hoard, Mrs. George Weaver, Mrs. Frank Jeffs, Mrs. Percy MacMullen, Mrs. Roy Thrasher, Mrs. Frank Smith, Mrs. Will Potts, Mrs. Kenneth Weaver, Mrs. Gordon Linn and daughter, Miss Ruth Linn, Mrs. Ross Jeffs, Mrs. Herbert Smith, Mrs. Raymond McConnell, Mrs. Milford Wrightman, Mrs. Burton Sharpe and Mrs. Charles Bonsteel.

The West Huntingdon group were served sandwiches, cookies, tarts, pickles and coffee by several W.M.S. members and Rev. Morley Clarke expressed appreciation on their behalf for hospitality.

May we repeat in closing this press report, the words of the late Mrs. Allan Bailey, who said in 1938, "We are proud of our society and its achievements throughout the years, but our aim is to do much better work in the years ahead and our ideal will never be reached until every woman member of the church is also an active member of the Woman's Missionary Society."

Kennedy Thinks Milk Should Sell For 24 cts. Quart

Toronto, Dec. 4. (CP)—Agriculture Minister Kennedy said yesterday that Ontario milk should sell for 24 cents a quart and farmers should receive $5 a hundredweight for the milk they produce.

He called the milk industry a "depressed industry" that needed higher prices to stay in business.

Milk now sells in Toronto for 21 cents a quart and farmers receive $4.55 a hundredweight.

"Milk is not only far too cheap, but the cheapest food in the province," he told representatives of the milk drivers' union in his office at the parliament buildings.

"The farm is losing its cattle. Farmers will not stay in an industry where they lose money. Milk production last year went down 17 per cent in the province."

Mr. Kennedy said he blames the decreased consumption on civic officials and others who keep saying milk is too dear.

"Every time they talk about the high cost of milk, they reduce the amount of milk the children of the province drink."

Police Arrest Three and Seize $30,000 in Gold

Buffalo, N.Y., Dec. 4. (AP)—Police last night arrested three men and seized $30,000 in gold and silver believed to be involved in an international smuggling operation.

Edwin Manning, agent in charge of the Buffalo office of the Secret Service, identified the three occupants as Paul La Mothe, 23, of South Porcupine, Ont., and Manuel Lester, 30, and David N. Brown, 42, of New York City.

David Cardosa customs agent in charge of the Buffalo office, said one of the three had been suspected as a smuggler for some time, and that his appearance in the Niagara frontier area might mean that a shipment of gold and silver was about to come over the border from Canada.

Police said the gold, weighing about 400 pounds, had been stolen little by little from the Timmins, Ont., mining area.

Egyptian Govt. Cancels Orders For Expulsion

Washington, Dec. 4. (AP)—The Egyptian Embassy here announced last night the Egyptian government has cancelled orders for the expulsion of AP correspondent Fred Zusy from Egypt.

"This action was taken by the Egyptian government in order to dispel any false impression that might be created concerning the free flow of news from Egypt," the Egyptian ambassador, Kamil Abdul Rahim, said in a statement.

Earlier in the day, the state department said the American embassy in Cairo, where Zusy is chief of Bureau for The Associated Press, discussed the expulsion order with the Egyptian Foreign Office and pointed out "the most unfortunate consequence of the Egyptian action."

Jolliffe Will Not Seek Seat

Toronto, Dec. 4. (CP)—E. B. Jolliffe, Ontario C.C.F. leader, will not seek a seat in the Ontario Legislature at this time, the party's provincial office announced yesterday. Mr. Jolliffe was defeated in York South riding in the Nov. 22 Ontario general election.

Morden Lazarus, C.C.F. provincial secretary, said the decision was reached with the concurrence of the provincial executive after a weekend meeting.

Mr. Lazarus said consideration had been given "to the courteous intonations" of Premier Frost that Mr. Jolliffe would not be opposed by a government candidate if he were to stand in one of the the ridings of Ontario and Cochrane South.

Mr. Jolliffe was defeated by William Beech, Progressive Conservative. The C.C.F. held only two ridings now held by the C.C.F.

Canada's World Role Presents Challenge, Says B. C. Gardner

Bank of Montreal President Warns Against Danger of Further Inflation — Sees Need for Savings, Productivity, Intelligent Realism

GORDON BALL, GENERAL MANAGER, REPORTS INCREASE IN DEMAND FOR ALL BANK SERVICES —ASSETS, DEPOSITS, LOANS BREAK RECORDS

Montreal, Dec. 3—The march of events "is hurrying this country along a pathway of development which otherwise might have taken a longer time to traverse," B. C. Gardner, M.C., president of the Bank of Montreal, told shareholders at their 134th annual meeting today. Canadians would do well to think of the challenging aspects of these "dynamic forces," he said, in view of the danger that, "with more insistent demands on our output than can readily be met," there was a "very real" possibility of further inflation.

A new high in B of M year-end assets, $2,222,000,000, was reported by Gordon R. Ball, general manager. Deposits also stood at a record peak, $2,085,000,000, and the number of deposit accounts increased to a new all-time level —1,873,519. Provision for taxes was $5,001,000, while $4,320,000 had been paid in dividends. A transfer of $3,000,000 to the Reserve Fund increased it to $51,000,000.

Current loans and discounts in Canada amounted to $558 millions, compared with $480 millions a year ago, Mr. Ball said. "This increase occurred mainly in the early months of our fiscal year before the change in national monetary policy began to take effect."

Progress Plus Problems

Summing up 1951 economic trends in Canada, Mr. Gardner said that, while business activity has continued at "a very high level," the whole picture "has been complicated by the distortions of an inflationary trend, and, in some measure, by the steps taken to combat the trend itself."

Due to official deviation from an easy-money policy, he continued, a "more realistic" interest-rate structure now existed, permitting the price of money to begin to exercise "its traditional stabilizing function." The government's emergency credit restrictions, although irksome — or worse — to some, had been met with "a gratifying understanding" on the part of B of M customers.

Where major difficulties were being experienced, the president felt they were, in the main, the consequences of the psychological response to the sudden advent of the Korean crisis. "A situation such as we had in the second half of 1950, with sharply rising prices and widespread fear of shortages, naturally encourages over-buying and a tendency to run into debt to acquire goods. Such a condition, however, inevitably builds up its own correctives."

These readjustments had, he said, been taking place in recent months, and while they might be in part the consequences of deliberate anti-inflationary policy, they were also, in large measure, the inevitable reaction from over-buying.

National Future Bright

"One may safely forecast a brilliant long-range future for Canada," Mr. Gardner said. ". . . In a desperately uneasy world, in which the shadows of communism and turbulent nationalism do not grow less, the march of events is hurrying this country along a pathway of development which otherwise might have taken a longer time to traverse."

But Canadians should see not only the opportunity but the challenge, he stated. In the immediate future, the proportion of national output devoted to defence production and to the building of industrial plant and equipment seemed likely to be increased. All this, added to a "natural urge" for bettering living-standards and extending social services, resulted in a danger of "more insistent demands on our output than can readily be met." If this is so, "the possibility of further inflationary pressure is still very real."

Analyzing powerful long-term influences which were "tending gradually to undermine the value of the dollar," the president commented upon the danger of the assumption that "all of us can have more and more by doing less and less to get it." The country had great resources, but they could be converted into wealth only through the efforts of "a working force of less than five and a half million people."

". . . We stand at present in need of a great re-emphasis on the place and value of saving as a force on the side of stability," Mr. Gardner said. National policies, he felt, should recognize fully, that saving must be made worthwhile. Despite breathtaking advances in technology, work and thrift have lost none of their validity." "Now, as always, security and welfare are not free for the taking, but the rewards of constructive effort and intelligent realism."

General Manager's Address

In reviewing the B of M's year, Mr. Ball emphasized the further increase in the number of banking transactions in all categories. "It costs money to handle money," he said, "and we have during the year been obliged to revise upwards some of our loan rates, as well as certain of our commission and service charges where it was apparent that costs had already outrun the remuneration received for handling the business."

Mr. Ball stated that a substantial part of the bank's program of new construction, alterations and improvements, deferred during the war years, had now been completed. While the bank has had to undertake certain new projects of an absolutely essential nature, these are all "considered in the light of the prior needs of defence production."

The general manager expressed pleasure at the record total of 12,296 shareholders at the year-end. "We are glad to see," he said, "a wider participation by the public in the ownership of our shares . . ."

Reasoned Confidence

Mr. Ball noted that, amid the adjustments and uncertainties of the past year, there had been "a highly significant tendency" on the part of businessmen to make long-term plans with a confidence in the Canadian outlook born of a reasoned appraisal of the logic of events.

In discussing external trade, he commented upon the emergence of a sizeable deficit on current account transactions. "Exports have been running well ahead of last year. But imports, particularly from the United States, have been rising even more rapidly, reflecting a high level of Canadian business activity, vigorous industrial expansion and the increasing momentum of the defence program." However, "Canada's reserves of gold and U.S. dollars have declined only moderately," because most of the adverse balance of trade was financed by an inflow of capital into Canada.

Mentioning again the great activity of the past year, in all departments of the bank, Mr. Ball said, "I cannot find words to express adequately my appreciation of the services rendered by our staff at all levels, both in meeting these problems and in carrying on the day-to-day task of providing constantly expanding services at a high level of efficiency."

Referring to the welfare of the staff, the general manager noted that the bank was endeavouring to meet the continued increase in the cost of living by the payment of monthly cost-of-living bonuses. He also reported an increased schedule of insurance under the Group Life Insurance Policy, and greater benefits under the Group Accident and Sickness Policy.

ROSLIN

Mr., Mrs. C. Chapman Celebrate Golden Wedding Anniversary

Roslin — An event of interest to many residents in this community occurred on Tuesday when Mr. and Mrs. Charles Chapman, Roslin, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary.

Born at Orono, Durham County the bride of 50 years ago was Evelyn Ann, the daughter of Jane Ann Johnson, and Henry Higgins; and the groom, Charles Edmund, son of Sarah Cockell, Picton, and William Armstrong Chapman, Roslin, was born on the farm now owned by Everett Geen and lived there all his life with the exception of five years spent in Toronto as a conductor on the Toronto street railway.

Mr. and Mrs. Chapman were married in Toronto by Rev. J. L. Gordon, pastor of Bond Street Congregational Church, of which the bride was a member, on Nov. 27th, 1901.

Recalls First Meeting

They retired in Roslin approximately eight years ago. The groom recalls the first time meeting his bride-to-be: Occasionally he delivered an editorial to her uncle, Mr. George Johnson, where she was visiting, but after meeting her, he says he couldn't get the following papers there fast enough.

Many friends called during the afternoon and evening to congratulate the couple and to wish them many more happy years.

Refreshments were served throughout the day and presided over by their daughters, Mrs. Arnold and Miss Velma.

The couple received a shower of cards of congratulations, including one air mail from Bermuda; a telegram from Toronto, and a telephone call from Mrs. Brand, as due to circumstances, she and her husband were unable to attend.

In addition to lovely gifts from the family to their parents, Mrs. Chapman received flowers and gifts from the W.A. of Roslin United Church, the Women's Institute of Roslin; and Tweed Eastern Star 148, in appreciation of her services in the various societies. Mr. Chapman also from the Tweed Masonic Lodge, A. F. and A. M., of which he is an honorary member.

Mr. and Mrs. Chapman have three daughters, Mrs. Brand (Aletha), Windsor; Mrs. Arnold (Edna), Toronto, and Miss Velma of Toronto. Mr. and Mrs. Arnold and Velma were present for the happy occasion.

A son died in 1910 at the age of three months.

States Pope's Pronouncements 'Harsh, Heartless'

London, Dec. 4—(AP) — The Church of Scotland today described as "harsh and heartless' the Pope's recent pronouncements on the responsibility of obstetricians during childbirth.

In its magazine, The Monthly Record, the Scottish church declared the Pope's remarks typified "the thorough going policy of the Vatican to dominate every sphere of human life and conduct."

The Pope told a meeting of Italian obstetricians Oct. 29 that "to save the mother's life is a very noble aim: but the direct killing of the baby as a means to that end is not permitted."

On Nov. 28 he amplified this statement to say that a pregnant mother may receive necessary surgical or medical treatment even if a consequence is "the inevitable death of the fetus." He said this could not be called a "direct killing" of the baby.

The chief said he has rented an apartment in the city, beginning Jan. 1.

"Go back to your ship, get cleaned up and have a good breakfast," the magistrate urged. "What are you going to have for breakfast?" he asked as an afterthought.

"I guess I'll have a couple of beers," Riley replied.

Huge Baseball Deal Involving $750,000 Worth Of Talent In Making

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

COULD BE!

Doug. Smith of Montreal, one of the better sports broadcasters of this broad Dominion, especially in the hockey realm, voiced the opinion in his Sunday sports round-up that if National Hockey League players got the lead out of their legs during thé dying minutes of a tied game there would not be half the stalemates that have occurred this season.

Smith is of the opinion that players when they see the hand on the clock nearing the deadline with the score all even appear to be satisfied with the point-split and settle back to protect their end of the even-steven pointage.

There isn't any doubt, as Frank Boucher points out, that customers especially those in the United States National Hockey League centres want to see a game decided one way or t'other whether overtime is played or not. He believes that if such were the case the alarming drop in attendance figures would soon reverse itself.

NICE FELLA!

We listened with a lot of interest to a brief post-banquet address given by popular Jack Roxburgh, president of the Ontario Hockey Association, at the Ontario Minor Hockey Association convention in the King Edward Hotel on Saturday. Jack, a "graduate" from minor hockey ranks and a life member of the organization has gone a long way in amateur hockey since he, with a few others originated the OMHA eighteen years ago.

He stressed the fact that hockey plays a tremendous part in the sport of not only Ontario but the Dominion and the world at large.

"There is no other sport in the world" Jack said, "that reaches into every home in Ontario, directly or indirectly than hockey. Its true value is only assessed by what it does for that most important member of the family — youth. It has been proven that as hockey increases in a community juvenile delinquency slumps commensurately."

Along with other speakers Roxburgh urged delegates present to insist that their coaches and managers, and many of them were in these categories, curb rough play as much as possible. "Hockey is a hard game and should be played hard," he said, "but it should be played straight."

* * *

THEY START YOUNG!

Speaking of rugged rambunctious hockey, from the performances in the last two games it would seem the junior Hawks are trying to outdo their big brothers in the senior "B" group in the matter of populating the penalty box. They were sent to durance vile but plenty in their last two games against the Kingston Vics in which no less than forty seven penalties were handed out to both squads, according to the summaries at hand. Of this number 28 went to the credit or otherwise of the junior Hawks. During the past few years, at least as long as this corner can remember, junior hockey games between teams from Belleville and Kingston were never what might be called panty-waist affairs. They were nearly always knock-em-down-drag-em-out affairs and from their performances thus far this season, the times haven't changed to any noticeable extent.

As a matter of fact the play has been rougher if anything and unless something is done more or less immediately, somebody is going to incur a very serious if not permanent injury. Coach "Red" Doran has made it plain that his Hawks will play hockey on the ice and not in the penalty box in the future, or else. Max Jackson who, it appears, always was in his glory when the going was rough, should go out and do likewise.

It is readily understandable that a hockey player especially he of the junior ranks will retaliate sooner or later if he gets a poke in the schnozzle, or the butt end of a stick or a knee or elbow when least expected. But dangit somebody must start these capers. This "He did it to me first" is all well and good, but somebody is the sinner in the first place.

We do not know if pride of team and the urge to win, but not at any cost, went out with "amateurism" but it definitely looks to this corner as though some players we have seen go out there to get walloped and wallop in return. The fact that the team is penalized through loss of manpower when they are sitting in the hoosegow apparently does not enter their heads. They are out "to get the guy that got me" and usually get him they do, or try to which is just as bad as far as the sin-bin is concerned.

There is too much of the "get your man" stuff going on mixed plentifully with applications of the Mosiac law of "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth" although the latter usually leave home in clusters. Nell's Bells, as the loss of a single tooth in these hockey days is merely a matter of spitting it out, getting a new one and soaking the sponsor with the bill. In the old days a player retired to the dressing room with a cracked molar. In these hot, hectic hockey times, a junior will swallow a couple of teeth in his stride and wonder what became of them, after the game is over.

As we have mentioned before it may not be too long before hockey players enter the icelane lists like knights of old, clad in armor but unmounted. The joustings while slowed up should result in the "snappings" of many lances with the clanks of spears on helmet resounding through the arena. Doctors would be out. All that is necessary would be a couple of blacksmiths, plumbers and body and fender men, not to mention a couple of derricks.

May be Closed This Week At Minor League Convention; Affects Major League Stars

By JOE REICHLER

Columbus, O., Dec. 4 (AP) —A huge three-team player trade involving Brooklyn, Cincinnati and Philadelphia Phillies is brewing at the minor-league convention today. The deal, which may be closed during the big - league meeting in New York this weekend, represents more than $750,000 worth of playing talent.

If it can be worked out — and only one player stands in the way —here is what will happen:

The Phils will get first-baseman Gil Hodges and rookie shortstop Bobby Morgan of Brooklyn. They will give up outfielders Del Ennis and Dick Sisler, first-baseman Eddie Waitkus and the choice of pitcher Bubba Church or Russ Meyer. The Dodgers will send Ennis and pitcher Ralph Branca to the Reds for pitcher Herman Wehmeier and outfielder Johnny Wyrostek.

Holding Up Deal

Here is what is holding up the deal: The Phils have offered catcher Andy Seminick instead of Ennis. The Dodgers insist on Ennis because he is the man the Reds want or one of their star hurlers.

E. J. (Buzzy) Bavasi, Dodger vice-president, frankly admitted that the Phils had made him an offer for Hodges. He neither denied nor confirmed that the players mentioned above were those discussed. He did say he told the Phils this, however:

"We're willing to let you have Hodges even up for Robin Roberts."

The Phils were not anxious to part with their ace pitcher even for such a prize as Hodges.

Bvasi is searching frantically for a starting pitcher. He has had private meetings with four National League clubs and said he is hopeful of making a deal either here or in New York.

The Dodgers are anxiously awaiting word on the draft status on Don Newcombe, their right-handed pitching ace. The loss of big Newk, who took his medical examination two weeks ago, would force Brooklyn's board of strategy to make a drastic move.

Hodges, despite his 40 home runs and 103 runs batted in, is in disfavor because of his tendency to fall off in his hitting in the last month of the season.

Ennis, Waitkus, Sisler and Meyer all had disappointing seasons in 1951 after a hot 1950 campaign.

Cockell Favored To Beat Slade

London, Dec. 4 (AP) — Don Cockell, Britain's light-heavyweight champion who meets Joey Maxim for the world title next month, ruled a heavy choice to whip Jim Slade of New York tonight in a non-title 10-rounder at Harringay Arena.

Sport in Brief

(By The Canadian Press)

Carl Voss, National Hockey League referee-in-chief, said yesterday he could make no comment now on Saturday night's brawl in the Detroit-Toronto game.

Voss said he was trying to call referee George Gravel, and linesmen George Hayes and Doug Davies—officials for the game—by long-distance telephone for an oral report of the incident. He added that he could make no comment until after their written report was in his hands.

Detroit demanded an official investigation of the game, referring to it as the "Mortson incident" in a public statement. Jack Adams, Red Wing general manager, denounced the Toronto player and the officiating.

Gus Mortson, Leaf defenceman, was one of the seven men to be penalized in the affray, which the Maple Leafs won 2-1.

In Montreal, league president Clarence Campbell said he had received the protest but would take no action until he confers with Voss.

Wagering at Rhode Island's two tracks amounted to a record $76,713,196 in 1951, state officials said. This was nearly $15,000,000 more than was bet at Narragansett Park and Lincoln Downs last year.

The Quebec Senior Hockey League at a special meeting here last night, voted unanimously to give financial aid to Sherbrooke Saints to keep them in the loops. Sherbrooke, mired in last position in the seven-team circuit with only six victories in 22 games, suffered from dwindling attendance.

A charity fight between Sugar Ray Robinson and Carl (Bob) Olson, scheduled at San Francisco Dec. 20, has been postponed indefinitely after Robinson was reported to have injured his sacroiliac while training in New York.

J. F. Velleman, a young Johannesburg, South African amateur heavyweight boxer, died yesterday after bieng knocked unconscious in a boxing bout Saturday night.

Richard Williams of Baltimore, Md., one of three jockeys indicted with three race track figures in a race fixing investigation, pleaded innocent yesterday at Baltimore, Md., to three charges and was released in $6,000 bail in court. Williams is charged with attempting to corrupt Patrick Moore, another jockey, by offering him money to run a race improperly at Narragansett Park, with actually corrupting him and with conspiring to corrupt him.

New York Rangers of the National Hockey League recalled defenceman Jim Ross and forward Zellio Toppazzini from their Cincinnati American League farm club yesterday. "Topper" was called back to replace rookie right wing Wally Hergesheimer who wrenched his knee in Toronto Saturday.

Darnaway, owned by Mrs. Tilyou Christopher of Miami, dropped dead in the stable area, shortly after the six-year-old gelding finished eighth and last in the fifth race at Kiami's Tropical Park yesterday.

Newark may return to the International League as a farm of Philadelphia Athletics if league president Frank Shaughnessy can arrange "reasonable rental terms" with the New York Yankees, who own the ball club. Shaughnessy said yesterday that the A's are willing to meet the purchase price New York Giants placed on their Ottawa franchise and 12 players.

Contending that the betting tax imposed by the provincial government on Ontario race tracks still is excessive, Col. K. R. Marshall, president of the Ontario Jockey Club, said yesterday "this short sighted policy is affording encouragement to wagering with bookmakers." He was speaking to an O.J.C. annual general meeting.

Stoddard Leads American League Scoring Race

George Armstrong of Pittsburgh, Ray Powell of Providence and Cliff Simpson of St. Louis are tied for third place at 27 points each.

Stoddard also tops the league in playmaking with 21 assists and Armstrong is the league's leading goal-getter with 17.

Hershey's Gordon Henry has taken the lead in the race for goal-tending honors. Henry has allowed 54 goals in 22 games for a 2.45 average. Gil Mayer of Pittsburgh, last week's leader, is second with a 2.50 mark. Pete Durham of Indianapolis remains in the van for "bad man" honors with 83 minutes in the penalty box.

Remember When

(By The Canadian Press)

Ottawa Rough Riders defeated University of Toronto 10-7 to win the Canadian Football championship 25 years ago today. Ottawa's second consecutive title was won on a frozen field at Toronto where Joe Miller was the outstanding star with his kicking for the Ottawa squad who did not win another Canadian title until 1940. Ottawa's Grey Cup victory over Saskatchewan Roughriders last month was their first since then.

Dauthuille TKO's Roy Wouters In 5th Round

Montreal, Dec. 4 (CP)—Laurent Dauthuille of France last night scored a fifth-round technical knockout over Roy Wouters, Canadian middleweight boxing champion, in a 10-round, non-title bout here.

Dauthuille weighed 158 and Wouters 162.

The French battler, who fights out of Montreal, was awarded the verdict at the end of the fourth round after a Montreal boxing commission doctor advised referee Maurice O'Connell to stop the fight because Wouters' right eye was badly cut.

Brian Kelly, 18-year-old Niagara Falls, Ont., battler won a unanimous eight-round decision over Armand Savoie of Montreal, Canadian lightweight titlist, in a semi-final bout that followed the main event. This also was a non-title bout.

Kelly weighed 137¾ and Savoie 138½.

Kelly was unable to fight 10 rounds because of his junior rating.

Savoie showed best in the first two rounds when he concentrated on Kelly's midriff, pouring in a battering two-fisted attack.

Kelly shook him off in the third and moved ahead from then on. He had Savoie on the receiving end of jabs and crosses in the fourth and especially in the seventh.

Maritime Boxer Named Winner Dempsey's 'White Hope' Circus

By JACK SULLIVAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Dec. 4—(CP)—More than 1½ tons of beef in the form of large fellows and little guys, some spindly-legged and others barrel-chested, stepped into the ring at Maple Leaf Gardens last night and gave 7,000 fight fans one of the most entertaining nights in years.

They came from cities and towns from Newfoundland to Manitoba with the one thought of clobbering the bejabers out of opponents and become Canada's white hope in the heavyweight picture. And aged Jersey Joe Walcott needn't fret.

The hope is Al Hogan, a twinkle-eyed Irishman who came to Toronto four years ago from New Waterford, N. S., who is in the middleweight division. He took the championship, and the $300 first prize, after four fights and a couple of puffed eyes.

No Serious Injuries

The 18 bouts on the card produced an assortment of glassy-eyed gladiators among the 19 starters, a few stitching jobs over eyes and cheeks and no serious injuries as the inexperienced battlers tossed leather around in orthodox and unorthodox fashion. No one can accuse them of not trying.

For evidence, the score-card showed that only four bouts went the scheduled three rounds. Wild, roughhouse fights were the main weapons of the majority of fighters who sent their opponents kicking early.

It was a good night all-round. The receipts were close to $15,000. Former heavyweight champion Jack Dempsey, co-promoter of the tournament with promoter Frank Tunney of Toronto, was on hand to referee in the semi-finals and final fights and the big crowd saw nearly four hours of action.

The first 11 bouts ended early starting with Jim McGonigle of Toronto who scored a 40-second technical knockout over Johnny Pidhalchuk of St. Benedict, Sask., in the card opener. Then it was a succession of KO's and TKO's until near the end of the night when decisions were recorded as the gladiators were too tired after three and four appearances to put any zing into their haymaking pitches.

Weighs Only 177

Hogan, whose last amateur fight was three years ago weighed only 177. He started his string with a knockout over McGonigle (196½) at 2:59 of the second round, followed with a three-round decision over Lyle Staff, 188½ of St. Catharines, Ont., another decision over Hans Behrendt, 177½, Toronto in the semi-finals and clinched the title with a split decision over Joe Stack, 188¾ of Montreal in the final bout.

Staff is a former Canadian amateur heavy champ. He got into two bouts but Manitoba's champion, Doug Costello of Winnipeg, took an unmerciful beating from Stack and the bout was stopped at 40 seconds of the second round with Costello still on his feet but reeling helplessly against the ropes.

That was Stack's first fight. He followed with a technical knockout at two minutes of the first round over Johnny Rowe, 188, of St. John's, Nfld., and entered the final with another first-round TKO—over Tony Derosa, 183, of Montreal.

Derosa was the hard-luck batter of the card. A two-fisted puncher who showed lots of dynamite in both hands, he reached a semi-final bracket with knockouts over Frank Lucier, 177¼, of Windsor, Ont., and Kenneth Burgess, 190½, of Sarnia, Ont. Dempsey stopped his semi-final go when the Montrealer suffered a broken thumb early in the first round

Tennessee Vols Named Top Football Team

New York, Dec. 4 (AP)—The University of Tennessee, picked in a pre-season Associated Press poll as the most likely United States College football team to succeed, did just that and wound up today as the No. 1 club for 1951.

In the 10th and final AP poll of the year, coach Bob Neyland's Volunteers received 139 first-place votes out of 307 cast by sports writers and sportscasters.

Tennessee, which meets Maryland in the Sugar Bowl game Jan. 1 at New Orleans, racked up 2,796 points to beat out Michigan State ranked No. 2 with 1,048 first place votes and 2,609 points. Michigan State was tabbed No. 2 in the pre-season poll.

Unbeaten Maryland received only 18 first-place votes but picked up enough seconds and thirds to rank third with 2,299 points.

Tennessee, which rolled over 10 foes without a loss, never had been higher than No. 2 in the past.

Weston's Defeat Boyce's 6-4

Westons scored their third straight win without a loss in the Owl Hockey League on Monday night at the Memorial Arena by defeating Boyce Garage, 6-4.

Boyce took an early 2-0 lead in the first period but Westons came back fast to tie the count at 3-3 before the end of the first period.

The winners outscored Boyce by a 3-1 margin in the second frame to win handily.

Don Kennedy was top scorer for the night, putting the puck into the net for Westons on three occasions. Desjardins garnered a pair while W. Jackson picked up the other goal for the winners.

B. Lucas with two, B. Cannon and B. Cook were lamplighters for Boyce Garage. Jimmy Rapino handled the referee's chore.

Savitt, Seixas Reach Tennis Semi-Finals

By GAYLE TALBOT

Melbourne, Australia, Dec. 4—Dick Savitt of Orange, N.J., and Vic Seixas of Philadelphia smashed their way into the semi-finals of the Victorian tennis championships today.

Savitt fought from behind to defeat Australia's Mervyn Rose, 6-1, 2-6, 4-6, 7-5, 7-5.

Seixas moved up by whipping Ted Schroeder of La Crescenta, Calif., 6-4, 8-6, 6-1.

The sizzling match between Savitt and Rose took over two hours.

Rose had beaten Savitt four straight times before today and appeared ready to make it five when he led, two sets to one, at intermission.

Savitt came back after the rest and a lecture from Frank Shields, U.S. non-playing Davis Cup captain and coach Jack Kramer, to play great tennis and eventually won after a close shave in the final set.

He broke Rose's service at the outset of the fifth set and led, 5-2. But he lost his own delivery in the ninth game and let the Aussie square it. He finally broke Rose again in the 12th game with a series of brilliant passing shots to wrap it up.

Savitt will meet Australia's Ken McGregor in the semi-finals Thursday. McGregor gained the semi-final round with a 6-3, 9-7, 6-3 victory over his young countryman, Ken Rosewall.

Mixed Reactions Greet Return Thorpe Medals

New York, Dec. 4 (AP)—Proposals to restore to Jim Thorpe the medals won by the greatest all-around athlete at the 1912 Olympic Games in Stockholm have been received with mixed reactions in both the United States and Europe.

The medals, along with the trophies presented to the Sac and Fox Indian by the Czar of Russia and the king of Sweden, were taken from Thorpe when he was ruled a professional for having played minor league professional baseball prior to the Olympics. He was a student at Carlisle Indian Institute in Pennsylvania at the time.

The 63-year-old Indian, in need of financial aid, recently underwent an operation for the removal of a skin cancer on his lip. At present he is living in New York and hopes to organize an all-Indian song and dance troupe.

As a part of a campaign to put big Jim back on his feet, a group of prominent sportsmen and business men have organized a "fair play for Thorpe committee" with return of the Indian's medals its chief objective. The committee also plans a testimonial fund raising dinner.

The Decathlon Medal won by Thorpe at Stockholm was awarded to runner-up Hugo Wieslander of Sweden by the International Olympic Committee. The Penthalon Medal was given to Ferdinand Bie of Norway, second in the five event competition.

Leaf Machine is Cause of Big Iceslide in Campaign With Rangers

Most popular vote shooter in Saturday night's campaign with New York Rangers in Toronto was a wee wheat farmer from the west Max Bentley by name, who helped stuff goalie Chuck Raynor's ballot box with the 200th goal of his 12-year NHL reign. For this feat, Maxie was tendered a long-standing ovation from the 13,163 non-voters who came to see if the local boys could overthrow the only party from which they hadn't managed a win — having lost twice and tied once in Manhattan — and the fans weren't disappointed, for the Leafs overwhelmed opponents by an 8-2 margin in the balloting to chase the Rangers out of the constituency they have held all season.

High-Scoring Twins Parted, Lach Tops National Leaguers

Montreal, Dec. 4 — (CP) Montreal Canadiens' Elmer Lach finally has taken over sole possession of the National Hockey League's individual scoring race.

Lach, who, with teammate Maurice (Rocket) Richard, held first place for the last six weeks, now is one point ahead of the Rocket. Lach has 24 points, made up of 6 goals and a pace-setting 18 assists, while Richard has 15 goals — a current league record — and eight assists.

Richard, a standout sniper who led goalgetters for three seasons but never was top point collector, was awarded an assist on a Lach goal last Saturday night, but lost it when officials revised their ruling.

Leafs Move Up

With Toronto Maple Leafs threatening to unseat Detroit Red Wings from first place in the standings, Queen city players also are moving up the scoring ladder.

Ted Kennedy, a Toronto veteran, is crowding Richard with 21 points, two less than the Rocket, tied in fourth place with 19 points and Bill Mosienko, Chicago, Gordie Howe, Detroit, and Sid Smith, Toronto. Mosienko's 11 goals are closest to the Rocket's mark.

As yet undefeated on the road, Detroit continues to lead the six NHL clubs with 30 points, two more than the Leafs.

Toronto net-minder Al Rollins remains top goalie with 40 goals scored against him in 23 games, giving him a 1.74 average. Next is Detroit's Terry Sawchuk who let 40 pucks past in 22 games. Sawchuk has four shutouts, two more than Rollins and Boston's Jim Henry.

The two Canadian entries in the league are the most penalized clubs. Montreal players spent 241 minutes in the penalty box and Toronto had 10 minutes less called against them. Guy Kyle of New York spent more time off than any other player — 51 minutes.

REFUSES AWARD

Paris, Dec. 4 — (AP) — The top French literary prize was awarded Monday to a 41-year-old history professor, who promptly rejected it.

A jury of distinguished writers gave the "Prix Goncourt" — French equivalent of the Pulitzer Prize — to Louis Poirier for a novel of fantasy entitled "Rivage Des Syrtes" (Banks of Quicksand). He wrote it under the name of Julien Gracq.

Only worth 5,000 francs ($15) in cash, the prize is far more valuable than that in publicity and prestige. Poirier is against literary prizes, however, and said he wouldn't accept it.

Wallace Defeats Ken Lovegrove

Hamilton, Dec. 4 — (CP) Gord Wallace, a hard-hitting Brantford welterweight made quick work of Hamilton's Kenny Lovegrove in the main bout of last night's professional fight card at Barton St. Arena.

The Brantford slugger, at 165 pounds, laid a terrific left hook on Lovegrove's Mouth for the 4th punch of the fight and that was it. A following barrage of lefts and rights laid open a nine-stitch cut on the Hamilton boxer's lip and he went down. Lovegrove weighed 172.

Referee Tony Brandino called the bout after counting to six. Wallace won the T.K.O. at 1:32 of the initial round.

The semi-final went by a split decision to Jesse Bradshaw, 145, of Buffalo over Chick Hogan, 154, of Hamilton.

Preliminaries:

Ronnie McGillvery, 140, Niagara Falls, decisioned Godofedo Laboy, 139, Puerto Rico.

Don Oates, 152, Hamilton, and Jimmy Tokarz, 152, Brantford, fought six rounds to a draw.

Radio-Active Sal Used to Locate Crack in Machine

Kingston, Dec. 4 — (CP) — A few grams of radio-active salts hauled into position by a 15-ton overhead crane, were used during last weekend to survey damage to an aluminum press producing parts for Canadian war materials.

The press, some 60 feet long and 20 feet high, developed a crack two months ago and two scientists Drs. P. J. Stewart and R. F. Maskell of Oakville, Ont., were called in to find the fault.

The two are with Industrial Isotopes Limited. They have been working for the last year with radio - active materials from the Chalk River atomic project.

They packed a tiny container of radio-active sodium fluoride into a one-ton lead container and brought it by truck to Kingston.

The radio-active salt was slipped into the heart of the steel casting. Within 12 hours a detailed radio-active picture of the whole cast was completed, enabling repairmen to plot the damage to the press.

Officials said the sodium fluoride isotope, costing $100, did the job of about $10,000 worth of radium in use for a month.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

The evolution of a bridge signal is easy to trace. You can watch such a signal develop in the answers to takeout doubles. Start with two basic facts.

First, a takeout double shows a hand that contains the same values as an opening bid of one. Second, a takeout double orders partner to keep the bidding open for at least one round.

An opening bid of one does not order partner to keep the bidding open. Partner may pass if he has not more than two tricks. If partner bids, he admits having at least three tricks.

On the other hand, a takeout double orders partner to bid if no bid intervenes. Thus, if no bid intervenes, partner must bid. And he may not have a trick. So his normal response may show no tricks.

Compare these two responses. In answer to an opening bid of one, a normal response shows at least three tricks. In answer to a takeout double, if no bid intervenes, a normal response may show no tricks.

In either case, the responder may have enough tricks to help make a game. If so, he uses a signal. That signal is a jump bid. Which shows five or more tricks in the responding hand.

"In answer to a takeout double, suppose there is an intervening bid. In that case, partner of the doubler may pass, Because the bidding is thus kept open.

Therefore, partner of the doubler will not respond with a bid if he has nothing. He may respond if he has three tricks or more. That is, the same as he would in answer to an opening bid of one.

South starts with an opening bid of one spade and your partner in the west doubles for a takeout. If north intervenes with a bid of two clubs, bid two hearts with this east hand:

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Dec. 4—(AP)—Here is news destined to make the middle-aged feel older—Jackie Coogan is playing a character role in a western movie.

Yes, Jackie, the shaggy little gamin who cavorted with Charlie Chaplin in "The Kid," is playing the heavy in a horse opera. What's more, he looks the part, too. He's got a bald head, black moustache and grizzled face.

This is Jackie's first character part, and he explained how it all happened.

"Ron Ormond (the producer) showed me the script of 'Outlaw Women' and asked me if I could find a part in it that I like. I picked the heavy."

I suggested that the role might open up a whole new career.

"On no, not that!" he exclaimed. "Don't make it sound like a comeback Every time a guy has been out of work for three months, they say he's making a comeback. If that's true, I've had dozens."

Jackie is observing his 35th year in the movies; not bad for a boy who is 37 years old. He started in 1916. When he played in "The Kid" (1920) with the turned-around cap, he became the most famous child star of the silent era.

By the time he was 21, Jackie had earned $4,700,000, but he didn't have a penny of it left. Because of his experience, the state passed a law requiring court approval of child actor contracts, with provisions for saving funds.

Jackie's fame in adult years has never approached that of his childhood. He has continued his acting career with occasional ventures into other fields. His longest absence from the screen was during the Second World War.

Later he resumed acting and operated a war surplus business on the side. He retired from the movies last year with the intention of being an appliance salesman.

It's an Old British Custom

Following an old British custom, Mayor Eric G. Hoyer of Minneapolis was weighed in during a colorful ceremony. The scales used in the ceremony was brought to Minneapolis from High Wycombe, England, where the ceremony originated about 1066. Mayor Hoyer sits on the scales and is weighed in with the help of Police Chief Tim Jones (left); Sir Alexander Maxwell of London (pulling on rope); pretty Joyce Blewett, and Sheriff Ed Ryan (right). The idea is that a mayor is judged by the weight he loses in working during his term of office. — Central Press Canadian.

Three New Faces Will be Seen At Council Table

Bancroft. (Special.)— Wilfred Maxwell was the only member of last year's council to be elected yesterday in the municipal election held for councillors in Bancroft.

Elected were Gordon E. Broughton, 310; E. C. Ellerbeck, 219; Wilfred Maxwell, 208, and Don Easton, 196. Defeated candidates were Donald Russell, 187, and Fred Brethour, 120. Two of last year's council, C. O. Fuller and J. J. Bronson did not seek re-election.

Councillor-elect Broughton is a theatre owner and has served as a high school trustee but this is his first bid for a council seat.

Reeve T. W. Tryon received acclamation, while S. F. Walker and Ewart Wannamaker received acclamation for public school board.

It was the first election in Bancroft in four years.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is according to the stars.

For Wednesday, December 5

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—No unfavorable aspects and the ones that are stimulating—especially sponsor matters and activities of an unusual nature that require initiative and skill—also suggest wise caution.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—You'll need to prod spirit to handle day's problems, even regular duties. Stress practical procedure in special interests, also in domestic and business affairs generally.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—A balanced middle course and moderation are watchwords now. Better to check, think before doing, to avoid needless errors. Familiar routine and studied matters should run smoothly.

June 22 to July 23—(Cancer)—All practical, useful endeavor and seeking to advance through study, intelligent application are sponsored. Still it is not an easy period One must think, work hard.

July 24 to August 22—(Leo)—Your Sun and Uranus only planet in very favorable aspects now. Achievement largely up to you. How you handle yourself and your responsibilities most important. Have faith.

August 23 to September 23—(Virgo)—May not be all satisfactory for written matters or for creating bright ideas, but you should keep right on trying and adding your ingenuity where it is needed to pep things up.

September 24 to October 23 —(Libra)—Travel for business, for scientific research, air travel and matters of an unique nature prominently favored. A progressive, productive day if you are smart, foreward looking in action.

October 24 to November 22 —(Scorpio)—All activities and interests will move ahead faster, better if you are collected, calm in thought and treatment of all. You are most efficient, clever when cheerful, hopeful. Think!

November 23 to December 22—(Sagittarius)—Friendly period on whole, though may not be entirely satisfying in returns no matter how hard you strive. This is often well, easy success is not always appreciated. Enjoy your work.

December 23 to January 21—(Capricorn) — Sun sponsors all sound matters, useful activities, honorably advancing one's self. Same time, be mindful of others' rights. Industry, the military, hard work, religion out front.

January 22 to February 20—(Aquarius)— You, like Leo, are most fortunate with your Sun and Uranus in excellent positions. Influences point up industrial trades, handling machinery, tools, mining, and unique ideas.

February 21 to March 20—(Pisces)—Care stressed in very private matters where confidences should not be broken and sacrifices. Should be good period for achieving in useful interests concerning the public.

YOU BORN TODAY: Distinctive characteristics. Bright demeanor and abundant attributes. Generally active. Capable versatile, may sometimes tend to carry things to extreme. Usually cheerful, humorous; pleasant company. If true to your fine God-given traits and applying yourself rightly, you can succeed in any chosen field or work if you also seek training. Can be quick-tempered but this does not last long nor it is vindictive. Your efforts usually temper desire for change and end in achievement.

Birthdate: Martin Van Buren, 8th U.S. pres.; Geo. A. Custer, American cavalry leader; Walt Disney, famed cartoonist.

FOXBORO

Foxboro—The ladies of the Anglican Woman's Auxiliary of Foxboro met recently at the home of Mrs. Harry Wickett to honor one of the auxiliary's members, Mrs. Harold Hall, who was leaving the community to reside in the city.

The social time was spent in games and contests, after which Mrs. Hall was presented with a bone china cup and saucer as a token of happy memories together.

Non-Confidence Motion Put By C.C.F. Member

Ottawa, Dec. 4 — (CP) — A surprise non-confidence motion calling for financial assistance to distressed prairie farmers was introduced last night in the flagging Commons Throne-Speech debate by Hazen Argue (CCF — Assiniboia).

It asked the Chamber to express regret that the government had "failed" to provide for an immediate payment to wheat producers of 75 per cent of the initial price on farm-stored grain.

As a result of shortages of boxcars and congested grain elevators, many prairie farmers have been forced to store heavy stocks from this year's harvest on their farms.

Mr. Argue said he introduced his motion because the government has not made such provision despite many requests directed to Prime Minister St. Laurent.

Percy Wright (CCF — Melfort) said the United States for some years has successfully advanced farmers up to 90 per cent of its wheat floor price for grain stored on farms. Some farmers faced a complete crop failure and should get some help.

John Sinnott (L — Springfield) suggested the time to seek government aid was when individual efforts had been exhausted. All of the grain could not be harvested, delivered and stored at the one time.

He described Mr. Argue's motion as "just a political dodge to make his position secure in his own constituency."

Victor Quelch (SC — Acadia) said the government should advance payment and pay storage charges on farm-stored grain.

He also said there should be an "escalator clause" in domestic wheat prices so that they would go up with general wheat prices.

He said Prime Minister St. Laurent and Trade Minister Howe, who has charge of the wheat board, were in disagreement over recent statements concerning help for the west's distressed farmers.

This afternoon, the prime minister told Mr. Argue he is not in a position to indicate whether legislation to give them financial aid will be introduced at this session.

Mr. Diefenbaker read a dispatch from Winnipeg quoting Mr. Howe as saying legislation will be introduced at this session and that financial aid is in prospect for early in the new year.

"This is another example of why the cabinet of this country has been described as 'C. D. Howe and company,'" Mr. Diefenbaker said. "He makes the decision and the announcement, and the prime minister is not advised of that fact."

MARMORA

Professor N. R. Richards Gives Address on 'Soil Conservation'

Marmora—"Agriculture night" was observed by Marmora District Chamber of Commerce at their monthly dinner meeting at the Royal Hotel, on Thursday evening.

At the beginning new members were cordially welcomed by the president, Alex Fraser; secretary, Ralph Neal, reported the financial success of the Hallowe'en shell-out, the receipts being $158.04 and expenditures $119.15. The committee, which organized the affair recommended that the matter receive further consideration before it be carried out next year. It had been felt that it could be better handled under a group system.

Santa Claus Committee

C. T. Nicholson reported for the committee that is responsible for the Santa Claus parade on December 15. Two representatives of the Chamber with two from the Canadian Legion and two from the local branch of the International Smelter's Union, constituted the full committee making arrangements.

Instead of the parade to a platform on Forsythe Street, as in past years, a party would be given in the Plaza theatre, and a movie shown through the kindness of the proprietor A. J. Maynes. Santa Claus would appear there as at the town hall where parents with children in arms would assemble.

The meeting was then turned over to the vice-president, Reeve Irwin McCoy of Marmora, and Lake township. He introduced A. O. Dalrymple, agricultural representative for Hastings County who in turn introduced two guests of the evening. the Hastings County grain team which has won such signal honors this year. They were John McComb of Belleville, formerly of Bonarlaw, champion Dominion grain judge, and Merle Moore, of Springbrook, champion Provincial grain judge, as representing Hastings grain judging team. Thirty-five teams were entered in the Provincial grain judging contest and the Dominion contest, the pick of the provinces competed.

Mr. Dalrymple complimented the Chamber of Commerce on its attainments prior to the introductions.

Guest Speaker

Frank Stone, assistant agricultural representative, for Hastings county, was called upon to introduce the guest speaker of the evening, Professor N. R. Richards, of the Department of Soils, at the O.A.C., Guelph.

His subject was "Conservation of Todry's Soils for Tomorrow." The speaker remarked that "a nation's natural resources exist for the benefit of all its people. Not the least of these is our soil. The basis of sound and staple agriculture is our soil. It has been wrongly thought that it was the responsibility of farmers and theirs only to conserve the soil. It should be the concern of every one no matter what their walk in life.

"We should try to find a more common ground than there is at present to do our thinking on conservation problems. Food signifies soil fertility.

Essential Elements

Eleven of the fourteen essential elements in the growing of plants come from the soil. The soil contributes to five per cent of man's construction.

Deficiency of essential elements in soil brings about malformation of the human body and diseases. Deficiency in iodine for example creates goitre. It is ever important to consider the quality of the products that come from the land and how much of plant nutrients are removed from the soil in the growing of crops.

In milk production there is the removal of super phosphate. Another problem of the soil to be faced is erosion and there is a need of its control. For the assistance of farmers, the department maintains a good soil testing service. Then there are soil surveys carried out by the Dominion Government in conjunction with the O.A.C.

Two Acres Needed

The speaker declared that "we require two acres of fertile land per person to maintain an adequate diet. That was not possible in the Far East where pressure of population was so great, and land use could not be improved. A large acreage provides problems in use and management.

"The soil is our heritage from the past and our dowery for the future.

"I like to look on the soil," said the speaker in conclusion, "not as something upon which buildings are built but the material on which empires are built."

Charles Lajoie, noted local agriculturist thanked the speaker in a neat speech.

The two grain judging champions were then asked to say a few words. Said John McComb, "our success has been dependent upon the elders who have guided us." while Merle Moore paid a tribute to National Club week and its fine program and remarked, "our success was due to coaching to a great extent." Both youths received an ovation from the fine gathering present.

Local Hockey

The meeting ended with a discussion on local hockey prospects. It was felt however that it was up to the rink commission to handle what is recognized as a problem. It was gleaned from the remarks of Principal L. Begley of Marmora High School in contribution to the discussion that a high school hockey league for the area was receiving much consideration and would in all probability materialize. Thus ended the last meeting of the Chamber for 1951.

FORMER HENCHMAN SLAIN

Chicago, Dec. 4 — (AP) — A former Al Capone henchman was shot to death Saturday night, 11 days after he touched off a scandal involving a retired police captain and a $100,000 night club deal. Samuel J. Rinella, 49, an ex-convict who was under indictment for income tax evasion, was slain by two gunmen as he emerged from his expensive home on the south side.

FATE OF MAN UNKNOWN

St. Thomas, Ont., Dec. 4 — (CP)—What may be a clue to the fate of Fergus J. Ferguson, 73, who disappeared during the $300,000 Hotel Talbot fire a week ago, was found today in the ruins. It was a shoe, thought to belong to the missing man. However, no trace of the body was discovered.

EXPELS AP CHIEF

Cairo, Dec. 4 — (AP) — The Egyptian government has decided to expel Fred Zusy, Associated Press chief of bureau in Cairo, for "bad faith." The press director said Zusy had been warned "several times" that his work was "aimed at harming the interests of Egypt." Zusy denied that he had received any warnings from Egyptian authorities.

The Outsiders

By Jane Abbott

"I'd like to see you this morning." George Culbert said it to Eliza over the telephone and not pleasantly.

But Eliza's voice was almost gay. "I'll be down at the mill in half an hour."

He cursed as he hung up the receiver. She'd made him appear a fool before Bendley yesterday, which hurt almost as much as the upsetting of his carefully arranged schemes. Bendley had said to him after Eliza walked out of the room "seems you've misrepresented some things, Culbert, and we've been wasting our time." Which he could well take as meaning they were through.

Eliza came. "Good morning!" It was she who offered the cheery greeting.

He gave her a long look. "Just where do you think we're going on from here?" He let all his frustration into his voice.

Eliza sat down. "I haven't thought it quite through yet, but I'm thinking!"

Her composure was something new; he put his elbows on the desk, scowled darkly at her. "Do you know what you did yesterday? I had the money as good as in your pocket and then you get up and babble about you're not being certain you'll sell. They'll not come to us again!"

Eliza met his look steadily, some coldness coming into her own. "If you assured those men beforehand that I would sell—when did I give you that authority?"

"We'd talked about it, hadn't we? I thought I'd made it plain to you that it was the only way to save your neck. . ."

"My purse you mean." She added, "and perhaps your own. I'm going to call a meeting of the men. In the meeting house I'm going to suggest that they choose a committee, a sort of working committee to advise me . . ."

"Who've you been talking to?"

Eliza smiled. "Hespeth, my hellion. And Annie Aldrich."

The man sprang up from his chair with a violence that tipped it over. "Have you gone completely crazy? An old bag and one of the mill men's women! I'm surprised you didn't take Cameron in on it—he'd finish it off!"

Eliza smiled again. "In a way he is in on it. I think I am influenced by things he has said to me."

The manager strode to the window, wheeled, came back to her. "A committee —you'll have it running your mill for you!"

"Their mill," corrected Eliza.

He stood over her, his face distorted. "In my opinion you have gone completely off your head!"

"On the contrary, I think I'm finding it."

The quiet of her answer broke his control. He picked up a paper knife, banged it down again on his desk. "If you go ahead with such silly ideas, I quit. I'll leave you to let your charwoman run your two-penny mill for you. As of the moment you call your meeting. . ."

Eliza said quietly, "perhaps it would be best—if you quit."

He had not expected that. The muscles of his face went a little slack. "Sorry I lost my temper—I'm edgy this morning, I'll take back what I said. Don't think I'm a man to quit a sinking ship—not with you on it!"

But Eliza went on as if he had not spoken. "I told you once that I trusted you. It was because I had to. I don't now. I can't say why, but I don't. I've telephoned to Mr. Wilbur and asked him to come up here and go over everything with me. He's coming tomorrow. If you'll write your resignation—it can take effect at once."

Eliza drove away with no regrets for having asked Culbert to resign. She drove past her own turn and on up the valley. Slowly, for the impulse to which she was yielding was a little frightening. She was going to the Notch and to Chris Cameron. If he would not come to her, she would go to him. She would tell him about last night.

"You get the men together like they got their own selves and talk to them." Hespeth had said.

"You forget—they made an ultimatum."

"It wouldn't be no loss to my thinking to let that man of yours go. Old Elisha was going to—he was soon sorry he brought him here in the first place. 'Twas the only mistake I ever knew of the old man making. Maybe he was getting old!"

A long speech for Hespeth.

"I'm an outsider to them. . ."

Hespeth had caught her breath again. "That's all nonsense! Tell 'em how you could've sold the mill and your land hereabouts but that you've no notion to. You belong."

Eliza wanted Chris to know that!

She parked the car in the road and walked up the lane that she thought must lead to Chris' camp. A pounding at her heart made the climb breathtaking but she went ahead. She did not think what she would say first—but he'd see that she had come to him and that would be enough.

Reaching the level of the clearing she looked over it eagerly but he was nowhere in sight. The door of the house was half open and she went to it, knocked, smiling as she remembered her demand of him. When no one answered the knock she pushed the door further open and stepped inside.

"Oh, it's you!" Her words were barely a sound.

"Did I startle you? I came to see Chris Cameron."

"He isn't here. He's gone away. Mr. Smead told Mrs. Abel he'd gone."

He had gone without trying to see her again, or sending her any word. Desolation closed around Eliza's heart.

"There was something I wanted to tell him—but if he isn't here." She stumbled over it and broke off.

Jeremy looked down at the letter in her hands. "I had something to tell him." She put the letter down on the table. "He'll find it, when he comes back. If he doesn't come—it won't matter."

"My car's down the road. May I drive you back?"

"Yes, I'll ride back with you. Thanks."

They went down to the car. Eliza asked, "isn't there school today?"

"School?" repeated Jeremy, dully. "Oh, no, I dismissed it yesterday."

"I suppose you'll be going away."

"Yes, I'm going away."

They came to the Abel house and Eliza stopped the car. She said, "I hope you have a very pleasant vacation," and Jeremy said, "thanks," and got out of the car and went almost at a run up the path to the house.

Two hours later Tommie Abel pounded on the Streeter door. "Doc!" he called loudly.

John opened the door.

"May says for you to come quick!" The teacher's dyin'!"

Marilyn was behind John. She caught his arm. "Want me to go with you?"

John shook off her hand. "Mrs. Abel's there. If I need anything I'll send the kid back. . ."

He was sick with shock; he had no doubt as to what had happened. The possibility of it had hung at the edge of his mind ever since Jeremy had called at his office. And he had done nothing about it.

Two women met him in the Abel kitchen. "She's upstairs doctor. Mrs. Abel's with her."

"She screamed out awful and Mrs. Abel went up and found her. It's my opinion the girl's been sick for a long time. . ."

They were following John up the narrow steep stairs, offering their information in a duet, their voices low and shocked.

Jeremy lay on the narrow bed, her eyes closed. To all appearances she was barely conscious. A low moan came weekly with each breath. One hand hung over the edge of the bed and a trickle of blood dripped from her wrist to the rag carpeting on the floor.

Her other hand lay limp on the bedcover. John lifted it a very little and took the razor blade from under it and slipped it into his pocket.

"Is she going to die, Doctor?" asked one of the women behind him.

A quick examination of her wrist had shown him that the wound was little more than skin deep. He had his finger on her pulse. "No, she isn't going to die." There was a great relief in his voice. "A nervous collapse—she must have cut herself on something and she may be one of the ones who go to pieces at the sight of blood."

"She's acted nervous, lately," said Mrs. Abel."

"If one of you will open that window, please. And another get some hot tea ready."

He looked at Jeremy. Even though she was not going to die it was no less shocking that she had tried to take her life. Frowning, he wondered what had driven her to it—and what could patch together the broken pieces of her spirit. It would take more than any medicine he could give her.

He called to her, a little loudly, "Jeremy."

Her eyelids quivered and slowly lifted; then flew wide open as she recognized him. She stared at him. "Then—I'm not dead?" She whispered it weakly.

"Did you want to die?" John spoke very gently.

"I—I thought I did and then when it was too late—I didn't. Oh, I didn't!" A shudder shook her.

He took her hand in his. "A band-aid'll fix that, Jeremy. You won't even have a scar from it."

"I—I sent the children home."

"I don't think they objected to a holiday. And you'll be back at your desk in a few days."

Then she cried, the color rushing hotly for a moment into her face "that letter! I left it for Mr. Cameron up at his house!"

RHEUMATIC PAIN

"This winter I had to quit work because of rheumatic pain," writes Mr. T. Glofcheskie, Wilno, Ont. "I became fearful of being laid up as on a previous occasion with rheumatic pain. My pain became increasingly severe and spread from hip to ankle. Out of bed, the leg felt cold as though in cold water, so I stayed in bed. A friend persuaded me to take T-R-C's and I'm glad I did. Prosperous Year Predicted For Canadian Farmers

Firm Prices, Heavy Demand Seen for Farm Products

Ottawa, Dec. 5. (CP)—Canada's farmers won't have too many marketing worries next year if predictions made at the first day of the 10th annual Federal-Provincial Agricultural conference hold true.

J. F. Booth, the federal agriculture department's chief economist, yesterday told the conference he assumes Canada and the United States will boost rearmament production next year. World economic activity will remain "at very high levels", he said.

Other agricultural experts predicted a resulting heavy demand for Canadian farm products—with only a few exceptions—and "firm" prices for such foods as wheat, beef, eggs, milk and other dairy products.

Need More Milk

The 100-odd delegates were told milk production in 1952 is not expected to be sufficient to meet demand. Beef prices likely will be about the same as in the United States but hog prices may come down as a result of increased production.

Egg production is expected to increase but demand also will be strong. Butter production may be down and "it would seem therefore that prices should remain firm." World demand for wheat is expected to remain strong.

C. V. Parker, director of agriculture division of bureau of statistics, predicted an increase in farmers' cash income for 1952 but anticipated farm operating costs also will rise.

Other officials reported on the problems of supplies and farm labor. The conference was told Canada will need between 15,000 and 20,000 new immigrants next year to fill farm labor shortages. Canada will try to get these immigrants from European countries.

Farm Supplies Good

No great shortages of farm supplies are expected in 1952 though certain types of fertilizers and pesticides may be limited by increased defence production. Prices may be slightly higher than in 1951.

The agriculture department presented an official report saying that with world demand high, Canada is not expected to experience much trouble in having her entire 23,000,000-bushel quota under the international wheat agreement taken up. She may sell "significant quantities" of wheat outside the agreement's terms.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner opened the conference and warned that there can be no peace until food problems in the far east are overcome.

Ernie Burritt, General News Editor of CP, Dies

Toronto, Dec. 5. (CP)—D. E. (Ernie) Burritt, 44, one of Canada's best-known and best-loved working newspaper men, died today. He was general news editor of The Canadian Press, National News Agency.

The jovial, curly-haired editor who joined CP as a Toronto office boy in 1923 underwent a serious operation Nov. 16. His unsuccessful three-week fight to recover was followed by friends across Canada, in New York and London where he had worked in CP Bureaux.

As fast with a good-natured quip as he was developing a news-angle, he joked and joshed as he supervised day-to-day operations of the National News Association from coast to coast. His carefree attitude belied the thorough planning of big-news coverage which made his reputation as a top-flight news executive.

Murder Charge Against Husband Laid by Police

Toronto, Dec. 5 (CP) —Joseph Nicinski, 52, was charged with murder yesterday shortly after the battered body of his wife, Loaja (Lottie) 47, was found under a sink in the couple's northwest Toronto home.

Joey, a 10-year-old son, found his mother when he returned from school at noon. His screams attracted a 15-year-old friend who phoned police.

Nicinski was picked up an hour later in a mid-town restaurant.

Mrs. Nicinski's body, the head crushed by blows believed to have been inflicted with a length of pipe wrapped in paper, was found in the kitchen. Her left arm was hooked over the sink trap. Police said she apparently crawled there trying to escape a rain of blows.

Neighbors said they had heard Mrs. Nicinski and a man arguing loudly during the morning.

They said that three nights ago Mrs. Nicinski ran next door crying for protection. She said an attempt would be made to murder her.

Neighbors calmed her and a few minutes later she went home.

Mrs. Josephine Kaczmarek, sister of the dead woman, said Mrs. Nicinski came to Canada from Poland in 1921. The couple had been married 26 years and had moved into their $12,500 home four months ago.

Stepinac Given Freedom By Yugoslavia

Belgrade, Dec. 5 — (Reuters)—Archbishop Alojzia Stepinac was released here today conditionally, it was officially announced.

Stepinac, 53, head of the Roman Catholic Church in Yugoslavia, was sentenced to 16 years in jail in October, 1946, for "offences against the people and the state."

Stepinac had been held in Lepoglava prison near Zagreb for five years on charges of collaboration with the Axis powers.

The 53-year-old primate will go to his native village of Krasic near Zagreb to live, the official government news agency Tanjug said.

HOUSE APPROVES DECISION TO BACK PROJECT ALONE

First Legislative Step Advanced in Commons

Ottawa, Dec. 5 (CP) — Canada's decision to launch the St. Lawrence seaway project alone has the backing of all parties in the Commons.

But opposition support for the huge undertaking was qualified generally by demands that the expanded navigation-power facilities be used in the development of Canadian natural resources.

This view was emphasized by the main spokesmen for all three of the opposition parties after Transport Minister Chevrier had touched off a major seaway debate yesterday by moving a resolution for setting up a "seaway authority" that would build and operate the $300,000,000 navigation phase of the project.

The minister's move, still under debate when the Commons adjourned last night, was the first legislative step towards implementing the government's decision to go ahead with the seaway without Washington's financial help.

The new "authority" would have power to build and operate a deep-draft navigation channel between Montreal and Lake Erie on its own, or to work with a United States agency if the U.S. Congress decided to get in on a joint scheme before Canada has launched it.

Concurrently the Commons also has before it for ratification an agreement between the federal government and the Ontario government to enable the province to undertake the $200,000,000 Canadian end of a hydro-power development in the international section of the river.

Able to do Job Alone

The transport minister told the House that, while Canada would prefer a joint development, she is ready and able to do the job alone. He called the project important for Canada's economy and urgent for North American defence.

Mr. Chevrier said the all-Canadian project will be launched unless Congress acts "at an early date" to implement a 1941 Canada-U.S. treaty for a joint project. He did not name a specific deadline, but government informants say early 1952 is regarded as the target time.

After that, it would be a matter of months—perhaps more than a year—before the necessary legal preliminaries could be cleared out of the way to permit construction. From the start of the work, construction time is estimated at four years for the 2,200,000-horsepower hydro job and six years for the shipping facilities.

Allied Soldiers Eager to Try New Lightweight Armor Now Available

On the Western Front, Korea, Dec. 5 — (AP) — Soldiers on this front are eager to try the new lightweight body armor becoming available because the armored vests some wear now are too heavy.

The armored vests the soldiers in this battalion wear weigh about 14 pounds and look something like a baseball catcher's chest protector.

The new model, which weighs only eight pounds, is on order, but it has not reached the Korean front in any quantity.

Maj. Walter Turner is a strong believer in armored vests, but he concedes the present Second World war model is too cumbersome.

"Last week," he said, "they saved 15 to 20 casualties in my battalion."

Turner said the vests were impractical for infantrymen charging up a hill or on the move, but were good for reconnaissance patrols and for stationary, defensive fighting.

Turner makes his men wear the vests in certain situations. But he said several other infantry commanders object to them as impractical.

The vest is shaped like a short undershirt and protects the chest and back. It is made of nylon and overlapping aluminum plates.

The new body armor is made of layers of nylon cemented by plastics. Both are capable of stopping mortar fragments and ordinary rifle or machine-gun bullets but not bullets fired at close enough range that they still are travelling at a high velocity.

(While the American Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association received a report from the Army Surgeon-General's Office last month that 50 of the new vests had passed tests in Korea, this dispatch made no mention of them yet being used.)

Lt.-Col. Edward Cleveland, 3rd Division supply officer, said as far as he knew the 3rd Division is the only one using the Second World War type vests.

"They're great to have if you can carry them," said one soldier.

Cost-of-Living Index up Again In October by Four-Fifths Of Point for All-Time High

Ottawa, Dec. 5—(CP)—Chapter 10 of the story of living costs in 1951 reads pretty much the same as the preceding chapters. It's still another report on rising prices.

The Bureau of Statistics said yesterday that in October the cost-of-living index increased by four-fifths of a point to an all-time high of 191.2 from 190.4. The index is based on 1935-39 prices equalling 100.

So far this year, the index has made one jump after another, climbing 16 points from 175.2 in January. The biggest increase was 4.5 points last February.

In October prices went up for potatoes, milk, men's overcoats, cigarets and rents. It cost more for canned vegetables, corn flakes, cocoa, jam, corn syrup, men's sweaters, women's woollen hosiery, lingerie, rubbers, fuel gas and even health.

Things would have been worse except some prices did go down—on pork, eggs, sugar, oranges, cabbage and soap.

Despite these declines the food sub-index, after two months of knocking off points suddenly reversed the trend, climbed one-half point to a near-record 250.2. The peak for food was 251.4 in July.

Jump in Rents

One of the main reasons for the higher index was the jump in rents. Only tabulated quarterly, the quarter recorded a sub-index jump of 2.1 points to a record 144.8.

Peaks also were reached in the fuel and light group, clothing sub-index and the miscellaneous column which reflects such costs as transportation, sundries and health care.

Lower soap prices worked to pull the home furnishings and services sub-index down one-fifth of a point from its peak of 200.1—the only sub-index to show a drop.

On the wholesale side, prices reversed the downward trend of the four previous months and moved up during October.

The index for 30 industrial material prices climbed 5.9 points to 291.2 for the week ended Oct. 26 from 285.3 for the week of Sept. 28.

Farm prices also showed new strength with the Canadian farm products index jumping 6.1 points to 255.4 on Oct. 26 from 249.3 on Sept. 28.

500 Bodies of 2,000 Presumed Dead Have Been Recovered From Ashy Slopes of Volcano

Manila, Dec. 5. (AP)— The Philippine News Service said tonight more than 500 bodies have been recovered from the ash-strewn slopes of Hibok Hibok volcano on Camiguin Island in the Southern Philippines.

The volcano erupted twice yesterday. It still spouted smoke and flames today.

Governor Pacieno Ysalina of Eastern Misamis province estimated that 2,000 may have died in yesterday's first eruption.

Neither the governor's estimate nor the news service's figure had confirmation. Red Cross headquarters in Manila said the Philippines army had recovered 169 bodies.

Volcanic heat began subsiding and rescue workers were able to penetrate deeper into the ash and lava area.

The news service said 10,000 of Camiguin's 45,000 residents had been evacuated to safer areas.

Police and volunteers stood guard in the hard-hit area to maintain order and prevent looting.

Manila Times correspondent Benigno Aquino quoted Philippines air force Capt. Pedro Los Banos that smoke was still rising from fissures and gray soil in a nine square mile area on the volcano slopes.

"Coconut trees still are neatly spaced in the area," the officer was quoted, "but denuded of fruit and leaves."

"The soil has turned from a rich brown to ghastly, smouldering gray. There is no sign of life in the devastated area and what looked like former villages and hamlets now are devoid of any form of existence."

Hibok Hibok's crater was still invisible later Wednesday, shrouded by low, dense clouds of smoke.

Second Mighty Blast

The volcano issued a second mighty blast last night, about ten hours after the first blow-off.

Flames and dense smoke still are pouring from the crater, the Philippines army commander in the Mindanao area reported after a flight over the island.

Lt.-Col. Patricio Monzon said: "It was so warm I couldn't get my plane close enough for a good look.

"Camiguin looked like a burning, smoking flat-top (aircraft carrier) as we hovered above it. Smoke billowed up to 7,000 feet and enveloped the whole island.

Heat and fumes hampered searchers, digging for victims in the hot lava rocks and ash.

A steady stream of evacuees fled in all types of watercraft to Mindanao and other nearby islands.

Ten villages on the island were believed destroyed. Philippines News Service correspondents who reached the island last night said they believed about 80 per cent of the village's inhabitants had perished.

Camiguin is 13 miles long and nine miles wide. Hibok Hibok, 5,620 feet high, is virtually in its centre.

The island, 40 miles north of Mindanao, has a population of 45,000.

Five MIG Jets Downed, Five Others Damaged

U.S. Fifth Air Force, Korea, Dec. 5. (AP)—American jet pilots today blasted five communist MIG jets out of the skies and damaged five more, the Fifth Air Force announced.

The air force said no U.S. jets were damaged.

This was the 10th consecutive day of jet warfare over northwest Korea.

In the 10 days allied jet pilots have shot down a reported total of 32 red planes, probably shot down another and damaged 31. Announced allied losses are six jets.

The communists put about 230 MIG-15 jets into the air today, again far outnumbering American planes sweeping northwestern Korea.

The big bag of red jets was scored in a fight between 29 F-86 Sabre jets and 80 MIGs. They battled 35 minutes, equalling the longest jet battle in history.

The Sabre pilots sent five red airmen spiralling to earth.

F-84 Thunderjet pilots damaged three other MIGs in an afternoon fight. An F-80 Shooting Star, America's slowest jet in Korea, accounted for the fifth MIG damaged.

VOTE AGAINST UNION

Toronto, Dec. 5. (CP)—Employees of the T. Eaton Co. Ltd., here have voted against having a union, it was announced Tuesday night.

Ballotting was conducted yesterday and today by the Ontario Labor Department. The 9,800 eligible employees among the 16,000 on the department store's Toronto staff were asked if they desired to be represented by Local 1000 of the Department Store Employees Union (C.I.O.-C.C.L.).

The vote was 3,967 for the union 4,769 against.

The vote climaxed a three-year campaign by the union to win bargaining rights for the workers.

BANDIT KILLED WITH OWN GUN, OFFICER WOUNDED

Accomplice of Gunman Makes His Escape

Toronto, Dec. 5 — (CP) — A bandit who had stolen $210 was shot and killed last night with his own gun after it was wrested from him by a steel-nerved police officer.

The slain man had not been identified by early today, despite efforts of fingerprint experts. An accomplice who acted as lookout for the robbery of a drugstore in central Toronto escaped.

Because of a recent wave of drugstore holdups, Constable Dick Deadman, veteran of 25 years' service on the police force, had been assigned to guard the Fox-Taylor Drug Store at Dundas and McCaul Streets. Other plainclothesmen were stationed in other drugstores in the area.

The two holdup men entered the store just before the 9 p.m. closing time, forced proprietor Joseph Fox to open the cash register, then motioned him to go to the back of the store. Fox walked back and signalled to Constable Deadman, who stepped out with drawn gun.

The startled gunman wheeled and fired twice point-blank. One slug from his German automatic ripped into the officer's shoulder and the other struck his leg. The policeman returned the fire.

Constable Deadman then put his own gun back in his pocket and moved in on the bandit who fired again, hitting him in the other leg. Still on his feet, the officer grasped the bandit's right arm, twisted the automatic away from him and fired. The holdup man fell, mortally wounded.

Attracted by the shots, another officer, Constable Ernest Cousins, came running. Constable Deadman, before he lost consciousness, was able to give Constable Cousins a description of the other bandit. Doctors said later that the wounded officer will probably recover.

June Mercer, 19, who came here six months ago from Newfoundland, entered the drugstore to buy stamps while the second bandit was holding the door open. She saw the shooting. Later, talking to reporters, she said:

"We don't have things like this in Newfoundland."

No Licence Fee and Fields Heavy With Dog Deer and Fine Pheasant

With the Canadians in Korea, Dec. 5 (CP) —Stories about "the one that got away" have nothing to do here with fish.

They relate exclusively to three types of prey: Chinese communists, dog deer and pheasant.

The abundance in Korea of deer and strikingly-plumed pheasant once realized, it may be accepted back home that it would represent a sheer waste of talent and skill to lavish Canadian fieldcraft and marksmanship exclusively on the enemy.

Here there are no civilians to interfere with the stalking of any kind of prey. There are no licence fees. The fields are heavy with unharvested crops — rich feeding ground for wildlife and excellent cover for the hunter. And not very much game gets away—the deer freeze obligingly and the pheasant are either too busy eating to be bothered, or too heavy to fly away.

It's simply irresistible, and so while the Chinese get their full share of attention it nonetheless is far from exclusive.

Leader in this—as in any other kind of hunting his troops do in Korea— is Brig. John M. Rockingham, whose weapons provide the occasional deer for his headquarters' men's mess and pheasant for his own.

One of the brigadier's most satisfactory moments in Korea occurred when a magnificent golden-ringed cock pheasant he had just shot was brought to his table to excite the admiration of three military visitors from Canada.

Lt.-Cols. Peter Bingham of the Royal Canadian Regiment, Edward McNaughton of the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery and Louis-Fremont Trudeau of the Royal 22nd Regiment were speechless with envy.

Bagging such birds is daily routine, however, to the 2nd RCR's Maj. Kitch Wildfang of Orangeville and Brockville. With a shotgun borrowed from Maj. Colin McDougall of Ottawa,

Worst Accident In Great Britain's Motoring History

Driver Had Quarter-Century Safe Driving Behind Him

Chatham, Kent, England, Dec. 5. (AP)—An eight-ton double-decker bus—operated by a driver cited for a quarter-century of safe driving —last night rumbled into the singing ranks of marching boy cadets and killed 23 of them.

Nineteen more boys, some near death, lay in hospitals. Ten others were treated for shock.

It was the worst road accident in British motoring history.

The driver, John George Samson, 57, was put under a doctor's care. Shocked and sick, he was unable to explain immediately how the big bus happened to hit the formation of more than 50 marching boys. It smashed into them from behind in the darkness.

The children, all between 10 and 13 years old, were cadets in the Royal Marine Corps. They sang in step as they marched—their twin files just the width of the bus—to see an amateur boxing match at Chatham's naval barracks.

Passengers on the bus didn't know what was happening until it was all over.

Mangled bodies were strewn for 50 yards along the cobblestone road. The huge vehicle lurched through almost the whole formation and careened into a lamp post, its fenders bent and bloody.

A passenger on the upper deck said he felt only "a series of light bumps" as the heavy wheels crunched through.

The bus was operated by the Chatham and District Traction Company. Samson had worked for the firm for 40 years and today was to have received a medal for 25 years of safe driving.

Decline to Tell Speed

Police declined to say how fast the bus was going. Neither would they speculate on why it did not swing around the marching column.

First-aid workers, shocked at the sight, used battle terms to describe the scene.

"It was like the effects of a shell burst on a mess deck," said one sailor. Another described it as like a bomb burst amid marching soldiers.

The boys, marching to the navy barracks a quarter-mile away, had gone only about 200 yards along dimly-lit Pembroke Road when the bus plunged into the rear of the formation.

Sailors poured out of a barracks. Police, doctors and ambulances came from several towns.

Priests and ministers gathered to comfort dying children, and to go with police breaking the bitter news to parents.

War-toughened tars, hardened to the sight of violent death, wept as they helped gather up the little bodies.

"I saw some pretty grim things during the war, but this was too much for me," said a veteran navy petty officer. "I had to come away."

Many of the bodies were difficult to identify.

Benefit Payments To Unemployed Are Increased

Ottawa, Dec. 5. (CP)—Unemployment insurance benefit payments and the number of unemployed days for which compensatory payments were made both increased during October.

The Bureau of Statistics reported yesterday that payments rose during the month to $3,901,854 from $3,570,904 in the corresponding month last year. The unemployed days for which compensatory payments were made increased to 1,567,172 from 1,540,670.

Initial and renewal claims for unemployment insurance benefits totalled 82,902, compared with 62,243 in October, 1950. Most marked increases occurred in Quebec and Ontario, where the adoption of short-time working scheduled or lay-offs continued in the textile and automobile industry.

Claims filed by provinces with figures for the corresponding month last year in brackets: Ontario 31,676 (19,753); Quebec 25,939 (19,779); British Columbia 11,031 (9,964); Manitoba 3,439 (2,327); Alberta 2,719 (2,187); Newfoundland 676 (376); Prince Edward Island 244 (226); Nova Scotia 3,481 (3,678); New Brunswick 2,666 (2,796), and Saskatchewan 1,031 (1,157).

100-Foot Bridge Collapses But No One Is Injured

Riviere du Loup, Que., Dec. 5 (CP) —A 100-foot bridge collapsed today in the river from which this town takes its name. No one was reported injured.

The bridge apparently fell as a big truck from Quebec city moved onto it. Both occupants of the vehicles leaped into the shallow river. The truck then slowly slipped off the deck.

The wood and steel bridge was part of the main St. Lawrence south shore highway and was located on the eastern outskirts of the town.

The structure, which rested on pillars at both extremities of the 75-foot wide river, apparently broke away from abutments at both ends at the same time.

Two Remanded For Sentence Until Friday

Pleading guilty Tuesday in magistrate's court to two charges of breaking and entry with theft and to a charge of attempt to break and enter, John Edward Gaffney, of this city, and George Arthur Gough, New Brunswick, were remanded until Friday for sentence.

The two men pleaded guilty to entering the Swift Canadian Company plant on Station Street where office machines and other articles were stolen, to entering the Belle Cleaners and to a charge of attempt to break and enter Thrasher's Feed Mill on Coleman Street. Gough pleaded guilty to a further charge of being armed while committing an offence.

Gaffney and Gough were arrested by city police a week ago as they attempted to break and enter Thrasher's Feed Mill. A nearby resident had heard the tinkle of breaking glass and notified police with result that officers apprehended the two men outside the mill window. When arrested Gough was in possession of an automatic pistol.

Investment Dealer's Role in Public Financing Explained to Kinsmen

"Information regarding the activities of the Investment Dealers Association of Canada" was the topic of an address delivered to the Kinsmen Club on Monday night by A. C. Cochrane, a representative of the Bankers Bond Corporation of Canada.

Mr. Cochrane made several general observations on the Investment Dealers Association. "The Association," he said, "has 203 member firms from Newfoundland to British Columbia and goes much further than most trade associations in the scope of its operations." Unlike other merchants, he said, it operates in relatively large amounts at a very small profit." Members must qualify as to financial responsibility and experience in industry, adhere to strict rules as to his advertising material, his relations with the public and transactions with the public and fellow members."

Finances Supplied

Speaking on municipal finance, Mr. Cochrane stated that it supplies funds for such essentials as schools, sidewalks, sewers, streets, waterworks, arenas, community centres and swimming pools. It calls for a knowledge of the physical aspects of the country as a whole and, in addition, a knowledge of municipal finance, mathematics and a fair smattering of law.

Large municipal issues must be brought to the widest possible market, through the investment dealer, to be sold successfully, he said. He touched briefly upon the qualifications of a good municipal credit including collection of taxes, size of debt, debt record, and credit value.

Mr. Cochrane expressed concern over the dearth of individual purchasers of municipal securities today. What of the present, he asked? Municipal securities are being offered in ever-increasing volume to finance projects delayed during war years, projects made necessary by increasing populations and projects resulting from new steps in education, sanitation and recreation, he said.

Interest Rates Higher

As to the interest return, he continued, it has increased from less than three per cent to over four per cent in little over a year's time. Municipal securities are now cheaper than at any time since 1934, he added.

"It is now up to the investment dealer," he concluded. "It is up to us to train our salesmen to bring the offerings to your attention, to train our statistical staffs to make up municipal offerings in brief, understandable form, and train our member investment houses to take enough profit on their underwritings so that these ends can be accomplished."

Mr. Cochrane was introduced by Jack McNab and the appreciation of the club was expressed by president Ben Yanover.

Author, Writer And Historian Speaks to Club

An author, a writer of fiction, verse and radio drama, a historian and a portrait painter; this was the introduction given to Egbert C. Reed of Norval, Ontario, prior to his talk before the Kiwanis Club at their weekly luncheon on Tuesday.

Mr. Reed has painted portraits of 157 reeves and mayors, including Mayor Potter, as well as having written their biographies and the history of their communities, during the past year.

The speaker is widely known for his social work more particularly among boys, and it was about his interest in boys' work that he addressed the club.

"Work among the youth is a personal responsibility with each of us" he said. "It may escape us but it will always come back."

Large Percentage Young

During a recent visit to Kingston penitentiary, Mr. Reed recalled that 25 per cent of the inmates were 20 years of age or less. After questioning this 25 per cent, Mr. Reed stated that everyone admitted to truancy, while at school. This in itself, he added, is a minor detail but if persisted in into manhood, will lead to instability and eventually into crime. The answer is not psychological nor physical but plainly a matter of religion.

The speaker recalled several pages from his own life including his work in founding the Key Club and many other youth organizations.

The influence of the home is a tremendous thing in a boy's life, said Mr. Reed. "There must be a companionship between father and son."

Concludes Talk With Poem

Mr. Reed concluded his talk by reciting one of his own poems illustrating the need of help and understanding by youths without family guidance. It is entitled "My Boy".

He's not my boy, but when his hand
Is held in mine I understand
The problems that he has to face,
I glimpse his goal in life's long race

And there a thrill akin to joy
Sweeps over me. He is my boy!
He's not my boy, he has no dad,
He's just a lonely little lad
Who'll have to battle all the way
And so in trust, if he will lay
His hand in mine I'll count it joy
To help that lad I call my boy.

The appreciation of the club was expressed to Mr. Reed by Norman Gateson.

Other guests and visitors present included Jack Kincaid, reeve of Madoc, Ed Armstrong of Madoc, C. P. Sutcliffe and Archie Johnson of Toronto, and Melvin Greenburg of Scarboro.

President Everett Fairman congratulated Bill Wills and his committe for the excellent work which they had done to make the recent blood donor clinic a success.

The attendance prize was donated by Harold Carruthers and was won by Charles Mott.

One of the debentures approved by the county is for $150,000 for the addition to the Tweed High School and the other is for $25,000 for "permanent improvements" in the Centre Hastings High School district.

County Underwriters

It was explained that the county was merely underwriting the debentures in order that the municipalities concerned might take advantage of the higher credit rating of the county and thus receive a more favorable interest rate. The procedure also allows the smaller municipalities to retain their credit rating in case it was necessary to issue debentures for another purpose.

In both cases the Centre Hastings High School district will pay all carrying and other charges at no cost to the county.

Might Take Advantage

Reeve Jack Kincaid of Madoc viewed the procedure of the county issuing debentures for the high school district with some misgiving, noting that a municipality might take advantage of the act to such an extent that the county's credit rating might suffer.

"Once you start something it can grow like a snowball," he said.

Reeve T. C. Graham of Tweed noted the by-law was not at the request of Tweed but of all the municipalities in the high school area and all would benefit.

Reeve Vincent Lynch of Marmora said that when the Marmora school had been built the village had issued the debentures but noted it did not seem fair that the municipality in which the school was constructed must issue the debentures. He felt the county was the proper channel through which to finance the construction.

The only reason that Marmora and Madoc had issued the debentures for schools was that the enabling legislation to do otherwise had not been passed.

Expresses Appreciation

Warden Harry Coulter expressed his appreciation to members of the county council for their cooperation in conducting county business during the year, and asked for promptness and attention during the busy December session.

The county will assume as part of the county road system two stretches of road that were formerly part of No. 37 highway. These are in the Roslin and Chapman's Corners areas.

Reeve Harold Wells of Stirling wanted permission from the county to place a large sign at West Huntingdon designating the Ridge Road through to Stirling and Trenton as a scenic route to No. 2 highway. Reeve Clarke Rollins of Wollaston, however, said that it might be advisable to obtain approval from the highways department first.

No action was taken by councillors on a recommendation from an outside county that a hail insurance scheme sponsored by county councils be set up.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 5—(CP)—Irregular mid-session support today held early afternoon stock market prices mixed and trendless.

Industrials made little headway. Prices pushed upward within the first hour, but eased as the session progressed.

Penny Golds and Base Metals attracted speculative interest.

Base Metal leaders strengthened, Falconbridge, Hudson Bay, International Nickel and Waite Amulet posted fractional advances while Consolidated Smelters climbed $2.75. Anacon Lead, Steep Rock and United Asbestos climbed strongly.

Western Oils traded irregularly. Alberta Pacific, Devon-Leduc, Federated Petroleum, Mid-continent, Federated Petroleum and Vulcan strengthened while Calgary and Edmonton General Petroleum A and Security Free weakened.

Importance of Cleanliness in Cheese Production Stressed at Convention

Stressing importance of procedure of cleanliness above that of cleanliness itself, C. L. Hodgins, Diversey Company, fired the opening gun of a battery of addresses which will feature the 24th annual convention and British Empire Dairy Show of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers Association at the Hotel Quinte this morning.

The convention has attracted a large number of cheese producers, makers association representatives and government department officials to its two-day session which will be climaxed with a banquet Thursday night. The cheese show is being held in the new cheese show warehouse on Wills Street.

Pointing out that the cleanliness of milk on arrival at the factory was of paramount importance, Mr. Hodgins outlined a program of cleanliness for the farmer that included sanitation and sterilization of equipment and care of cattle.

Educational Program

Sanitation, he said, is purely an educational program, one that provides no more work for the farmer than does the old method.

He believed that more good could be done along these lines if manufacturers, producers, health officers, inspection staffs and others were grouped as a whole to further this form of education.

He advocated clean cows, clean equipment, stressing that cleaning of the latter should be done within a building. If this followed all milk coming to cheese factories can be used in any branch of the industry.

He pointed out that the public is becoming more quality conscious of food. Regardless of the attractiveness of the package, it must contain the proper quality inside. This, applied to the cheese manufacturing industry would result in an increase of sales.

Union Suggestion

In a discussion period that followed Mr. Hodgins' address, W. D. Cook, of the Belleville firm of W. S. Cook and Son advocated the inauguration of a union for cheese makers. He pointed out that they are specialists not laborers, many of whom are forced to work at other vocations during the winter months.

This condition, he pointed out, was resulting in the best cheese makers in the industry's being forced to leave for other phases of employment. Gradually, he said, the best makers are quitting their jobs for more permanent ones.

Loss of these skilled men, he claimed, is resulting in the manufacture of poorer quality cheese. He illustrated this point by quoting one or two factories whose products had dropped to well below that of former years due to change of makers.

Saying the cheese maker is basically responsible for the quality of cheese, he advocated "incentive pay" which would tie in with bonuses for quality in an effort to retain the better makers. Very few cheese makers, he said, make more than enough to live on.

Says Good Job Being Done

A member of the convention said he did not think Mr. Cook meant the cheese makers of today are merely working for the sake of having a job. When 65 percent of factories are making high score cheese it does not seem the makers are doing such a poor job.

When cheese goes down to a 92-point score, Mr. Cook replied, it is not entirely due to the poor quality of milk being received at the factories.

Dr. A. L. Gibson, Eastern Dairy School, Kemptville, asked if milking parlors will be a thing of the future. He felt some organized scheme whereby these parlors could be established on farms with possibly some financial help from the government should be adopted.

Mr. Hodgins agreed, pointing out that parlors are an expensive piece of equipment although they are far more sanitary than the old methods.

In the absence of the association president Mr. H. Atherton, Milford, Ont., who is ill, vice-president, Bert Jones, also of Milford, formally opened the convention a little after ten o'clock. He welcomed members. He pointed out that the number of cheese manufactured had increased by 20 per cent despite the fact that labor problems had caused some factories to close. He paid tribute to association members who had passed on during the year.

Mr. G. H. Pollard, Stirling, Ont., was chairman of the discussion period.

Welcomed by Mayor

The convention was formally welcomed by Mayor R. T. Potter at the afternoon session today with Warden Harry Coulter, of Hastings County and Prince Edward County's warden, James Cleminson, adding their words of greeting. Response was made by Thomas Heath, past-president of the association.

Addresses were given by Dr. Gibson, D. M. Beatty, associate director of Marketing Services, Ottawa, and O. R. Evans, Montreal. Four addresses and the election of officers will feature the night session.

Dr. W. A. Mackintosh, Principal Of Queen's University, Honored By Kiwanis Club of Madoc

Dr. W. A. Mackintosh

Madoc—(Special)— Dr. W. A. Mackintosh, principal of Queen's University, was the speaker and guest of honor at a banquet held by the Kiwanis Club in the armouries here Tuesday night.

Dr. Mackintosh, who is a native of Madoc, devoted the greater part of his address to recollections of his early days in the village and a comparison of Madoc then and now.

Dr. Mackintosh said he could not adequately thank the Kiwanis Clubs of Madoc and Kingston for this occasion of inviting himself, his wife and others from Kingston. He said Mr. Edmison had introduced him to people with whom he had lived in his early life. During his talk he reminiseed of the settlement of the Madoc district when people came farther north in agricultural pursuits and colonization roads were built in Addington and Hastings county.

Early History Recalled

Madoc was the stepping off point for mining and lumbering operations said Dr. Mackintosh as he recalled the gold rush of 1866 when gold was discovered in the locality of Madoc. His earliest recollections were of a small village changing rapidly. He had memories of a tannery behind the school, remains of a potash kiln and an iron furnace as well as an abandoned railroad and quarry.

The speaker compared Kingston and Madoc as being similar in stability. Kingston became a military headquarters and a naval yard and iron came from this district to build the ships in Kingston.

Dr. Mackintosh told of his school days in Madoc when his teacher was the father of the present president of the Kiwanis Club.

"People we remember best are not always the most eminent," he commented. As an illustration, he spoke of one, Henry Mitchell, an Indian and a very quiet man, who had often taken him fishing. He was a model of quiet persistence, and would take youngsters fishing but not older people.

Remembers Blacksmith

Another person Dr. Mackintosh remembered well was Thomas Emerson, a blacksmith, in whose shop he had spent a great deal of his spare time. He noted the difference between this country and Australia where he had spent some time. He said it was confusing to have the sun always in the north, and the trees do not shed their leaves in the fall. but shed their bark. In Australia there was a lack of villages and towns, nothing between open country with scattered population and large over-crowded cities.

Dr. Mackintosh's father had been an inspector of schools, and he had followed along that line. It had been a great pleasure a year ago to visit Madoc High School and to hear of the High School Area from the chairman Dr. Eagleson.

The importance of education was a characteristic in this locality. Although Queen's is not a large university it is the oldest west of the maritimes and was opened in 1841. Only a small number of its students is from the surrounding districts, but the students come from all the provinces in the Dominion and many from northern Ontario.

Appreciates Honor

In conclusion, Dr. Mackintosh said it was a kindly thought for the Kiwanis to plan this occasion and ask him to be their guest of honor. Everyone likes to be honored and especially among those one knows well and he greatly appreciated the honor. He hoped as a result more students would come from Madoc to the university.

Dr. R. S. Beatty, member of Madoc Kiwanis Club, expressed appreciation on behalf of the club and said he had known the speaker's father well. He had always admired him as inspector and he had been a great help to him in the days when he was teaching school.

"In honoring our distinguished guest," said Dr. Beatty, "I wonder if we appreciate his worth. In our daily rush for life's material comforts and pleasures, we are too busy to note intellectual talents. Tonight we honor a man of important position as principal of Queen's University and his guidance is of great value in our education. He has captivated his audience throughout an entire address which was very interesting to the people of Madoc." Dr. Beatty extended his appreciation to Dr. Mackintosh for his presence at the banquet.

Silver Gift Presented

Mr. Watson said he could not let this opportunity pass without some small token of their appreciation and a silver gift was presented to Dr. Mackintosh for which he expressed his appreciation and thanks.

Flowers were also presented to Mrs. Mackintosh and his sisters, Miss Mary and Miss Jean Mackintosh.

Prior to Dr. Mackintosh's address a cordial welcome was extended by club president, Jim Watson and also by Jack Kincaid, reeve of Madoc village. Mr. Kincaid said it was an honor to be here tonight as reeve of Madoc to welcome their guest, a native of Madoc village and was proud of the fact that he was the first Canadian to be president of Queen's University. He concluded by saying, "Welcome home, Bill."

The other guests also received a warm welcome. This was responded to by Bill Weller, president of Kiwanis Club of Kingston, Lt.-Gov. Mel. Osborne, East York, and Lt. Gov.-elect Bert Coulter, Oshawa. All thanked the sponsors for a very pleasant evening and their kind hospitality.

Mrs. Otten, Kingston, rendered, two vocal solos which were much enjoyed.

Born in Madoc

"Most of you know that our guest tonight is a graduate of Queen's, Harvard and University of Manitoba," said Mr. Edmison, "and also that he had been decorated by the King for his part in the world war but probably that was not as important as the fact that he was born in Madoc, son of an honored Madoc family and a graduate of Madoc High School."

News of Trenton

Mr., Mrs. Ryerson Harvey, Trenton, Mark Fiftieth Wedding Anniversary

Trenton (Special) —Relatives and friends visited Mr. and Mrs. Ryerson Harvey while they celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary at home on Quinte St. yesterday.

A half century ago Maggie E. Brooks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Brooks, of Prince Edward County and Ryerson Harvey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Harvey of Ameliasburg, were united in marriage in Trenton by Rev. E. W. Wilkinson of Grace United Church. The ceremony was performed in the evening. The couple travelled on the first leg of their honeymoon to Smithfield and back through Prince Edward County to Roblins Mills by horse and buggy. They lived on a farm at Roblins Mills until 1916.

When munition makers were needed in Trenton in the First Great War, Mr. Harvey settled here and brought his family with him. They have lived in the same house since.

Mr. Harvey remembers the explosion of 1918 when the chemical plant where the Central Bridge property is today blew sky high. He was on shift in the factory that night and figures he is lucky to have escaped alive. He remained at his post until orders came through to evacuate. His wife with three of her children had left town by the time he reached his house on the other side of the river.

Mr. Harvey will be remembered amongthe apple growers here for he joined in the annual harvest year after year. The Harveys now live retired with memories of their many friends.

Their oldest son, Harry Harvey is a resident of North Tonawanda, N.Y. A daughter, Mrs. Charlie Low, lives at Oshawa. The youngest son, Harold, is a traveller out of Guelph.

Chevrier Says Seaway Project Needed for National Defence, Also Economic Development

Ottawa, Dec. 5 (CP) — The St. Lawrence seaway-power project is important for economic development and urgent for national defence, Transport Minister Chevrier said Tueday in the Commons.

In parliament's major seaway speech of the last 10 years, the minister emphasized Canada's intention of going ahead alone with an all-Canadian seaway in view of long United States delay in getting a joint scheme under way.

However, he said Canada would prefer to have U.S. participation and made it clear the U.S. will still be welcome into the project providing Congress acts "at an early date" on a 1941 agreement between the two governments.

"We believe not merely that it can pay its way but that the benefits to both Canada and the United States will far outweigh its original costs," Mr. Chevrier said.

The minister gave the House a 6,000-word review of Canada's stand on the $700,000,000 navigation-power undertaking as he launched a legislative move for getting the development under way.

He moved a resolution to create a "seaway authority" that would have power to build and operate the navigation end of the project for Canada. If the U.S. should join, the authority would deal with the Canadian end of the joint venture.

The new agency would be empowered to borrow up to $300,000,000, estimated as enough to meet the cost of a 27-foot deep navigation channel from Montreal into Lake Erie.

Agreement Signed

Mr. Chevrier's review came a day after the signing of an agreement between the federal and Ontario governments whereby Ontario would handle the Canadian phase of the concurrent $400,000,000 project to develop 2,200,000 horsepower of electricity in the international rapids section of the St. Lawrence River.

While he made clear that Canada still wants the U.S. to join in the work, Mr. Chevrier told the House this country can and will go ahead.

"If the costs not borne by power are covered by tolls on shipping, it is of much less consequence who makes the initial expenditures, and Canada can do any necessary financing."

The estimated cost, somewhere over $250,000,000, was considerably less than what Canada already invested in lake and river navigation facilities, these on a toll-free basis.

Mr. Chevrier said each section of Canada would derive regional benefits from the seaway.

Power Important

The power and navigation facilities would be important for Ontario and Quebec, with the chief industrial stimulation expected for the iron-ore fields of Newfoundland's Labrador and Quebec's Ungava district.

The prairies would get a substantial saving in moving grain and grain products to eastern Canada and the overseas market down the lakes and rivers. Also, large ocean going vessels could move up the lakes to relieve shipping shortages such as clogged the prairie grain movement this year.

Aside from Newfoundland's share in the iron-ore development, the four Atlantic provinces would get a low-cost transportation route into the heart of the continent. This would bring new opportunities in marketing lumber and its products, paper, specialty farm products, minerals and other items.

British Columbia would be brought closer to the centre of the continent. There was "some promise" of B.C. products moving by cheap all-water transport into the central market.

A FARMER SPEAKS

Not long ago, the Ontario Milk Control Board announced that it was going to allow milk distributors in many Ontario communities to increase the price of milk. This was done only after the dealers had proven that their supplies of milk were dwindling because the farmers were reducing the size of their dairy herds.

As soon as the price increases were announced, the milk control board was flooded with protests. Spearheading these protests were some two dozen mayors of municipalities affected. The price of milk had to be kept down, even if the dealers did have to pay a higher price to the farmers, the mayors informed the milk control board. The dealers vainly tried to point out that the farmers simply refused to supply milk at the old prices.

The two dozen mayors were told off in no uncertain fashion on Monday afternoon by Hon. Thomas Kennedy, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, who is himself a farmer. "If these mayors think they can supply milk cheaper than the dealers, let them go into the milk business and show us if they can supply milk any cheaper than the present distributors," Mr. Kennedy said. "If these mayors were to tell the truth, they would tell the people that milk is the cheapest, the most healthful and the most complete food that people can buy," Mr. Kennedy said.

Twenty years ago, Mr. Kennedy pointed out, the farmers received $2.50 a hundredweight for milk, compared with $4.20 in 1951. During the same period, the price of milk had advanced from about 13 cents a quart to about 21 cents a quart. Commenting on this increase, Mr. Kennedy stated, "Milk is far too cheap, in proportion to other costs; it is by all odds the cheapest food sold in the province. Potatoes have gone up from $1 a bag to $3.50 a bag during this year."

Mr. Kennedy added that young men were leaving dairy farming faster than any other branch of farming. Men engaged in dairying, he said, work seven days a week and milk cows twice every day. There were 37,000 fewer dairy cows this year than last in Ontario, with more consumers. Production of butter had fallen 3.4 per cent from last year, and it had been necessary recently to import 15,000,000 pounds of butter from New Zealand. Cheddar cheese production in Ontario was down 10.2 per cent and fluid milk production down two per cent from last year. Farm wages in 1940 were $24.26 with board and $40.14 without board. Such wages were now $85.40 with board and $120.07 without board. Other figures quoted by Mr. Kennedy showed that the price of dairy cattle had increased 237 per cent since 1940 and that most dairy farmers had to buy such cattle. Feed, he said, had also increased greatly in price.

As Mr. Kennedy intimated, the choice of the urban mayors and those for whom they speak is not whether they are going to have cheaper milk or dearer milk; it is whether they are going to have dearer milk or less milk. If the mayor of any Ontario municipality thinks he can force the farmers to produce milk at cost, or less than cost, he can do as Mr. Kennedy suggested — go into the milk business himself. Our prognostication is that not many of them will accept the agriculture minister's challenge.

If those interested would undertake to discuss the situation with a typical dairy farmer, they would hear approximately the same arguments as those advanced by Mr. Kennedy, although perhaps in more emphatic language. They would be told, among other things, to buy a cow; after all, a good dairy cow costs no more than one of the better grade television sets that are on the market.

WANTED: ONE HOE

The United Nations Food and Agriculture Committee is spending large sums of money in trying to teach some of the world's less advanced people how to provide food and other necessities for themselves.

A representative of the Food and Agriculture Committee, on arriving in Afghanistan, learned that the cotton growers there were not only still using wood implements only, but that they had never even heard of such a simple device as a metal hoe.

After some difficulties, the production adviser was able to get a sample hoe from Washington. He has taught the Afghans how to make hoes as well as to use them. Prospects are that the Afghan cotton crop will rise next year. The net cost of the specimen hoe was $4.50, supplied by an American junior farmers' club.

When the U.N. production adviser applied to Washington for hoes, he was told that none was available, although he could have tractors if he wanted them.

The "top brass" of the United Nations could not understand anyone wanting anything as cheap and simple as a hoe, or even a large supply of hoes. They were accustomed to thinking in billions and in what they like to refer to as "global" terms; hence, the offer of tractors when hoes were wanted.

Mustn't buy myself a tie.

One who loves me would be hurt
If I bought myself a shirt.

Surely there would be a row
If I bought a new hat now,

Though my need for socks is great,
I am told that I must wait.

Though my fingers may be cold,
Mustn't go where gloves are sold.

Now till bells of Christmas chime,
This is known as "waiting time."

BE CAREFUL OF YOUR APPRAISALS

The bottom of a lily pond is usually covered with thick black mud. Surely out of this nothing beautiful could grow. Yet the lily in all its beauty grows out of these apparently unpromising conditions.

One reason why we are instructed in the Bible never to judge our fellows is because we know too little to enable us to make a just judgment. We are accustomed to believe that people raised in so-called "privileged homes" are destined to be the leaders of their day. As a matter of fact this seldom happens. The leadership of this and of every other country is constantly being recruited from sources to which we would never go of our own accord to seek great leaders. All over the world there are people holding high position today who arose from the humblest of circumstances. The lily still continues to grow out of black mud.

Knowledge of this should have a salutary effect both on those who come from privileged surroundings and those who come from underprivileged. The privileged folk had better realize that the way to success will be narrow and tortuous for them just as it is for everybody else. The underprivileged should realize that no handicap can hold back a person from the highest position in the world, if he has qualities which humanity can use.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

MAKE BIG PLANS!

Small plans are all good, but they do not have to stimulate the imagination. It is so much more inspiring to aim at big things and even fail to gain them, than to aim only at small things and get them.

None of us know the extent, or the boundaries, of our potentialities. Through wide vision and great faith we may attempt anything, and it is only by attempting things which we may think are outside our achieving that we grow to later heights that surprise ourselves.

A friend once told me of the early beginnings of Henry Ford. Ford knew that his ideas were right, but he didn't have the money to put them through. He consulted engineers and ordered machinery far beyond his immediate ability to pay. A few believed in him and loaned him money. His lawyer took stock instead of fees. Those who saw big with him, however, retired later as millionaires! The others called him crazy.

A man's brain is a small organ, but big plans enlarge it. In fact, no one has yet defined the limit of a man's capacity for achievement. Only the man himself can discover that. As Edison tinkered at his telegraph instrument, his mind was forever upon big things that loomed before him as he whiled the hours away. And later, when he had started a string of inventions that astounded the world, he kept evolving still bigger plans for newer inventions.

A doctor friend of mine left a fine practice in a mid-western city to go to a foreign land to take charge of a large hospital, and I asked him why he did it. "Because," said he, "I will have the opportunity to serve thousands where now I can only serve hundreds." Big plans are what make big men upon whom we depend for a better world in which all of us share the results.

Make big plans. The mere making of them lights up the soul, and gives hope and confidence in a world of distrust and fear.

OUR TOWN

BY JACK SCOTT

EASY WAY OUT

Henry Pludge kicked the starter of his old Essex, backed out of his garage, turned west on Maple Boulevard and drove slowly in the direction of the river.

His face wore a serious, almost mournful expression. A small muscle pulsed under his right eye as it did occasionally when he was distraught. Once, seeing his reflection in the rear-view mirror, he turned away, unable to meet his own gaze.

Indeed, Henry was so lost in thought and self-recrimination that occasionally he spoke aloud.

"Murderer," he said at one point, repeating the word three or four times. A few minutes later he heard his voice again. "Has a man the right to take a life?" it asked. It was then he'd turned away from the mirror.

Reaching the river road, Henry swung from the main highway and took a rutted dirt lane that led down to the bank of the stream, a place where he and his wife Emily had once picnicked some years before.

It was a bright, cold day. Veils of steam rose lazily from fields that had met the morning white with frost. Ahead, through gaunt maples, Henry could see the river bright under the hard, thin December sun, but so cold that Henry shuddered involuntarily. It was a great day to be alive, he thought ironically.

He braked the Essex to a halt at a steep bank. The river slipped by directly below him. He sat there for a moment lost in thought and with his heart knocking at his ribs. Then for the first time he glanced down at the seat beside him.

A burlap bag lay there. Inside it were two heavy stones and six day-old kittens.

Against Logic

Henry lit a cigarette with nervous hands and thought back over it all. Emily, he reflected, had made it all sound so logical. Feminine logic, he thought, as hard to understand as the atom, and as dangerous.

"We have Tabby and her three last kittens," she'd said. "This new batch will have to go. We can't get any more friends to take them, you know that, Henry. You know that. We have to put them away. I hate to think of it as much as you, Henry. But there's no other way. Isn't that so, Margo"?

She had turned to their neighbor, Margo, a statuesque blond about whom Pludge frequently had some wild fantasies.

"Oh," Margo had said, "we always drown our kittens." Henry had felt his furtive interest in her wither and die. "They never know what's happening," Margo had added lightly. Henry had looked at her in a new way. Visions of the Witch of Belsen crossed his mind. They have terrible, hidden depths, he thought.

Henry stubbed out the long butt and gazed down at the sack beside him. There was a slight movement inside.

"Perhaps it's just that I'm weak," he thought to himself, "a rank sentimentalist. Emily's right. We can't keep them all. We can't give them away. They're too young to know what it's all about. It's only my fool cowardice that stands in the way."

He found himself thinking of all the idiotic things this streak in him caused him to do. Only the week before he had walked across to the fireplace and rescued a small grey bug from a burning log while his wife looked at him with disdain.

There had been the time, too, when Tabby had brought in the small mouse. He had saved the tiny, terrified creature and released it far from the house. Tabby had looked at him with the same expression as Emily.

Man and Nature

Henry glanced up from his reflections, his eye drawn by a quick movement above the bare maples. A small tawny hawk was rising on strong wings in the cold silvery air with a small struggling bird in its claws. Henry watched it soar away beyond his vision.

That was the way with everything, he thought. The strong kill the weak in the world of animals and birds and humans.

He thought of the recruiting advertisements showing the young men lovingly handling heavy shells of shining brass, designed to wipe out life, the stories of the atomic experiments, science's contribution to the destruction of living flesh, thought of the mass murder in the river itself where every fish pursues a smaller fish and is, in turn, pursued by a larger fish, he thought of the cattle and the swine queued on the abattoir ramps.

Where nature left off, he thought man took over with callousness that bred callousness until the most civilized of humans accepted his right to destroy. Six-day-old kittens or six million of an enemy. It was all part of the same pattern.

Henry shrugged helplessly. He reached down, untied the burlap bag and put the kittens on the seat beside him. They were warm crawly things, but soon they would be—as Emily so often put it—"adorable".

Then, with a slight frown on his face, Henry stepped from the car and flung himself into the river.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The hardest thing of being a politician must be the air of humility and bonhomie that he has to adopt at election time. A man in public life naturally develops a certain quality of authority, whether he is a member of parliament or an alderman. The cloak of public approval adds an element of swank to the bearing of even a quite modest man. Until election time draws nigh, a politician walks with assurance amongst his fellow mortals.

And then, for a month or six weeks of his campaign, he has to undergo a painful change of personality. It is just as painful a change as that which comes over rough and tumble little boys as Christmas draws on. The politician removes his toga. Public approval has again to be sought.

Do politicians ever feel humiliated at these times? After months or years of authority, how does it feel to have to be meek? What are a politician's feelings when, at election time, he has to encounter the people he has turned down, those he has affronted with an easy air of command in recent months? As he mingles with the crowd at election meetings, affably shaking hands, exuding humility and good fellowship, is he ever conscious of the snide grins of people who have come to the meeting for no purpose but to collect a little revenge? Sweet revenge it is to see a man, who, a little while ago, brushed you off like a bug, now fawning on the public favor.

It is this trial that politicians have to face which is one of the most important elements of our electoral system. It is good and it is bad. It is bad because it encourages to enter public life the Jekyll and Hyde type. It is good because it deters our elected representatives from brushing us off. The next time a politician high-hats you, don't get mad. Just assure him you will atend all his next election meetings, to watch him kow-towing.

SERIOUS, SOMETIMES FATAL OPERATION

Notwithstanding the increasing popular awareness of the hazards of tonsillectomy and of the uncertainty that the operation will have the beneficial effect promised or implied, reports of tragic consequences of this atrocity—and I mean atrocity—reach me, in newspaper clippings or in heart-rending letters from bereaved parents, almost as frequently as ever.

Moreover, current medical literature seems to have nearly as many papers or essays by doctors and specialists on various aspects of tonsillectomy as in the days when they were coralling school children by the busload or truckload and running them through the "clinic" for removal of "tonsils and adenoids"—the presence of which was diagnosed, as likely as not, by a peep into the luckless child's throat by nurse, teacher or social worker.

I have seen the operator in such a "clinic" look around in some puzzlement after the victim was anesthetized and wheeled in, wondering aloud why the child had been sent in—but he went through the motions of hacking out tonsils and hypothetical "adenoids" nevertheless.

How can a doctor who has a heart or a conscience tell a patient: "You can't expect to get rid of your arthritis until you have those tonsils out." A doctor who tells his patient anything like that is not honest. An honest doctor might say: "There's a fair chance that removal of your tonsils may result in improvement or even cure of your joint trouble—if you want to take the chance."

I'll be happy to print here any contrary view or opinion any reputable physician may present, and I promise to withhold the physician's identity if he or she prefers to remain anonymous.

There may be some slight ground for the argument that complete removal of the tonsils is necessary to eradicate infection in the tonsil tissue. It would not make me submit to the atrocity if I believed my tonsils were infected and my rheumatiz or other trouble were due to focal infection therefrom. I know a safer and equally effective alternative for tonsillectomy — electro-coagulation, tonsil diathermy.

There is no scientific ground and not even good common sense in the notion that complete removal of the tonsils is good or justifiable treatment in the case of a child with enlarged (hypertrophied) tonsils. I tell you, parents, all that is necessary or advisable when enlarged tonsils obstruct breathing or cause impairment of hearing is at most tonsillotomy, instantaneous clipping or slicing off the obstructing portion by means of a tonsillotome. In many cases even this comparatively minor operation is not necessary — a course of X-ray or radium treatments will shrink the tonsils enough to relieve the obstruction.

Too many physicians and throat specialists still harbor a half-baked idea that the mere presence of tonsil (adenoid round-cell lympphoid) tissue in the throat is harmful. The truth is that such tissue functions to protect or guard against invasion by various infections and therefore should be let alone as a general rule.

Mayor Will Name Committee To Investigate Ways, Means For More Hospital Space

Construction of a substantial addition to Belleville General Hospital was a step closer today.

At a meeting of the city council Tuesday afternoon, Mayor R. T. Potter was authorized to appoint a committee of council "to work with a committee of the hospital Board of Governors to devise ways and means to provide for adequate hospital accommodation."

During the discussion which preceded this action, Alderman Bruce Lattimer, council's representative on the hospital Board of Governors, explained that the Board of Governors had been studying for some time what was to be done about increasing the number of beds available at the hospital.

"Something has to be done," said Mayor Potter. "Patients have to be turned away every day because of lack of accommodation at our hospital. We have to send patients to both Toronto and Kingston. We should appoint a committee to go into this."

"We had an architect prepare plans for an addition to the hospital," explained Alderman Lattimer. "These plans made provision for an additional eighty beds, also for more accommodation in the nursery. We want a committee to work on this. There are beds in the corridors. The staff is working under terrible difficulties."

Urged to Visit Hospital

Mayor Potter urged the members of the council to go to the hospital and observe conditions there. "There are things there that you would not believe unless you see them. There are beds in the corridors, for example."

Mr. Lattimer also suggested that the council members visit the hospital on an inspection tour. After some further discussion, it was agreed that such a visit will be made.

Alderman Angus Duffy expressed the opinion that municipal councils should "put all possible pressure on the senior governments to protest against the cost of hospitalization to the municipalities."

"It cost us five mills last year for hospitalization," said Mr. Duffy. "All municipalities should put pressure on the powers that be to get the senior governments to take over this load. We should protest about it."

Previously, Alderman Lattimer told the council that the finance committee of the hospital Board of Governors wanted a mechanical bookkeeping machine, a suction machine and a gas anaesthetic machine.

Mr. Lattimer said that the mechanical bookkeeping machine would cost $4,440, the suction machine $150, and the gas anaesthetic machine $750.

Favors Purchase

Speaking in favor of buying this equipment, Alderman A. McLean Haig said: "Ross Bailey has been appointed comptroller at the hospital. They have been holding an interim audit there and he says the amount of money they handle is too great to be handled manually.

"This machine (the mechanical bookkeeping machine) will make it possible to keep all their ledgers in balance. They will be able to produce monthly financial statements. The hospital board is recommending the purchase of all three of the machines which the hospital wants."

Alderman Lattimer stated that the medical staff at the hospital had urged the purchase of the suction machine and the gas anaesthetic machine. As these devices were classified as capital equipment, he explained, they would have to be purchased by money raised by debenture.

The council agreed on a motion that the city solicitor be instructed to prepare a debenture by-law to raise the funds required for the purchase of the three machines.

New Truck Purchased

Alderman Thomas submitted a report recommending the purchase of a truck suitable for use by the foreman in charge of sewers.

He had received three tenders, Mr. Thomas said. One was from Truck and Farm Supply Limited, for $1,686; the second was from H. W. Gourley Motors Limited, for $1,659; the third was from J. B. Boyce and Sons Limited, for $1,581.

Mr. Thomas explained that the specifications of the three types of trucks were not identical, but that the cheapest of the three was adjudged suitable for the use for which it was intended. Accordingly, he said, he was recommending the purchase of the cheapest of the three trucks.

Council agreed to the purchase of the truck offered by the Boyce company, despite objections from Mayor Potter, who said "If anyone is buying something for his own use, he does not buy the cheapest."

At the request of Alderman Haig, council moved to "appoint a committee to investigate ways and means of improving the municipal voters list and report to council not later than January 31, 1952."

The members of this committee were named as follows: Alderman W. J. Countryman, chairman; City Comptroller H. D. Bateman, Deputy City Clerk Gordon Lummiss and Assessor G. L. Thompson.

By-Law Amended

A by-law was passed to amend the by-law governing parking meters. The old by-law was amended to allow for the operation of the new meters which have been installed on Market Street and McAnnany Street.

A second by-law released Arthur W. J. Murrin from a covenant governing a piece of property he had purchased. The lot had originally been sold to someone else. The deed stipulated that a certain type of house be built on the lot. The house had been built long ago, but the covenant was still in effect. The passage of the by-law releases him from the covenant.

A letter from the Sault Ste. Marie council stated that neither the federal nor the provincial government was paying enough attention to the welfare of old age pensioners and wanted support from other municipalities in getting something done about this matter. This letter was ordered filed.

Referred to New Council

A letter from the Belleville local of the firefighters association stated that a new agreement was being submitted to the council and that one of the clauses in it called for a maximum work week of 56 hours. At the suggestion of Alderman Duffy, this communication was referred to the 1952 council.

A third letter notified the council that the Board of Transport Commissioners was holding a session in Ottawa within a short time to provide the Bell Telephone Company with an opportunity of justifying its request for a rate increase. This letter was ordered filed.

It was agreed to rent to E. B. Cooper certain premises known as "the weigh scales property" for $25 a month, on a one-year lease. Mr. Cooper has been paying $20 a month, it appeared from remarks made.

The city will pay $600 as its share of the cost of 5,000 tourist booklets which are being ordered in co-operation with Hastings county.

The city comptroller was authorized to purchase a heater with a defroster for $29, a winter coat for $42, three pairs of rubber boots at $15 a pair and an automatic door stop for $23. He was also authorized to order 300 feet of sewer rods and 250 feet of sewer hose.

Will Interview Board

Alderman Argue and Alderman W. J. Countryman were authorized to interview the board of health in connection with retaining the services of G. A. Whitman as both welfare administrator and sanitary inspector for 1952.

At the beginning of the meeting, council decided to allow the 1952 property committee make a recommendation concerning the disposal of the former county home property.

"We have an investment of $165,000 in that property," said Alderman Haig. "We should think about doing something with it. One possibility is moving the scene of our civic administration there. This building (the present city hall) is not in good condition. It costs too much to keep it in repair."

Mrs. Woodbeck, of Stirling, provided two suitable instrumental and song selections; Mrs. Berson Mitts read one of Edgar Guest's fine poems, after which Mr. Russel Pyear, of Stirling, favored with several comedy numbers, accompanied by Sherwood Reid. These selection were greatly enjoyed by all. Two enjoyable guitar selections were also rendered by Messrs. Don Rose and Don Bleecker.

At this point, Mr. and Mrs. Wilkinson, Sharon and Haroldene and Bobby, were asked to take seats of honor. Mrs. Embury Hough read a fitting address, and Embury Hough, Leo Ryan and Don Rose presented Mr. and Mrs. Wilkinson with a silver tea service and matching tray; Sharon and Haroldene with rhinestone necklaces, and Bobby with a billfold containing money.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilkinson, and family, most graciously expressed their appreciation for the great kindnesses shown them and invited all to visit them in their new home in the city.

Refreshments were served and a social get-together enjoyed by all.

Museum Exhibits Base For Broad Teaching Scheme

Toronto, Dec. 5. (CP)— Six young women are promoting, under the wing of the University of Toronto and the Royal Ontario Museum, a broadening experiment in cultural education probably unique in Canada.

They are the nucleus of the museum's division of education. From the museum's galleries they gather relics of a bygone age with which to fashion something singularly 20th-century: an audio-visual program of instruction which has all Ontario for its classroom.

The program is under the supervision of brown-eyed Toronto-born Catherine I. Steel, who holds degrees in English, History and Sociology from the University of Toronto and Columbia. She drew the assignment six years ago; since, with her assistants, has travelled thousands of miles, given hundreds of lectures enhanced by exhibits in the museum, the nation's largest.

The audio-visual program, financed partly by the Toronto Board of Education, partly by the University, can be broken down into two phases. Instruction is given at the museum to those children within travelling distance of Toronto. The balance is given far afield, as far distant as Fort Frances, 1,112 miles away.

Crisp, straightforward Catharine Steel hopes classroom teachers, in each case, will take up where the abbreviated museum-sponsored lectures end.

Toronto public school children are required to attend at least one museum tour a year but hundreds take more. They pick their own subject— archaeology, geology, etc.—and are divided into easily-handled groups for visual study.

Pupils in outlying districts don't obtain as comprehensive a training. The number of portable exhibits in the museum is, naturally, relatively small. However, these students generally show greater keenness. They are becoming familiar with everything from a burgonet (a steel helmet of the middle ages) to fahlband (an ore resembling a piece of ossified birthday cake).

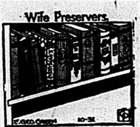
The six women do much of their travelling in winter when conditions are toughest. Explanatory literature regarding the current courses precedes them. Last year, they carried 10 cases of exhibits and covered rural schools from Sault Ste. Marie to the head of the lakes. This year's itinerary is the Sudbury-Sault Ste. Marie region. A complete sweep of Ontario takes four years.

In 1950, nearly 59,000 school children—representing 90 public schools in Toronto and many outside—were given varying periods of instruction. But Miss Steel and her five aides also lectured before high school students, Normal school attendants, university extension classes and a multitude of other groups. They manage to keep it all within an eight-hour day (travelling time, extra) but director Dr. V. V. Ben Meen of the museum says no one realizes the prodigious amount of work they tackle.

The program has been boosted in several quarters. In one instance, business and professional girls in Picton ,Ont., paid for the chartered buses required to transport 200 Prince Edward County pupils to Toronto for one-day tours of the museum.

Says Miss Steel: "We never shut down".

Wife Preservers.



Do not crowd your books on the shelves. Give them room to "breathe," and the bindings will last longer and keep in better condition.

Says Present-Day Problems Will Seem Small to Next Generation

Problems that are too big for us may not be too big for the young people of the next generation," said J. S. Richardson of Montreal when he addressed a meeting of the Collegiate Home and School Association on Monday night "and we must not be discouraged or mention a word of regret to these young people."

Taking as his subject, "Any Hope Today?" Mr. Richardson drew a parallel between the relief of Lucknow when hope had been abandoned and the present situation.

"In history other people have lived through times that seemed without hope, and now we are looking for the pathway that will lead us to hope. The complexities that exist make this an interesting and challenging time to live. We are facing the questions 'Which is better, the individual or the state?' 'Will civilization be destroyed by the hand of man?' A dream of mankind has come true with the discussion of the recent truce negotiations. Here we see that the United Nations is actually a free association of individual nations working for self-help. We have seen a nation move from isolation to a leading world power in the space of 12 years. Other nations have taken hundreds of years to build up leadership; but the United States have accepted responsibility in the U.N. in little over a decade.

Canadians Respected

"In the department of world affairs we can be proud of those who represent this country at the council tables of the United Nations. Trygve Lie said that Canadians were extraordinary people whose voices were always listened to when they spoke. He described them as people who act as a brake on the hasty and as a brace to the doubtful.

"We have carried the banners in Korea with dignity and courage, and we are striving towards a world that is peaceful and free.

"If we would lift our heads and see things other than those close to us we might see that we have descended from a people who did not give up easily; that a freeman is better than a bondsman; that we can be proud of the people who represent us in the U.N.

"There is a measure of security and strength in the golden rule, and we can buttress our philosophy by following this simple rule. I believe there is hope because I want to believe that tomorrow will be a better day, and then the new dawn will look brighter."

The speaker was introduced by Mr. Reg. Varcoe and thanked by Mr. Ken Atwill.

Christmas Music

A special feature of the meeting was the Christmas music supplied by Mr. Templer and members of the Glee Club. They presented some fine choral singing which included "There Dwelt in Old Judea," "See Amid the Winter's Snow," and three Polish carols. Two solo numbers were given with Sylvia Motley singing "Nazareth" by Gounod; and Joan Shindall who sang "Jesu Bambino."

Mrs. R. Varcoe, president of the association was in the chair, and reports were read by Miss H. McLaren, secretary, and Mrs. Tonkin, treasurer. The room mothers who were present were introduced and congratulated on the fine work they are doing.

Light refreshments were served by Mrs. Kane and Mrs. Butler and their committee in the coffee bar.

BEAUTY

Keeping the neck firm and smooth

If you are faithful to your good-looks program, you must give yourself a five-minute facial before you fold yourself in between the sheets. You should, of course, start with a "neckial" and work upward. Never heard of a neckial? Neither did we.

There are fairly young faces that are held up by necks that look as old as the hills. Women in this bracket do considerable lamenting. Fiddle strings never won any beauty medals.

Usually these defects are self inflicted. The woman who keeps her chin lowered deliberately creates them.

Stand before a mirror and let your head droop. The flesh under the chin will sag. Get your head on the level and tissues are smooth again. Typists and women who sew a lot must remember that, unless they maintain correct posture, neck ills may descend upon them.

Necks are particularly susceptible to the effects of advancing birthdays.

Necks are particularly susceptible to the inroads made by birthdays. One isn't old at forty, but neither is one young, and at that particular period every precaution should be taken to keep tissues sound and firm. Once sagging starts there is bound to be trouble. The best means of prevention, other than correct head carriage, will be found in creaming and massage.

Every woman should have two creamy cosmetics—a light, thin one for removing make-up and one of heavier consistency to apply at night. Unless the emollient offers resistance to the fingers, the manipulations are not effective because they do not press deeply enough into the flesh. Unlike the facial areas, the neck can be treated rough, because the muscles are larger.

Apply the cream to a clean skin surface. Washing with fairly warm water will bring a glow, condition the skin for the treatment. Neck muscles must not be tense, so have your chin on the level. Keep the chest lifted. With flattened fingers, rub up and down from the collar bones to the jawline; those movements will discourage a spare chin if it should be budding. Include the back of your neck. As you seldom see it, it may be in need of a little petting.

With all fingers grouped under the chin, smooth outward to the ear lobes. Keep going down further and further until you are close to the collar bones again.

EASY DINNER FOR HOCKEY PLAYERS

Filler-Diller Casserole
Chef's Salad
Rye Bread
Ice Cream Sandwich Coffee

DIRECTIONS:

The casserole was named by a bunch of hungry hockey players. Really now, they were full when it was gone. This dish serves several purposes though, besides filling up hungry stomachs. All of the ingredients of a main course are included, and their combined flavors, when baked together improve one another. It may be combined the night before it is needed and baked about 30 minutes before serving time. It even improves when reheated, if you are lucky enough to have any leftover. This is a recipe for your permanent files.

FILLER-DILLER CASSEROLE

One one-half pound box spaghetti or macaroni or noodles, 3 tablespoons bacon fat, 1 to 1 1-2 lbs. ground raw beef or hamburger (I have made this with one pound hamburg meat and it is fine), 4 medium sized onions chopped fine, 1 20-oz. tin tomatoes, 1 20-oz. tin red kidney beans, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper. Cook the spaghetti or macaroni in plenty of salted water until tender, then drain. Brown the beef and onions in the fat for about 6 or 7 minutes then add the tomatoes to them and simmer 15 minutes.

Combine the tomato mixture with the drained macaroni and the kidney beans (using juice from beans too). Add salt and pepper to taste, turn into buttered casserole. Sprinkle top with grated cheese and bake at 375 deg. Fahr. for about one-half hour or until it is bubbly and golden.

CHEF'S SALAD

I have been asked to describe this classic salad. In our house it defies description. Anything raw and green is likely to go in if it is edible. This often includes raw spinach and celery tops and has been known to include nasturtium seeds and leaves. Pete claims he once broke up a nasturtium and put it in and I blithely chewed away on it without remarking, so next time he chopped up a daffodil. You don't have to believe that—but I'm afraid I do—knowing the guy.

The common ingredients include: torn lettuce (use lots of this) shredded cabbage, slivers of green pepper and celery, chives, watercress, parsley, endive. On extravagant occasions add crescents of avocado. Tomato and pimiento belong too. We sometimes crumble Roquefort Cheese over just before adding the French Dressing. Our French Dressing usually has a slice of garlic in it.

ICE CREAM SANDWICH

Bake a chocolate cake mix. When cold cut the cake in halves buy 2 ice cream bricks. Use a crosswise—2 layers. For 8 people slice of ice cream to put between 2 squares of cake for each serving. If you use a white cake, you can make this more nourishing and complicated by pouring over chocolate sauce.

Fashion Flashes

THE TOP IN TOPS that we have seen so far this season is a sweater blouse of pleated black lace over beige marquisette, with black wool knit trim down the sides and on the cap sleeves.

A LUXURIOUS ECONOMY for a wide evening wardrobe is a reversible fur wrap. With the black broadtail side out, a narrow version of the white ermine of the other side gives a pretty touch. With the ermine side out, it emerges as a jacket of classic, formal elegance.

A TREAT for the travel-light vacationist is a day-length skirt that unbuttons at the puffed hemline to become a floor-sweeping evening model. Also coming on the market are blouses that convert lamp-shade sleeves from elbow to full length.

STAINED DENTURES: "Would you please tell me how to take tobacco stain off the bottom set of my false teeth? My regular tooth powder won't touch it."

Have you tried Hygeol? You can get it at any Tamblyn store and it may possibly remove the stain. If not, however, we would suggest you see a dentist who will be able to remove the stain for you.

CHRISTMAS CANDY: "This Christmas I am planning on making most of our Christmas candy and am looking for a good almond cream fudge recipe. Do you have one?"

We certainly do. And here it is. Measure 2 cups brown sugar, 1 tablespoon corn starch, 1 tablespoon baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt into a saucepan; mix thoroughly. Add ¼ cup milk, ½ cup corn syrup and 3 tablespoons butter. Stir over low heat until dissolved; boil more rapidly to soft ball stage (238°F.). Remove from heat and let stand 3 minutes. Beat until smooth and thick; add ⅓ cup roasted almonds, finely chopped, and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Blend and pour into an oiled 6" x 6" pan. Cut in squares while still warm. This will yield one pound of candy.

CHRISTMAS GIFTS: "This year I would like to make most of my Christmas gifts. Do you have any suggestions for something easy to make and not too expensive? It would be for women."

Why not a pretty apron? There's not much work involved, you can make one cheaply and it's a gift that's always acceptable. We have a sheet of apron patterns and have sent one to you.

Consumers Will Pay 22 Cents Quart for Milk

Toronto, Dec. 5 (CP) — Toronto consumers will pay 22 cents a quart for their milk after Dec. 15 —whether bought over the counter or delivered at their doors.

The Ontario Milk Control Board Tuesday night announced permission for a one-cent increase in the price of a quart of milk delivered and a two-cent boost in the quart price of store milk in the Toronto area. Distributors will pay another 50 cents a hundredweight, bringing the price paid the farmer to $4.70 a hundredweight.

In abolishing the one-cent store differential, the board said the difference in price had some merit but had not materially increased store sales. They pointed out that maintaining the differential would force a further increase in the home delivered price.

The Milk Board pointed out that the new prices were only maximum ones. Any dairy was free to set prices below the board figures.

The board said both producers and distributors had produced ample evidence to support the request for a price boost.

The board reserved any decision on milk prices in London and Peterborough at yesterday's hearings.

In the light of Agriculture Minister Kennedy's Monday statement in which he expressed the opinion that milk should go up to 24 cents a quart, Orville Sinclair, spokesman for the London distributors at yesterday's hearings said, "we don't pay much attention to the minister of agriculture anymore."

Sinclair contended it was no worry of the distributors what was said. "We are in between the producer and the consumer. They are the people we do business with."

Denmark is Not Relying on Arms From the U.S.

Copenhagen, Dec. 5—(Reuters) —Denmark, whose army is small but increasingly efficient, is not relying on arms from the United States.

She is producing lighter weapons herself for her own troops. These include the Madsen light machine gun, which Atlantic defence observers have considered to be sufficiently good to be produced alongside the best weapons from the arms factories of Britain and the United States.

Though designed in 1900, the gun is automatically operated by means of expanding power gases. The gun excelled in simplicity of design and lightness and was more reliable in its automatic functioning than other machine guns of the period. The weapon since has been improved so it can fire any type and calibre of infantry rifle cartridge.

Production of this weapon today is sufficient not only to meet the requirements of the Danish army and navy, but to leave large quantities available for export.

Between the two world wars, the Danish arms industry also developed a highly successful 20-millimetre machine cannon. This weapon is being supplied for close range anti-aircraft defence and for infantry use as an advanced super-heavy machine gun.

The Danish arms industry since the war has developed a submachine gun of 9 mm. and 11 mm. calibre. This weapon has a hinged frame to facilitate inspection and cleaning and a special safety device to prevent accidental firing. Numerous tests under the worst possible service conditions have shown its reliability.

The Danish arms industry has also produced a 51 mm. mortar which is capable of low as well as high trajectory fire so that it can be used as an anti-tank gun. The shell has armor-piercing properties, with a hollow charge.

Another product is an infantry rifle much lighter than those in general use and a new machine gun known as the Dana.

Senator Requests Amalgamation Of Railway Systems

Ottawa, Dec. 5 (CP) —Amalgamation of Canada's two railway systems, and unification of all transportation—land, water and air—were recommended in the Senate yesterday.

Debate was on a bill for equalization of freight rates and otherwise amending the railway act to carry out recommendations of the Turgeon Commission on transportation.

Senator G. H. Ross (L-Alberta) repeated his long held view that the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways should be amalgamated.

If such amalgamation had taken place when it was urged 17 years ago, he said, there would be no railway problem today.

This view was opposed by Senator G. P. Campbell (L-Ontario) who said he did not believe there was undue duplication or waste in operations. He said there was a real competition between the two lines and such competition was desirable.

Other senators believed the legislation had much merit but pleaded for a careful study of this and other associated bills in committee.

It had been expected the bill would get second reading yesterday and go before the committee on transportation and communications today.

However a possible delay was foreseen when, late yesterday afternoon, Senator Thomas Reid (L-British Columbia) adjourned the debate, to give him time to prepare a speech.

The Senate gave second reading without debate to two companion measures, one concerning preparation of the Canadian National Railways annual report and another amending the maritime freight rates act, both already passed in the Commons. They will go before the standing committee today.

The Senate also gave third and final reading to the bill providing pensions of $40 for all Canadians of 20 years residence when they reach the age of 70. This has already been approved in the Commons and requires only royal assent to become law.

CAUSED BY TOY PISTOL

Middlesex, N. C., Dec. 4 — (AP) — Coroner Van B Matthews said yesterday that the gasoline tanker explosion which killed four boys here Sunday was caused by the firing of a toy cap pistol, Matthews said that a roll of caps had been found in the pocket of one of the victims. He added that one boy apparently had fired a cap pistol near a vent in the side of the tank from which fumes were escaping.

All Documents Now Forwarded To Ottawa

Montreal, Dec. 5—(CP)—A demand for copies of all orders-in-council and any other documents pertaining to the arrest of Adrien Arcand, former newspaper man and leader of the now defunct national unity party, and 42 other persons interned in Canada during the Second World War, today was forwarded to Ottawa by their counsel, Salluste Lavery.

Request for the documents was incorporated in a "motion for particulars" entered by Mr. Lavery. Arcand and the others are demanding a total of $3,327,282 from the Canadian government for alleged illegal internment.

Mr. Lavery said the documents were needed before the hearing in the case in which Arcand is suing for $74,250. The case opens here Dec. 17.

The largest claim entered is that of Dr. Noel Decarie, Montreal dentist, for $588,400.

Mrs. Maurice Scott, widow of Maj. Maurice Scott, is claiming $233,496. Maj. Scott, former army officer, is alleged to have trained members of Arcand's "brown shirt" group. He died in the internment camp.

He, Arcand and several other members of the group were ordered interned in 1941 when a preferred indictment from the Quebec-attorney-general interrupted preliminary hearing in their case.

A total of 42 claims were entered against the government after the war. Eighteen were on behalf of French-speaking Canadians and Germans. The remainder were on behalf of Italians.

The claims were re-entered in the Exchequer Court in Ottawa more than a year ago.

Union Officials Want Discharged Men Reinstated

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 5 (CP)—Union officials are making reinstatement of 26 discharged automobile plant employees a condition for ending the strike which has made 10,000 Ford of Canada workers idle.

The firing of the 26 men for inciting and participating in a wildcat walkout last Thursday touched off the strike Monday.

This anxious city today hoped a conciliation report released yesterday might prove a basis for immediate settlement. The report recommends a general pay increase of eight cents an hour, retroactive to June 1, which would bring the basic rate to $1.40 an hour. In addition, it recommends a five-cent-an-hour cost-of-living allowance.

Jack Taylor, president of Local 200 of the United Automobile Workers (CIO), yesterday told a meeting of 7,000 production workers that the rehiring of the 26 discharged men is the paramount issue.

For the first time since the 90-day Ford strike in 1945 the plant's foundry furnaces have been allowed to grow cold.

NO LICENCE FEE

He has trouble only with his private scruple against shooting birds not on the wing. "I almost have to beat them into air," he says, "they've got so heavy." But a dozen go back every day to the rear headquarters to be stuffed, roasted and sent back up to the company position.

Recently Wildfang was sent to the rear headquarters to rest. But every morning he was back at the front, roaming the ridgetops in full view of the Chinese, flushing his prey.

Less happy recently was McDougall, 30 feet from whose tent was feeding a big, fat bird, spectacularly feathered, a Manchurian ring-necked pheasant. And his shotgun was with Wildfang.

McDougall got permission to open fire in the camp area, fired four rounds from his revolver, and missed. "That bird," he said, "didn't even stop feeding."

BEARINGS BURNS OUT

Three generations agree—Five Roses original all purpose flour is best!

"Mother brought our whole family up on crisp, country-fresh home-bakings from FIVE ROSES flour and Grandma used it, too. So naturally I do all my baking with FIVE ROSES! My little ones — and my husband — can't wait to get into the cooky jar or taste pies made with FIVE ROSES — and when I bake a batch of bread, it seems to be eaten up in a minute! As soon as my little girl is old enough she'll begin baking with FIVE ROSES — making four generations!"
MRS. GORDON SHEPHARD,
R.R. #1, Brigden, Ont.

"A woman has to be practical to run a home, and the first thing I taught my daughter was to use just one flour for all her home-baking . . . FIVE ROSES. For cakes, cookies, buns, pies and bread, we both find FIVE ROSES ALL PURPOSE FLOUR is economical, dependable and nutritious. I've used FIVE ROSES flour and the Five Roses Cook Book for years . . . and the quality is just as good as ever — first class!"
MRS. FRED HILL,
Box 29, Charlton, Ont.

"When I was first married over twenty-five years ago, my Mother advised me if I always wanted to have success with my baking, then I should use nothing else but FIVE ROSES ALL PURPOSE FLOUR. I took her advice and have used nothing else since. My Mother has since died, but in her married life of forty-five years FIVE ROSES was the only flour she used!"
MRS. ROBERT PIKE,
187 Agricola Street, Halifax, N.S.

"My Mother has used FIVE ROSES ALL PURPOSE FLOUR ever since I can remember . . . used it for every home-baking need. In my own kitchen, too, I depend on FIVE ROSES' even texture and fine-milled quality for sure, nutritious results every time!"
MRS. ALPHONSE BOUCHARD,
St. Charles Borromée, P.Q.

A woman has to be practical to run a home

Nearly every day we receive letters from families who have used FIVE ROSES FLOUR for generations. These letters give us much interesting information and suggestions . . . as well as many compliments on the fine quality and even texture of FIVE ROSES. Particularly in times of rising costs, more and more women are turning to home-baking their own pies, pastries, cookies and bread . . . and through the years the most practical flour has been FIVE ROSES, Canada's original all purpose flour. You'll find FIVE ROSES dependable and nutritious as well as economical, I'm sure. Why not try some, soon?

If you have any suggestions or comments, please drop me a line and join the long list of FIVE ROSES friends.

Yours for better home-baking,

Big-Hearted Smythe Offers To Play Overtime-With Boston Bruins Only

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

BATTLE OF THE BIRDS!

Tonight the limping Hawks trek away up to Peterborough where they join battle with the haughty Eagles of that city in another senior "B" Battle of the Birds. The pesky Eagles took time out from their current hate-fest of their intra-city pals the Petes the last time they engaged our icelane falcons and they came out on the long end of a 2-0 score. They not only hogtied our huskies after slapping home three goals in the first period but dared 'em to come in and poke a puck behind their nimble netman young Marse Milne.

It can be done all right. Milne is no hockey King Canute who sits in his net and dares the opposition to score. He is as vulnerable as the rest of 'em, which was proven in Kingston when Stan Scrutton's post-Nylon's Essanays (S. and A's) pushed the pill past him nine times.

Now that the fog of protest has been cleared away and strange - appearing names have been wiped clear of the Eagles' line-up we suppose the Peterborough birds are all settled away for the season. They have Parnall a right smart puck-chasing hombre who peps up the personnel of the Trenton RCAF station between ice-lane peregrinations for his aerie huskies, and probably will have Greenlaw's signature to a certificate by the time the bugles sound the charge to start tonight's Civic Arena jousting. Dang it, it beats all how these secrets leak out. Some people can't keep their big traps shut.

In any event the Hawks who have been licking their wounds since that Kingston schmozzle a week ago are more or less in shape to take on the Eagles ce soir. Tommy Schreider is definitely out while it is doubtful if Trumble will see action. Jud Semark's teeth still give out with almost perfect castanet imitations every time he talks, but he'll go along to toss in his bit. Vern Goyer's "little pig that went to market" is progressing satisfactorily and he'll be in on the defeatheration process.

No matter what happens tonight the second battle of the birds for the week will take place in Memorial Arena here on Friday gloaming. At the same time the Petes will be entertaining Kingston, and speaking of that, the Scrutton crew play hosts to the Petes tonight in Kingston. Jolly old group, wot?

LINDSAY HERE TONIGHT!

Meanwhile the junior 'B' group is beginning to takeup the slack in its cinches, Peterborough Triple Links broke out in loud huzzas Monday night when they rang the victory gong for the first time this season by tacking a 5-0 defeat on Maxie Jackson's Kingston Vics. It was the first win for the Oddfellows in five starts, they having dropped three and tied one. The Hawks juniors are riding the top perch at the moment with three victories, a tie and one defeat for seven points, one ahead of the second-place Lindsay Kinsmen.

And speaking of this potent group of beardless puck-chasers, they are the guests of the Hawklets here tonight in Memorial Arena in what should be the starriest junior puck-fest seen here this season. The Hawks hit their scoring as well as some other strides last Friday and Saturday nights against Kingston when they racked up two victories, but they'll have to be at their best tonight to halt these win-hungry lads from Lindsay. Coach "Red" Doran threw the well-known book at them last night following a practise grind and the Hawks will be on their best behavior tonight. They will need to be if they want to chalk up their fourth victory. They can play topflight hockey, but they can't produce it while sitting in the penalty box twiddling their thumbs. Tonight will tell.

Bobby Green, injured in a practice some weeks ago is coming along very nicely and should see some action in the near future. However Don Barclay has been little short of sensational in the Hawks nets and he'll probably stay there until he shows signs of slipping from grace. Billy Strahan, out with a charley horse will be missing from tonight's line-up and it is likely Harry Brown will be sidelined with an injured ankle. Munro may start, all depending on a leg injury. Should be a right lusty tilt.

JUVENILES START SEASON

The BHA juvenile league with four starters gets under way in the arena tomorrow night with teams one and two, and three and four starting off proceedings. The personnel of the squads are published elsewhere in this edition. A schedule is being drawn up which will take the squads through to the end of January. A team, representative of the city, must be ready for OMHA juvenile playdowns by Feb. 15th, says the book.

DON'T MISS IT!

With the football season fast fading into a memory, Manager Tommy Mascaro of the Capitol Theatre has selected a timely film for those who love their pigskin parades, gridiron antics and all the color that goes with the popular autumn game. But the film "Saturday's Hero" is designed not so much to glamorize the sport as it is to focus a hot spotlight on its commercialism. It is a fast-moving story more than reasonably accurate in its expose of college football rackets. We're not going to disclose the plot and plan of "Saturday's Hero" but if you are a football fan and a sportsman who desires his athletics the "clean way" don't miss this fine epic of the screen. It opens at the "Cap" tomorrow and remains through Saturday.

Rookie Stars In AHL Debut

(By The Associated Press)

Eddie Busch, rookie forward of the Cleveland Barons, made a short but impressive American Hockey League debut last night. Busch joined the Barons from the amateur Quebec Aces and started the Barons off to a 5-2 victory over the Buffalo Bisons in the league's ony game.

The recruit slammed home a goal and assisted in another in the first period but he was forced out of action in the final minute of the frame with a bad ankle.

Ike Hildebrand, Fern Perreault, Joe Lund and Steve Wochy tallied the other Cleveland goals. Ab De Marco and Stan Long counted for Buffalo.

But League Won't Sanction It Since Chihawks, N.Y. Rangers Wanted Ban Lifted Last Year

By JACK SULLIVAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

That fellow Conn Smythe is a big-hearted guy.

The latest word from his Toronto headquarters in the National Hockey League is that he is willing to have his Maple Leafs battle it out with Boston Bruins if those two clubs happen to end 60 minutes of hockey in a tie—and if the N. H. L. says it is okay.

Of course, the N. H. L. isn't going to allow such goings-on between the Leafs and Bruins, particularly since New York Rangers and Chicago Black Hawks have been screaming for a year or so that the N. H. L. scrap its plan on sudden-death overtime. Why Smythe, a leading advocate against overtime, picked on the Bruins wasn't made clear

Local Option

"It would be a local option overtime, applicable to Boston only," Smythe was quoted as saying. He added, "Of course, the league first would have to okay it."

New York and Chicago would have a lot to say about this "local option" before such a thing came to pass. Their fans have been hollering for a return to sudden-death overtime for a couple of years and they would certainly put the fritz on this "favoritism."

The Bruins didn't need overtime play last night as they whipped Chicago 3-1 at Boston before a slim 5,391 crowd. The Bruins scored a goal a period on tallies by Dave Creighton, Johnny Pierson and Bill Ezinicki.

Pete Babando opened the scoring for the Hawks at the 13 minute mark of the opening period. The victory moved Boston into third place, one point ahead of Montreal Canadiens and six behind the second place Leafs.

Tonight the Leafs and first-place Detroit Red Wings, who have been making with the words since they met in a somewhat violent collision Sunday night, will have the chance of showing fans they were just kidding—or that the first and stick-swinging was the real thing.

The two meet at Toronto in a game that will give the Stanley Cup champions their big chance of sharing the lead with Tommy Ivan's crew since the 1951-52 season started. The Wings haven't dropped a game away from home—they've won seven and tied three on foreign ice this year.

Another game tonight matches Boston against the Rangers at New York. The Blueshirts have won only six games of 22 to date.

But the thing that intrigues hockey fans is Smythe's offer to Boston concerning overtime. The Bruins have had eight ties, two more than Detroit and Toronto (who are agreed the sudden-death extra play doesn't mean a thing) and three more than the Rangers who set an N. H. L. record of 21 tie games last season.

'Big' Broadcasts May Kill Minors, Says Trautman

Columbus, O., Dec. 5 (AP)—George Trautman today warned that minor-league baseball cannot long survive the "Radio Umbrella" of major - league broadcasts.

The president of the National Association of minor leagues told the opening session of the Golden Jubilee convention that "the solution is squarely in the hands of the individual club."

"It is the legal right (and moral obligation)," said Trautman, for each individual club to exercise a reasonable restraint over its broadcasting and telecasting policies.

Trautman said minor-league fans have become major-league conscious because of "nation-wide broadcasts that fill the air daily with highly-colored descriptions of major-league play."

Delegates were reminded that the N.A.M.L. structure has shrunk from 59 leagues and 444 clubs in 1949 to 49 leagues and 356 clubs in 1951. Attendance declined from 43,700,000 to 27,-500,000.

"Certainly it would be wiser for each major league to pursue a policy that would permit the minors to live," Trautman said.

Trautman asked "serious and favorable consideration" for the proposed new high-school rule that would permit baseball scouts to approach school boys on the same basis as agents of other sports.

Yanks Favored For Aussie Tennis Title

By GAYLE TALBOT

Melbourne, Australia, Dec. 5—(AP)—Australia's great tennis doubles experiment ended today with tennis fans as mystified as when it began.

Both the Aussies' scrub teams caught one-sided beatings in the semi-finals of the Victoria championships and both Frank Sedgman and Ken McGregor continued to look very unhappy with their strange partners.

Americans Ted Schroeder and his youthful naval trainee helper, Tony Trabert, slammed their way into Friday's final with straight set 6-3, 8-6, 7-5 win over McGregor and Mervyn Rose. Sedgman and Don Candy bowed to a pickup Aussie combination of Adrian Quist and Geoff Brown, 3-6, 6-4, 7-5, 7-5.

A joke going around the Kooyong club tonight announced Australia had found its Davis Cup combination in 38-year-old Quist and 28-year-old Brown, but some Aussie well wishers found it not so funny. They continued to contend that Sedgman and McGregor had missed valuable match play together whereas Schroeder and Trabert had built up their new-found confidence as they fattened on inferior competition.

In tomorrow's singles semi-finals Vic Seixas meets Sedgman and Dick Savitt plays McGregor. The two matches should come close to filling Kooyong Stadium to its capacity of 7,500. Seixas trimmed Sedgman in New South Wales championship in Sydney week before last. Savitt downed McGregor in last year's Wimbledon final.

Bilts Regain Junior A Top Slot, Galt Hawks Whip St. Michaels 8-3

(By The Canadian Press)

Those scrappy Guelph Biltmores just aren't to be outdone in the classy Ontario Hockey Association Junior A circuit. Last night they came through with a hard-fought 6-4 win over ninth-place Barrie Flyers to regain first place in the 10-team standings.

For the past two weeks it has been touch and go between the Bilts and Toronto Marlboros for first place. The Marlies held sway during the opening weeks of the campaign, but the Guelph Club has climbed into contention of late.

Last night it was their league-leading marksman, Ken Laufman, who gave them their winning edge by breaking a 2-2 second-period deadlock with a pair of goals while the Flyers were short-handed.

Greenshirts Win

In other junior tussels, Galt Black Hawks moved into a third-place tie with Toronto St. Michael's when they handed the Irish an 8-3 lacing at Galt. A late-game rush which netted St. Catharines Teepees three goals wasn't enough as Kitchener-Greenshirts beat them 4-3 at St. Catharines in the only other Junior game scheduled.

O.H.A. Senior A play saw Ed Stankiewicz, just back from a tryout with St. Louis Flyers of the American Hockey League, score three times to lead Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen to a 6-5 victory over Hamilton Tigers. The win moved the third-place Dutchmen to within four points of the runner-up Hamilton crew.

Up north the cellar-dwelling North Bay Black Hawks bumped to their eighth loss in 11 starts last night as they bowed 6-3 to Sudbury Miners in a Northern Ontario Hockey Association Sen-

Scotty Saunders led the Sudbury attack with two goals. Red McCarthy, Stan Smith, Ron Rubic and Vip Palladino scored singletons. Chick Cecchini, Boris Elik and Vic Jackson tallied for the losers.

At Guelph Ken Laufman rapped his two counters home to break a 2-2 second period tie when Barrie defenceman Dan O'Connor was resting in the penalty box on an interference offence. Other Guelph goal-getters were Harry Howell, Ron Murphy, Chuck Henderson and Lou Fontinato.

Chuck Wood, Dan O'Connor, Doug Mohns and Paul Emms tallied for the Flyers.

Pete Conacher led the Galt Black Hawks to their 8-3 win over St. Mike's with three goals while Ken Wharram scored twice and Art White, Neil McDonald and Tom Fyles scored singletons.

Braves Will Sacrifice Spahn To Bolster Porous Infield; Dodgers Eye Deal With Reds

By JOE REICHLER

Columbus, O., Dec. 5 (AP)—Fully aware they must revamp their porous infield if they are to figure in flag contention, the Boston Braves are resigned to taking the wraps off southpaw Warren Spahn, their No. 1 "untouchable," to plug their woefully weak shortstop position.

The Braves were prepared to deal Spahn, one of the best pitchers in baseball, to the Philadelphia Phillies for shortstop Granny Hamner and righthander Emory (Bubba) Church.

Spahn, 31, won 22 and lost 14 last season. Church, five years younger than Spahn, had a 14-11 record in his first full campaign. Promoted to a regular berth in June of 1950, the former Toronto righthander wound up with an 8-6 record. Hamner, regarded as one of the best shortstops in the National League, skidded a bit following a spectacular 1950 season, batting .255 in 150 games. A brilliant glove man, Hamner is only 24.

Dodgers Switch Tactics

The only hitch in the deal is that the Phils are demanding a replacement at shortstop and want the veteran Sibby Sisti, who can fill in at any infield position.

The Braves also have been negotiating with the Chicago Cubs for third baseman Ransom Jackson, one of the better young infielders in the circuit. The Cubs have asked for first baseman Earl Torgeson in return.

Brooklyn Dodgers, thwarted in their efforts to work out a big three-way deal involving Cincinnati, when the Phillies refused to substitute outfielder Del Ennis for catcher Andy Seminick in a deal for first baseman Gil Hodges, were on the verge of consummating a trade with the Reds.

President Gabe Paul of the Reds said he had offered righthander Howie Fox to the Dodgers for three young players, shortstop Rocky Bridges, outfielder Cal Abrams and catcher Steve Lembo. All three were utility men with the Dodgers last year.

St. Louis Cardinals have reopened negotiations with the Giants for Eddie Stanky. President Fred Saigh, who wants the scrappy second baseman to manage the Redbirds, has offered right-handed pitcher George (Red) Munger, veteran catcher Del Rice and centrefielder Chuck Diering for Stanky, infielder Jack Lohrke and catcher Sal Yvars. Durocher still says no.

The Chicago White Sox purchased Negro third baseman Hector Rodriguez from the Montreal Royals of the International League. Montreal is a farm of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Rodriguez, 31, batted .301 last season, led the loop in stolen bases and was voted the circuit's outstanding rookie. The White Sox turned over first baseman Rocky Nelson in addition to undisclosed cash.

Jap Fighter K.O's Champion

Honolulu, Dec. 5 — (AP) — Japanese flyweight champion Yoshio Shirai, 113, last night scored a technical knockout over world flyweight champion Dado Mariono, 115, of Honolulu in the seventh round of a scheduled ten-round non-title fight.

They meet in Tokyo in a championship bout next May.

Shirai floored Mariono six times before Dado's manager, Sad Sam Ichinose, leaped through the ropes, towel in hand, after one minute and 11 seconds of the seventh round. His fighter was flat on his back.

Shirai will be the first Japanese to battle for a world boxing crown.

Sport in Brief

(By The Canadian Press)

Defenceman Gus Mortson of the Toronto Maple Leafs said yesterday at Toronto that Sunday night's kicking incident in the National Hockey League game at Detroit started when Freddie Glover of Detroit Red Wings cross-checked him on the back of the neck.

"I dumped him on the ice and he lashed out at me with his skates," said Mortson. "It's a good thing I wore pads, because he connected. My first thought was to kick him right back. I'll admit I did swing, but I honestly did not touch him."

Jack Adams, Red Wings manager, made a statement to the press and sent a telegram to Clarence Campbell of Montreal, N.H.L. president. Conn Smythe, Leafs' general manager, said yesterday that Adams should have sent a wire to referee-in-chief Carl Voss instead.

Smythe added that, in any case, the matter of any further action still was up to Campbell.

If Joe Dimaggio quits—positively—New York Yankees will be in there pitching for Boston's Ted Williams. You could read between the lines yesterday as Yank general manager George Weiss dodged questions at a press conference in Columbus, Ohio.

Dimaggio was to fly to Phoenix, Ariz., to meet with co-owner Del Webb today and is scheduled to meet with co-owner Dan Topping and Weiss in New York next week. Out of this series of meetings will come his final word.

In Albany, Calif. racing at Golden Gate Fields today was called off when the jockeys refused to ride because of poor visibility caused by driving wind and rain. Bert Thomspon, western representative of the Jockey's Guild, presided over a meeting at which a great majority of the some 30 jockeys on hand voted not to ride.

Dama Don, owned and driven by Dr. Charles J. Fowler of Detroit, splashed his way to a double heat victory at Toronto Dufferin Park yesterday during a heavy rainstorm in the fifth and featured race, a classified trot.

The secondary feature was won in a straight heat by Miss Doris Van, owned by G. Barron of Brantford and handled by Gordon Kitchen.

At Johannesburg, South Africa, veteran tournament golfer Bobby Locke and his estranged wife initiated a separation suit here yesterday. Locke's record of 50,000 miles chasing golf competitions around the world for 15 years might have brought him a room full of trophy silverware but it played havoc with the family circle, his wife said in court. She said the marriage in 1943 was happy at first; but deteriorated because he spent so much time away from home.

At Auckland, N.Z., a $150,000 deal for the purchase of Mainbrace, champion New Zealand race horse, has been called off. A test by a veterinary yesterday disclosed the thoroughbred had a rippled muscle caused by racing on a heavy track. Jockey Johnny Longden had indicated he would purchase the horse for $150,000 for Max Bell, Canadian newspaper publisher.

At New Orleans, Fred Digby, general manager of the Sugar Bowl, said yesterday tickets for the Jan. 1 football classic will be marked for members of the "Caucasian race" as they have been in past years. There are 800 reserved seats for Negroes.

Under Louisiana law mixing of whites and Negoes is prohibited at sports events.

What is the Miracle of Canada?

The miracle of Canada is the reward of its thrifty people; it is a standard of living wrought by men and women who believe in spending and saving wisely. The average Canadian, for example, owns his own car and his own home. He pays his bills when due. His pattern of living is excellent.

When the pattern breaks

But unexpected emergencies do break the pattern. Usually the emergency requires more money than he has available. This can happen to anyone. Then help must come from a dependable outside service.

Stamps Blanked By Canucks 4-0

(By The Canadian Press)

Vancouver Canucks, who early in the season went 17 games without a win in the Pacific Coast Hockey League, are moving up slowly. They moved to within one point of the sixth-place Edmonton Flyers last night by blanking Calgary Stampeders 4-0 in Vancouver while Saskatoon Quakers and the Flyers battled to a 4-4 tie in Saskatoon.

Bill Hagen scored twice for Vancouver. Eric Unger and Garry Gordon tallied the Canucks' other goals.

Nel Strain, Cy Rouse, Chuck McCullough and Alex Kuzma were the Saskatoon scorers. Johnny Raynak scored twice for Edmonton and Pop Backor and Howie Cox once each.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, Dec. 5 — (AP) — Joey Maxim insisted on a shot at the heavyweight championship before he defended his light-heavy title . . . Ray Robinson, the middleweight champ, says he wants a shot at Maxim's crown . . . Welter boss Kid Gavilan talks about fighting middleweights; featherweight champ Sandy Saddler is casting eyes at the lightweight title and bantam champ Vic Toweel wants to take on featherweight. That seems to leave Jimmy Carter in a class by himself; he holds the lightweight championship and is glad to have it . . . Saddler and Carter are the ones most interested in this upgrading movement right now . . . Sandy makes his first start since his rough title bout with Willie Pep, which resulted in suspensions for both, in Madison Square Garden Friday night . . . His opponent will be Paddy Demarco, a lightweight contender and a guy who can be just as rough as Pep . . . Saddler argues that his own rugged tactics are just a form of self-defence . . . "Pep knows all the tricks; Demarco just has a rough style," he argues. "You have to fight their way to beat them." . . .

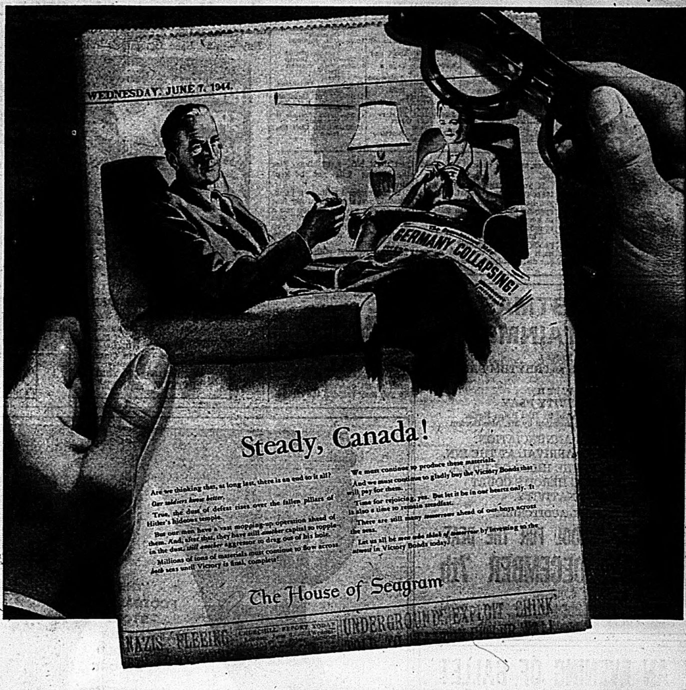
Quote, Unquote . . .

Rev. Laurence J. McGinley, S.J. (Fordham University president): "No one has the right to take four years out of a boy's life merely to make a football player out of him. There are some people who object to the military draft on the ground that it takes three years out of a boy's life. Yet, those same people will countenance a boy's playing football for four years at college and doing little else."

DROVE CAR ONTO TRACKS

Waterford, Ont., Dec. 5 — (CP) — John Hrynlewiecki had to stand back and watch while a train smashed his late-model car yesterday. Hrynlewiecki drove onto the tracks in a fog and was stuck. He and his friends pushed in vain until they heard the whistle of a train, then stood back.

John Derek is the "Saturday Hero" in the picture of the same name which opens at the Capitol Theatre tomorrow and showing through Saturday. The film has plenty of gridiron action showing a well-known pro team doing its stuff. The story is fast-moving and a blasting satire on commercialism in college football. Don't miss it.



Steady, Canada!

Are we thinking that, at long last, there is an end to it all?

Our soldiers know better.

True, the dust of defeat rises over the fallen pillars of Hitler's hideous temple.

But our men have a vast mopping-up operation ahead of them. And, after that, they have still another capital to topple in the dust, still another aggressor to drag out of his hole.

Millions of tons of materials must continue to flow across both seas until Victory is final, complete!

We must continue to produce these materials.

And we must continue to gladly buy the Victory Bonds that will pay for them.

Time for rejoicing, yes. But let it be in our hearts only. It is also a time to remain steadfast.

There are still many tomorrows ahead of our boys across the seas.

Let us all be men who think of tomorrow by investing to the utmost in Victory Bonds today.

The House of Seagram

Yesterday...Today...Tomorrow!

In the Fall of 1944, the message reproduced above appeared over the signature of The House of Seagram in newspapers and periodicals across the land.

Your response in the 1944 Victory Loan Campaign helped make possible Canada's triumph over democracy's foes . . . and helped, too, to assure a Canadian future which has grown bright and rich with promise.

This future is now ours to protect . . . against even more dangerous aggression abroad and inflation at home.

And this can best be done by our continued investment in the finest of all securities—Canada Savings Bonds on sale today and every day.

No one of us needs to be reminded of our stake in our country's future. We invested in Canada yesterday—we will invest in Canada today. You may still buy the Sixth Series of Canada Savings Bonds from your investment dealer or bank.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Bridge is not a guessing contest. You tell your partner what you have. He tells you what he has. You thus learn what you both have. Tell the truth to each other and you cut out any guessing.

If your partner doubles for a takeout, it is a signal. It tells you he has a hand as good as the opening bidder. It also tells you to keep the bidding alive for one round.

What happens after that depends on what signals you give each other. If the next opponent does not intervene with a bid, you must bid something. Else the bidding will not be kept alive.

If you respond without a jump, what do you signal? You say that you do not yet see enough for a game with what he has told you so far. Therefore, you may have anything from nothing to five tricks.

If you respond with a jump, you admit you see enough tricks for a game with what he has so far told you. So you promise five tricks or more, and tell him the bidding must not stop short of game.

Suppose an opponent intervenes with a bid after your partner doubles for a takeout. The bidding has thus been kept alive. So, you may pass unless you have tricks enough for a bid.

In a spot like that, how many tricks do you need for a bid? Your partner has said he has as good as an opening bid of one. So you may respond the same as you bid in answer to a bid of one.

In that case, your normal (non-jump) responding bid shows three tricks or more. But if you have five tricks or more, you may jump your bid in response. That is a signal not to stop short of game.

Suppose south starts with an opening of one diamond and your partner in the west doubles for a takeout. If north intervenes with a bid of one heart, jump to two spades with this east hand:

♠A K Q 6 4
♥6 5
♦7 4 3 2
♣4 2

The truth is often stranger than fiction to a partner. Maybe that is why so many players do not believe their partners.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Saturday's Hero"

One of the year's most important films—and one of the most entertaining — arrives for its first showing on the screen of the Capitol Theatre today in "Saturday's Hero," Sidney Buchman's new production for Columbia Pictures Starring John Derek and Donna Reed, "Saturday's Hero" is the story behind college football, a glamor-stripping low-down of the body-buying system of the bigtime schools and their "kept men" of the gridiron.

John Derek, the fastest-rising young star in Hollywood, has an entirely new and simply wonderful role at "Saturday's Hero." He plays a star high school athlete who wishes to climb above his family's station in life, and jumps at the chance to play football for an ivy-covered college.

Derek quickly discovers that he is only a "Saturday's Hero," cheered wildly one afternoon a week because of his spectacular football-playing, but otherwise shunned by his fraternity boys. Too, as a football-playing commodity, he isn't expected to try too hard for the education he so desperately desires.

He also discovers that he is being sponsored as an All-American player by a wealthy and overbearing alumnus, who is furthering his own political ambitions by building up his alma mater as a great football college. Also complicating Derek's life is a love affair. Derek and Donna Reed, niece of the alumnus, fall in love and plan to marry. Finally, Derek is seriously injured in a bruising game. Out of football forever, the boy must choose between remaining at college and returning to his home environment, and he is not sure whether or not he can plan his future to include Miss Reed.

U. S. Senator J. William Fulbright of Arkansas, former president of the University of Arkansas, has said of "Saturday's Hero" that it is "a graphic portrayal of shocking practices as I know them!"

John Derek performs magnificently. He is completely believeable at all times, in the football scenes as well as the tense dramatic moments. Donna Reed brings her dynamic qualities to full flower as the tempestuous niece of the illustrious alumnus, brilliantly portrayed on the screen with all his unpleasant inflections by Sidney Blackmer. Equally capable is Alexander Knox, who plays a sympathetic professor.

"Saturday's Hero" was written for the screen by Millard Lampell and Sidney Buchman. Their excellent, exciting script contains all the entertaining qualities of Lampell's own best-selling novel, "The Hero" which also was a powerful Cosmopolitan Magazine serial. David Miller directed this truly great movie, which was produced by Buddy Adler.

A Popeye color cartoon and a Grantland Rice Sportlight completes the entertaining bill.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

For Thursday, December 6

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—Suggest you accede to intelligent suggestions, good advice, this possibly none-too-attactive day. Avoid impulsive moves; keep to rational course and methods.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—Aim to co-operate; go along with good sensible activities, rather than get it alone and not be sure of your course. Creative ideas, new things in mind. Know your details before acting.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—Appropriate time to press well planned business or professional matters. Allow your imagination certain privilges. Make good use of talents always. Experiment within reason.

June 22 to July 23—(Cancer)—Aspects say, "accuracy, care" in new or unknown activities, or propositions you have in mind today. Meet issues as they come, don't anticipate or worry about what may happen.

July 24 to August 22—(Leo)—Excellent period for some well seasoned experiments. Try out new, modern methods thoroughly studied, planned. And meantime, play host to tolerance. Be charitable where it is needed.

August 23 to September 23—(Virgo)—Once in a while we are permitted to diverge to other fields, to measure from other angles. Estimate possible expansion wisely. Today offers a place for the unusual.

September 24 to October 23—(Libra)—The caution sign is out for most business and professional undertakings; and for personal affairs involving money. Keep pace in knowledge if not in ac-[illegible]. Don't lag.

October 24 to November 22—(Scorpio)—Keep abreast of what's going on around you while attending to your affairs. No time for personal isolation. Be extra careful in mechanical or industrial undertakings, kind to health.

November 23 to December 22—(Sagittarius)—Matters connected with home, personal, business affairs can advance with proper management. Many exhilarating and beneficial influences evident; pursue your affairs diligently.

December 23 to January 21—(Capricorn) — Be aware of your capability and practical, economical sense; use them expediently, you will achieve. Trades, labor, seamen, miners; strive a little harder for top gains.

January 22 to February 20—(Aquarius)— Attack your chores with brisker, sincere effort. May be rather dull day. Give your best for your employer, same as you do for yourself, reward will eventually come.

February 21 to March 20—(Pisces)—Similar indications to Aquarius today. A.M. may sem tricky but this can be overcome by sturdiness intelligent figuring. Be ready to curb action for sudden changes in prospects.

YOU BORN TODAY make excellent executives, with clear insight and ability to think, act concisely. May argue without thinking, at times be blunt in manner. We can make enemies by overfrankness, you know. You are fond of fun, good living, games of chance, and generally acquire considerable of the world's goods. Are prompt; become annoyed when others are not. Shrewd managers. Do very well in real estate, banking, brokerage; politics, law. Should master impatience, hasty speech. Seek higher education, religion. Don't strain health.

Birthdate: Warren Hastings, 1st gov., British India; Jos. L. Gay-Lussac, noted Fr. chemist.

The Outsiders

By Jane Abbott

"Cameron's away. Smead took him to Cranford to catch a plane last Sunday. How'd it be if I went up there and tore the thing up?"

She let her head drop back against the pillow. "Oh, will you, please? I was—silly to write it! But he'd told me I was selfish—and it—it isn't selfish to take your own life."

John sat down on the edge of the bed. He was still holding her hand. "There's where you're wrong, Jeremy. It's probably as big a show of selfishness as anyone can make!" He hesitated, some embarrassment in his face. "I had the idea of it, myself, once. Someone made me see it wasn't such a big and brave thing to do. And since —well, I've found that what I was planning to get away from isn't as impossible a situation as I thought it was. I guess it's like that with most of the things we think we can't take. We find, if we try, that we can."

He got to his feet, patted her hand where he had laid it on the bedcover. "Nobody but myself knows what really happened, Jeremy, and you can trust me not to say a word of it to anyone. I'm going to give you something that will make you sleep and when you wake up life's going to look better."

Mrs. Abel came in with the tea.

"A good hot meal when Miss Penny wakes up," directed John. "I'll stop in this evening."

He smiled down at Jeremy who was taking little sips of her tea thirstily. "Feel better?"

"Yes, thanks." Her eyes, meeting his, said much more.

He drove from the Abel house to the Notch to destroy the letter. He wished Chris Cameron was there. He'd have something to suggest for Jeremy's cure.

He saw the envelope where Jeremy had left it, took it up and tore it into small pieces, then dropped them in the fire place and put a match to them. Jeremy had looked relieved when he'd said he'd destroy it, which, he reflected, was a sign to the good.

His glance came last to the colored print over the mantel and, for a startling instant, saw Chris there in the Christ figure. He gave his head a quick shake, looked again, hard at it. Not the slightest resemblance to be sure.

But he could not shake off that moment's impression. It went with him as he drove back to the valley.

John told Marilyn that Jeremy had had a slight nervous collapse. That she would be all right in a few days.

"Maybe if I'd gone over there when you asked me. . ." Marilyn said it remorsefully.

"I was a little late in suggesting it, Lyn." He spoke gently; it was somehow easier now to be gentle with Marilyn.

John returned to the problem of Jeremy a little abruptly. "Thing is to get her out of that room—it isn't much bigger than a cell and pretty drab."

She did not say, as he half expected, that it was drabber than Jeremy, herself, and he went on, "you help me think of how we can get her away from there."

He had forgotten that they were to ask nothing of each other.

But the matter of moving Jeremy did not trouble him long. As they were finishing supper, Marilyn, passing the window, on her way to the icebox, exclaimed, "look at the grand car! Whose is it? John, it's stopping here! There's a man and a woman getting out! They don't look sick!"

"You're doctor John Streeter?" asked the man at the door.

"Yes."

'I'm Ronald Penny. I had a letter from a Christopher Cameron— he lives here, I take it, though his letter was from Indianapolis. He made it quite imperative that I come up here and see my sister. But he told me to find you and talk to you first. Tell me, is she ill?"

His face, strained at the moment, with anxiety, was much like Jeremy's, finely molded and thin and sensitive.

"If you'll come into my office. . ."

The young woman with him spoke. "I'll stay here with Mrs. Streeter while you two talk."

The two men came out from the office. Ronald said to his wife, "we're going to drive along to where Jeremy's living."

"I'll wait for you here."

John saw a look of complete understanding pass between them.

"That where the kid's been teaching?" Ronald Penny asked of the schoolhouse as they passed it. "I should have come a long time ago. Zhanya has told me I ought to, a lot of times. But I thought any day Jeremy'd snap out of her peeve. She walked out, you know, when I married Zhanya."

John went ahead into Jeremy's room. She was siting up in bed, a tray on her knees, a little color in her face.

"Sleep?"

"Oh, yes. Until a half-hour ago."

"I've brought someone I think you'll be glad to see. . ."

She drew back into the pillows. "Not—not Mr. Cameron."

"No. Your brother."

"Ronald!" Her face went white. No, no. . ."

Ronald Penny came up to the bed. "What's the idea, Sis, of a greeting like that?" He took her two hands, gripped them. Zhanya and I have been driving since six o'clock this morning to get here. We figured school term would be most over and we'd pick you up and the three of us go on up to the Saguenay. We got the idea suddenly and there wasn't time to write. Now tell me I'm the person you'd most like to see and that you'll be packed and ready to push out with us, in a day or so. . ."

Jeremy's eyes, on their gripped hands while her brother was talking, lifted and went in agonized questioning to John. In answer John put one finger to his lips as a sign that he had kept his promise.

"Good morning!" Chris Cameron addressed it to Pete Smead, behind the letter boxes.

Pete swung around. "You're back here, eh?"

"Yes. I taxied over from Cranford late last evening. Any mail?

Pete produced a bundle of mail.

Chris took it. "What's happened that the mill is closed?"

Chris sat down. Pete Smead shifted his wad of tobacco in his mouth. "The men had a meetin' other night. Loren Matthews stood up and said for 'em all that not a one of 'em'd work unless the Forrestal girl fired that manager of hers. And she up and said she wouldn't. Said it spunky enough, and then she walked out of meetin' but the men walked out of the mill next morning. . ."

"So it's a deadlock," observed Chris, frowning.

"Not a bit of it! There's more. Culbert had a bill of sale most signed when the girl up and balked on it. Said she wouldn't sell. She called a meetin' of the men! At the meeting house. She had Jesse ring the bell same as he always does and they all went. Meetin' house was packed. That lawyer of old Elisha's was there —he'd come up from Cranford. He spoke for the girl. He told the men Culbert had resigned, that he was out of the valley. Then he told them of the Bendley fellows wantin' to buy the valley and the girl refusin'. You could of heard the clapping up at your place, if you'd been there. And then the lawyer told 'em the mill was goin' open again under a new plan of management A committee to advise, the lawyer said. And there's talk that Loren's goin' to be put in Culbert's place."

Chris said, "things certainly have been happening," and got up from the stool.

"Wait boy! That ain't all! Last week the little schoolma-am was taken sick. Mary Abel thought she was dyin' and sent Tommie for the doc. . ."

Chris sat down again abruptly. "What was the matter?"

"Near as I know a sort of c'lapse. She's not much more'n skin and bones, anyway, and mebbe those kids, day in and day out, had wore her down. But doc brought her to. And that evenin' a brother of hers come —a writin' chap. His wife along with him. They stayed at Annie Wilson's, three, four days—then they went along somewheres and the Penny girl with 'em. And Dave's home again; his hand as good as it ever was."

Chris laughed, drew his hand over his forehead. "Anything more?"

"Ain't that enough? Hope the news that took you out wasn't as bad as you thought 'twas."

"My uncle was very ill. But he pulled through and with good care he should live for some time longer."

Embarrassment suddenly altered the postmaster's manner of importance. "I've got to own up something to you, Cameron. That letter you give me for Miss Forrestal—I put it in my pocket, remember? Well, 'twas my Sunday suit and I clean forgot it was there 'til yesterday when I stuck my hand in and there 'twas. I figured you'd be comin' any day and I'd hold it. Here 'tis!" Pete drew it from a pigeonhole and handed it over to Chris. "Hope 'twasn't important."

"It was and it wasn't," said Chris. He put it in his own pocket.

He bought tobacco, a loaf of bread and eggs and walked out of the store whistling. It was good to be back in the valley.

He slowed his step as he came abreast the meeting house, picturing the meetings Pete Smead had described to him. He wished keenly he'd been at both, to hear Eliza speak, "spunky." Eliza belonged now. She had proven her right when she refused to sell the mill and the valley. Something had come to her, Pete had said.

Churchill Says Danger of War Less Than in '48

Government Will Proceed With Rearmament Effort

London, Dec. 6. (AP)—Prime Minister Winston Churchill disclosed today his government has given in hope of fulfilling Britain's three-year, £4,700,000,000 arms program on schedule.

At the same time, he told the House of Commons, he thinks there is less danger of a Third World War now than at any time since the Berlin Airlift crisis in 1948.

Churchill declined to say how much Britain would fall short of meeting its rearmament targets, but said it would be unable to spend on time even the £1,250,000,000 budgeted for the armed services during the current year.

In a speech that opened a debate on the defence policies of the new Conservative government, Churchill credited the United States, Britain and other nations of the free western world with creating "deterrents against aggression" that have lessened the danger of world conflict.

He said it was his government's feeling that, as the deterrents have increased, "the danger (of war) has become more unlikely."

Churchill declared it is the "desire and intention" of the Conservative government to proceed as quickly as possible with the rearmament effort begun by the previous labor regime.

Churchill, who is also minister of Defence, said British military men are worried over "the slow progress made in developing the Royal Air Force, especially in the supply of the latest machines." He added:

"We must not forget that the Soviet Air Force is formidable, not only in numbers but in quality."

Churchill and Clement Attlee, former Labor prime minister, clashed sharply over Churchill's assertion that the Labor government by a 1948 agreement had permitted the United States air force to set up bases here for using atom bombs against Russia "should the Soviet become aggressors."

Churchill said the step taken by Attlee "places us in the front line should there be a third world war."

Attlee protested that it was "never suggested" that the U.S. air bases here should be used for delivering atom bombs to Russia. But Churchill snapped back:

"That it the impression which, however mistakenly, they seem to have derived."

Attlee cautioned Churchill to "be careful on this", adding "we had conversations and the Americans have no illusions whatever as regards our position in this matter."

Churchill took up the matter of a European army—a sore point in reltations between U.S., France and Britain. The prime minister said Britons "must be agreed that there should be a European army and that Germany must take an honorable place in it." But he added:

Bombers Return From Historic Training Flight

Fort Worth, Tex., Dec. 6 (AP)—Six B-36 bombers of the United States strategic air command—the kind that could carry an atomic bomb 1,000 miles—returned today from an historic training flight to Africa.

They landed at one of the brand-new American air bases there. It is one of several super-secret airfields being built around the world for global defence.

Maj. L. A. Proulx, intelligence officer of Southbridge, Mass., said it was the first time flights other than local ones had landed at the Sidi Slimane, French Morocco field.

The planes flew non-stop to Sidi Slimane, French Morocco, and non-stop to their home field, Carswell air force base. Distance one way is 4,984 miles.

Costly to Keep Liquor Around

Whitby, Ont., Dec. 6 (AP) — The way it worked out, Lyle Jones was fined $100 because he didn't drink 15 bottles of whisky.

He told the court he bought the whisky 25 years ago for his wedding. At that time, under the old Ontario Temperance Act, it was impossible to buy liquor legally in the province.

The act was repealed years ago, but the Jones whisky— still illegal because he hadn't bought it on a liquor permit—gathered dust until provincial police seized it at his motel.

Three More TCA Pilots Suspended

Winnipeg, Dec. 6—(CP)—Three more Trans-Canada Air Lines pilots have been suspended in the dispute over carrying passengers in flight compartments of aircraft, A. R. Eddy, executive vice-president of the Canadian Air Lines Pilots' Association, said yesterday. The association hinted "drastic action" might be taken.

The pilots' organization recently issued a "safety" directive asking pilots not to permit unauthorized passengers in flight compartments, and the suspensions allegedly followed observance of the directive.

Saturday, the C.A.L.P.A. sent the dispute to R. Dodds, civil aviation controller with the department of transport in Ottawa. He wired the Association the matter was "under discussion."

Yesterday, Charles R. Robinson, president of the Association, sent another wire to Mr. Dodds. It read:

"Since writing you re carrying of passengers in flight compartments, eight pilots have been suspended for adhering to C.A.L.P.A. safety directive and number mounting. Your ruling is urgently required to obviate further reprisals by company and drastic action by association."

Asked if by "drastic action" he meant a strike of pilots, Mr. Eddy said:

"It's pretty obvious what is meant. We must protect our members."

POLISH PROGRAMS JAMMED

Scottish Girl Cannot Keep Awake After Undergoing Hypnotic Spell

London, Dec. 6. (Reuters)—The House of Commons is going to discuss hypnosis because a young Scottish girl cannot keep awake.

Somerville Hastings, Labor member and a doctor, was given notice that he will raise after the Christmas recess the demonstration of "hypnotic phenomena for purposes of public entertainment" and urge that it be declared illegal. No details of the measures he proposes have been published.

The girl in a trance is Mary Proctor, 14, of Airdrie, Lanarkshire. Four weeks ago she attended a stage display of hypnosis by a man with staring eyes and a lullaby voice, John Barrington.

She responded to his invitation to mount the stage and be serenaded to sleep. He sang "Dreamer's Holiday" and she and two companions slipped into dreamland.

They awakened and went home —and then found themselves repeatedly falling off to sleep.

Barrington was summoned by the anxious parents.

He cured two of the girls but Mary resisted his will. Eventually she was taken to hospital.

She is still there tonight—still lapsing into trances, sometimes lasting three hours, with the tune and words of "Dreamer's Holiday" beating in her mind.

Barrington said he had hypnotized thousands of people without harm.

"What the girl needs, I think, is a psychological kick in the pants," he told Reuters.

SLAIN GUNMAN IDENTIFIED BY TATTOO MARK

Thomas Danek Captured By Germans at Dieppe

Toronto, Dec. 6 (CP) — A regimental crest tattooed on a left thumb has led to the identification of a gunman slain Tuesday night during a drugstore holdup as Thomas Danek, 34, of Windsor, Ont.

As soon as the dead bandit's identity was established last night, police started to check his acquaintances for clues that might lead to the capture of his accomplice, who fled after a gun battle with Constable Richard Deadman in the drugstore.

Squads of detectives combed hotels and roominghouses in an effort to find the place where the two bandits stayed before the holdup. Police expressed belief the second man still was hiding somewhere in the city and would probably elect to shoot it out if cornered.

Led to Recognition

Publication of a newspaper photograph of the tattoo on Danek's thumb led to its recognition as the crest of the Essex Scottish Regiment of Windsor. A former soldier with a similar marking on his own thumb told police he and Danek had the tattooing done before the Dieppe raid in August, 1942.

Danek was one of the members of the Essex Scottish captured by the Germans at Dieppe. He escaped from a prison camp in Germany and made his way into Russia. He was repatriated in March, 1945.

Two other ex-soldiers confirmed the identification. Then a west end resident said Danek had boarded at his home for the last four months and had called himself "Thomas Kendall."

Avowed Communist

In Windsor, police revealed further details about the dark-haired hazel-eyed Danek. They said he served as a youthful volunteer in the Spanish Civil War. He bore a scar from a war wound on his left arm. He was involved in a boarding - house shooting scrape in Hamilton a year or two ago.

A Windsor man who served with him in the Essex Scottish described him as "a bad chap with a good service record and an avowed communist."

Meanwhile, Constable Deadman was reported in "fairly good" condition in hospital. Examination of five slugs removed from his body yesterday showed that both Danek and his tall, good-looking companion had fired and hit the officer. Two slugs hit Constable Deadman's left thigh, shattering the bone so badly that doctors say he may be permanently crippled.

FLOOD MAKES MANY FLEE

Rome, Dec. 6 — (Reuters) The interior ministry announced last night that 217,640 people had been forced to flee their homes by floods in the Po valley last month.

Liberals of Parliament Hill Throw Party for Their Chief, Louis St. Laurent and Wife

Ottawa, Dec. 6. (CP)—The Liberals of Parliament Hill threw a family party last night to pay court to their chief and his lady —Rt. Hon. Louis St. Laurent and Mrs. St. Laurent.

Liberal senators and Liberal members of parliament, many with their wives, gathered in the spacious parliamentary restaurant for a complimentary dinner to mark the 10th anniversary of Mr. St. Laurent's entry into the government.

It was a warm, happy family gathering dedicated to honoring the man who came on the Canadian political scent in wartime 1941 as a reluctant unknown, went on to win the Liberal leadership and the prime ministership in 1948 and then led his party in the 1949 general election to the greatest victory in Canada's political history.

Some speeches were made—not too many—and many nice things were said, and the party gave Mr. and Mrs. St. Laurent a painting of a Quebec winter scene, done by Frederick Simpson Coburn of Upper Melbourne, Que., just 35 miles from the Prime Minister's birthplace of Compton, Quebec.

To Mrs. St. Laurent, in addition went the traditional bouquet of red roses.

Party stalwarts spoke of the "sacrifices" Mr. St. Laurent had made in going into the government in 1941, but the 69-year-old Prime Minister told them he did not think the use of the word "sacrifice" was jusified.

Felt No Sacrifice

He felt it was "no sacrifice to belong to the kind of organization we have in this country."

The Canadian people were one big happy family and it was not hard to like the Canadian people because "we are a likeable people."

Hon. C. G. (Chubby) Power, dean of the Commons who contested the leadership with Mr. St. Laurent in the 1948 Liberal convention, served as chairman while Agriculture Minister Gardiner, the third candidate in that contest, offered the toast and made the presentation.

Mr. Power told how Mr. St. Laurent entered the Cabinet in December, 1941, as justice minister, succeeding a great Liberal stalwart from Quebec, the late Rt. Hon. Ernest Lapointe. Mr. St. Laurent had "sacrificed" his private interests, including incidentally, the largest law practice before the bar of Quebec.

Mr. Gardiner said no one ever had been taken into the Cabinet "who more rapidly grasped all the ideas necessary to giving the highest service to his country."

Some said Mr. St. Laurent did not have the experience necessary to lead a political party.

"But," said Mr. Gardiner, "I am quite sure we have a leader who can get elected just as long as he wants to stay with us—and the longer he stays with us the better."

Price Support for Butter, Eggs and Bacon in 1952 May be Continued by Govt.

Ottawa, Dec. 6 — (CP) — The federal government may continue its price support for eggs, butter and bacon in 1952.

The possibility was suggested yesterday by Agricultural Minister Gardiner at the windup of a two-day federal-provincial agricultural conference.

At the same time he said British Columbia and Nova Scotia no longer will get special consideration to cover losses on their apple and potato crops. Any federal assistance forthcoming in future for these crops would go to all provinces.

Mr. Gardiner discussed national agricultural policy in a two-hour speech.

Replying to a demand from the conference floor for price support on agricultural products, he said an announcement of government policy is to be made shortly. There had been no announcement saying that price support was not going to be granted.

The minister said, however, he does not believe there has been a strong case made for increases on the government's floor prices for butter, bacon, eggs or cheese. Market prices were well above the price-support level.

Wants Price Raised

W. R. Robertson, Deputy Minister of Agriculture for British Columbia, suggested the price support for eggs be raised to 42 cents a dozen from the government's present floor price of 38 cents for grade 'A' large eggs.

W. J. Parker of Winnipeg, vice-president of the 400,000-member Canadian Federation of Agriculture, said the floor should not be less than 38 cents but if it could be more "as much the better."

Mr. Gardiner said egg producers this year received an average price of 46.6 cents a dozen compared with 34 cents last year. Egg prices may be declining but if anything is to be emphasized it is the 12-cent-a-dozen increase the producer got, not the price drop, he said.

Mr. Gardiner told the conference the question of continuing the federal subsidy on the movement of feed grains from the prairies now is up for cabinet consideration. An announcement would be made "very shortly."

THIEVES BURN MONEY

Modena, Italy, Dec. 6 — (Reuters) — Thieves last night cut through a safe in the bank here with acetylene torches only to discover they had also burned 1,000,000 lire (about $1,600) in banknotes. They escaped empty-handed.

Police Carry Out Four Raids On Private Homes

Montreal, Dec. 6. (CP)—City and provincial police last night carried out four raids on private homes and seized books, pamphlets and reports described as "communist literature". No arrest was made.

Police said the raids culminated 4 1-2 years of udercover work by the 19-year-old son of Detective-Lieut. John Boyzcum, second in command of the Montreal anti-subversive squad.

The raid, police said, struck at the core of the young communist organization in the city and with confidential reports seized, "we know who will be "future leaders" of communist elements here.

The raids, carried out under Quebec's padlock law, were at the homes of Miss Claire Benzby, 19, described as a leader of the national Federation of Labor Youth and the United Jewish People's organization—both communist organizations—Miss Ann Lash, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Peretez and Sidney Markman.

Boyzcum's son, Maurice, had become a member of the young communist organizations to do undercover work for his father.

Last week, Benoit said, young Boyzcum realized his work was finished when he was paraded before communist leaders and banned from attendance at meetings and any further activities amid the ranks of the organization.

SEAWAY PROJECT HAS TOP PRIORITY IN PARLIAMENT

Sittings Expected To End Dec. 15th

Ottawa, Dec. 6 (CP) —Legislation dealing with the St. Lawrence seaway project has top priority in these final days of parliamentary sittings, expected to end about Dec. 15.

With the Canadian government pushing for swift legislative action on the seaway, the Commons today will deal with that topic. Yesterday was devoted to the long drawn Throne Speech debate.

Works Minister Fournier House leader, said yesterday that on Friday the government will be ready to go ahead with another seaway bill, authorizing the creation of an "authority" to build and operate the navigation facilities of the seaway for Canada.

This measure has been before the House for a few weeks. The Federal-Ontario seaway power agreement was signed only Monday. Both are in line with the government's announced intention of going ahead alone with the project unless the U.S. federal government joins in shortly.

Steer Off Motion

Meanwhile, the Commons yesterday engaged in a procedural tangle over the sessional Throne-Speech debate and non-confidence motions in the government that have stemmed from it.

The Liberal majority in the house steered off a C.C.F. non-confidence motion. This motion had expressed regret that the government had not aranged for an immediate payment of 75 per cent of the value of grain stored on farms because it could not be transported to elevators.

The members were excluded from voting on that question by a sub-amendment tacked on by A. J. Bater (L.—The Battlefords), which eliminated most of the words of the C.C.F. motion and substituted commendation of the government for its attention to western problems.

The Liberal motion carried by a vote of 148 to 41, with the Liberals winning over the combined opposition parties.

Old-timers on Parliament Hill said they had no recollection of such a move before—the government tacking on an amendment to the address in reply to the speech from the throne.

Stanley Knowles (CCF—Winnipeg North Centre), in querying the validity of the Liberal amendment in the house, said it has been generally accepted that any amendment to the address in reply constitutes a want-of-confidence motion, which calls for the resignation of the government.

The Commons still must vote on the C.C.F. amendment as amended by the change proposed by Mr. Bater. This vote will come later in the debate and probably will be preceded by a vote on a new Progressive Conservative non-confidence motion.

Communist-Led Students, Police Battle in Streets

200 Injured as Police Use Tear Gas and Clubs

By PHILIP CLARKE

Tehran, Iran, Dec. 6—(AP)—At least three persons were killed and more than 200 injured today in a five-hour battle between 5,000 communists and 2,000 police and troops backed up by angry mobs of nationalists.

It was the bloodiest violence in Tehran since June, when riots resulted in more than 20 dead.

Police and troops gained control of the situation early this afternoon after using tear gas, fire hoses, rifle butts and clubs. At least two rioters were wounded by police gunfire.

Many of the injured were reported in serious condition.

An estimated 5,000 pro-communist students started the heaviest rioting when they marched on the Majlis (parliament) shortly after dawn, in defiance of a government ban on demonstrations.

Nationalists who support Premier Mohammed Mossadegh spilled into the streets and engaged in bloody conflict wherever they met the reds, who shouted "death to Mossadegh" and fought with clubs, stones and fists.

What started as a communist show of force against Mossadegh's government turned into a bloody red defeat.

Burned Headquarters

Yelling mobs of nationalists smashed and burned communist peace headquarters, raided pro-communist newspapers and a theatre, and dumped bushels of propaganda books and leaflets into the streets.

Veteran observers believed the nationalists were taking advantage of the riotous situation to wipe out known centres of the outlawed communist Tudeh Party.

Police swung clubs and rifle butts in every direction. Once they quit firing into the air and levelled a volley at a mob of red attackers.

Tons of water sprayed on the rioters from a score of fire trucks. Police jeeps and ambulances raced through the crowded streets.

More than 120 rioters were arrested.

Premier Mohammed Mossadegh's government had warned earlier that force would be used to back the ban against the demonstration today by Tehran university students, called by the communist Tudeh Party.

Fighting started today when communist-led students tried to smash through a police blockade ringing the university. They were trying to join communists inside the university grounds.

Red leaders were reported to have engineered the demonstration in hopes of forcing authorities into the unpopular position of again closing down Tehran University. The government did that several weeks ago but reopened the school after widespread popular clamor.

Atomic Bombs Now Small Enough For Carriers to Launch Attacks

Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 6 (AP) — Admiral William Fechteler said today that atomic bombs now are small enough and light enough for carriers to launch a multi-bomb attack from any place on the world's oceans at targets up to 600 miles away.

At the same time, the chief of United States naval operations suggested conversion of ships, currently not in use, to various types of guided missile-launching ships.

Fechteler discussed the present and future roles of the navy in atomic age warfare in an address perpared for a meeting of the Navy League here.

He said "our new and modernized carriers are capable of delivering the atomic bomb.

"The usefulness of carriers in delivering the atomic bomb increases as the bomb becomes smaller and lighter. This means that the navy has the capability of delivering an atomic bomb, or many atomic bombs, from anywhere on the earth's surface target within the radius of action of carried-based planes—a distance of [illegible] 600 miles. . ."

The admiral said the cost of the reserve fleet is between $40,000,000,000 and $50,000,000,000, "an investment which has been bought and paid for and is readily available. A few of these ships are being converted for use as launching platforms for guided missiles."

He added:

"In view of the large and continually mounting costs of delivering the atomic weapon at its target, the paid-up investment in the reserve fleet suggests a means of reducing the costs of delivering atomic weapons by conversions of ships of all types to guided missile ships."

Company, Union Officials Meet To Settle Strike

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 6 (CP)—Representatives of Ford of Canada and of the United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.) meet today to discuss the dismissal last Thursday of 26 automotive workers, a major issue in a strike that started Monday.

A membership meeting of the union's Local 200 asked the negotiating committee to try to arrange for the talks.

The 26 men were fired on charges that they helped inspire an unauthorized walkout in protest against delays in receiving a conciliation board rport.

Since then, the report has been handed down. One of its recommendations is for a general pay increase of eight cents an hour, retroactive to June 1, plus a five-cent-an-hour cost-of-living allowance increase. The union has been asking for a 30-cent-an-hour "package" increase on the basic Ford rate of $1.32 an hour.

Meanwhile, approximately 12,000 Ford workers are idle.

HITS REARMAMENT PROGRAM

Brussels, Belgium, Dec. 6 (AP) —Jean Van Houtte, Belgian minister of finance, told parliament yesterday that Belgium cannot rearm further. He said the supplementary arms effort asked of Belgium "would be in opposition to the principles of the Atlantic Pact, which says rearmament should not endanger economic recovery." He said Belgium is spending 26 per cent of its budget on defence.

Grand Jury Praises Hastings County Home

"The new Hastings County home for the aged is a building of which the county can be proud. It is a beautiful building and maintained in a most cleanly manner."

Such is the report of the Grand Jury submitted Tuesday at the conclusion of their duties at the General Sessions of the Peace and County Court before His Honor Judge J. C. Anderson.

In addition to commendation on the new county home the Grand Jury noted that the "housekeeping" at the court house and jail was especially good. They felt that fewer court houses and jails were kept in a more cleanly or neat condition.

The report recommended however that certain items of maintenance be carried out as soon as possible to avoid a heavy expense at a later date.

The recommendations included painting of the stonework on the exterior of the court house building and repair of chimneys. Also the slate covering on the roof was in need of repairs and eavetroughs should be replaced and external woodwork should be repaired and painted.

Wooden columns and canopy at the main entrance should be completely removed or thoroughly repaired, and steps leading to the court house from the registry office were in need of repair.

The court house heating plant should be replaced and thermostatic controls for public rooms and offices.

New furniture was generally required throughout the building and furniture in the court room, including the jury benches, should be replaced.

The judge's chambers should be completely refurnished.

Added fire protection was needed for the court house building and grounds and driveways were in need of repair in places.

New eavetroughs were needed at the Shire Hall. Drinking fountains were needed at the registry office.

Cheese Exhibited Best Finished At Any Show in East Canada Says Associate Grading Chief

Ontario cheese makers can hold their heads high with justifiable pride following an announcement made yesterday at the afternoon session of the Eastern Ontario Cheese Makers' Association convention at the Hotel Quinte.

The cheese exhibited by them in the British Empire Cheese Exhibition operated in conjunction with the convention are the best finished of any show in eastern Canada they were told.

The announcement was made in an address given by D. M. Beattie, associate chief, Grading and Inspection Services, Dairy Products Division, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Mr. Beattie said, "In general I would say that the Ontario cheese in this particular show are the best finished which I have seen at any show in eastern Canada and this observation is based on attending cheese shows over a good many years."

Mr. Beattie paid tribute to Messrs David Dean, Delta, Ont., who produced the "champion" cheese and T. S. Aichen, Belton, Ont., overall winner with five firsts and two seconds. Mr. Dean won the two firsts.

Production Low

Production of cheddar cheese in 1951 will be the lowest of any year in the century, the speaker declared. Based on nine months production figures, it is estimated the cheese output in the two principal producing provinces, Ontario and Quebec will decline 10 per cent and 17 per cent respectively. Favorable weather in October and part of November may cause some changes in the estimate.

Cheese quality was barely maintained in Canada in 1951, an increase of 0.16 per cent in first grade cheese being noted. There was an overall increase of one per cent in high scoring cheese during the year.

Mr. Beattie dwelt at some length on the matter of complaints received from purchasers of cheese on the presence of "foreign material" therein.

Pins and Tacks Found

Pins and tacks have been found with an occasional bristle from the type of broom used in sweeping factories. The most common among the foreign objects are nuts, bolts, washers or parts of these which come from the milling machine, due likely to vibration. On one occasion a whole glass cup was found embedded in a cheddar cheese. A gold watch was found in another.

Mr. Beattie urged the use of squeegees instead of the bristle type brooms; metal thermometers instead of glass ones, and suggested that pockets on the breasts of shirts be securely fastened.

Handlers of food too often forget they are dealing with an edible product which someone is going to eat, Mr. Beattie said.

"If they become so callous to the well-being of the prospective consumers, or are too careless in their manner operating a food-producing plant, they had better leave their employment before they or a distributor of their product are faced with a substantial claim for damages.

Removed by Cutters

Minimum of heavy claims is due to the fact that a lot of foreign material is observed and removed by cutters.

Speaking of the new style block or square cheddar cheese, Mr. Beattie said the manufacture of this type is going on in a large scale in Ontario and Quebec. "From comments heard generally," he said, "this type is here to stay. It has definite advantages over the cylindrical cheese first made in this country."

These advantages include a very desirable block weighing 1-2 or one pound, with no waste in cutting; absence of rind or mould and full weight in each block.

Those interested in the cheese industry are watching with interest the development of these packages. Some retailers prefer the former wedge-cut since some customers refuse to believe the square package is real cheddar.

Council Will Petition Govt. For Annual Test of Cattle To Have Accredited Area

Hastings county council Wednesday concurred in a resolution to petition the Ontario government for an annual test of cattle to make the county an accredited area.

It was pointed out that the county was now a restricted area and would become an accredited area after three tests had been completed but shortage of veterinaries to do the work was expected to hold up the work. Warden H. Coulter said in some instances an area could be given an accredited rating after two tests.

Before concurrence in the resolution the matter was the topic of considerable discussion with members pointing out the various aspects of the test. Reeve C. Ketcheson of Thurlow, however, stressed the importance of yearly tests if tuberculosis was to be kept out of cattle herds.

No Action Taken

No action was taken on an Ontario county resolution which would call upon Ontario government to assume 100 per cent of the cost of public school education.

It was generally agreed that educational costs were a heavy burden on the property owner under the present system with Reeve T. Tryon of Bancroft saying this amounted to close to 50 per cent of the tax roll in his municipality. Councillors steered away from any action which might take away the privileges of the municipality and recommended "no action".

Council concurred in a Peel county resolution aimed at preventing reduction of school grants in municipalities where a reassessment had increased the assessment.

Concur in Resolution

Councillors also concurred in a resolution from the united counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry calling for heavier penalties for cattle rustlers and asking provincial police be directed to give more attention to rustling activities.

Despite a recommendation on the part of Honorable W. A. Goodfellow, Ontario Minister of Health, that the new county home for the aged be called "Quinte Lodge", council members decided to retain the name "Hastings County Home."

Since the name "Quinte Lodge" had been suggested by Mr. Goodfellow, due to publicity the name had already caught on with the public. However, councillors were desirous of retaining the county name in connection with the institution.

Various names were suggested before Reeve Tryon added a touch of humor to the proceedings with the comment that mothers must have a hard job maning their children. "Here we have only one baby and we canhot decide", he said.

Report Given

The agriculture and reforestation committee report was given by committee chairman Reeve Carman Kleinsteuber of Elzevir township. Mr. Kleinsteuber referred to the county woodlot competition which had been sponsored during the year and also to the school forestry competitions. He said 30,000 young trees had been planted in the county's two forest lots at Actinolite and Bird's Creek.

The report also indicated that $1,200 had been spent by the county in weed control. Reeve Ross Neal of Deseronto called for more action in the control of weeds, however, while Reeve Buskard came to the support of weeds by saying they help to maintain the water level.

Has Healthy Respect

"I have a healthy respect for weeds," he said. "They help to hold back the water and maintain the water level and are much better than bare sand."

Reeve Anderson of Faraday had the same idea who said that a lot of sand in his area would be better covered with weeds. "I would like to see something growing on it," he said.

"The trouble is that weeds blow as well as the sand," was the rejoiner from Deputy Reeve Leslie McLaren of Tyendinaga.

The usual grants of $75 for snow removal to northern townships were recommended and turned over to ways and means for disposition. Grants of $15 each to Women's Institute districts in North Hastings, East Hastings and West Hastings were approved.

Under special orders council granted Reeve Harold Wells of Stirling authority to erect a sign at West Huntingdon directing attention to the scenic route through his village to No. 2 highway at Trenton.

Marmora Man Is Acquitted On HTA Charge

Carl Simpson, Marmora, was acquitted of a charge of dangerous driving Wednesday when the petit jury returned a verdict of not guilty. The case was being heard before His Honor Judge J. C. Anderson at the General Sessions of the Peace.

Simpson was charged with dangerous driving in connection with the death of John McCracken, aged Marmora district resident, who was killed last July when struck by Simpson's truck as he was walking on the highway. Simpson was defended by W. J. A. Fair, of Peterborough.

Stanley Parks of Cooper was found guilty of assault and was remanded until Tuesday for sentence. The court was told that Parks had assaulted a girl one night last summer when he pulled her out of her bed and beat her.

Parks still faces two morals charges of a serious nature.

Dr. Mackintosh Will Officially Open New School

The official opening of the new Queen Elizabeth school in East Belleville will take place on Wednesday, December 12th, it has been announced by the local board of education. Dr. W. A. Mackintosh, Principal and Vice-Chancellor of Queen's University, will officially open the new school.

The opening ceremonies are scheduled to commence at 8 o'clock and will include dedication by Rev. D. McTavish of Bridge Street United Church and an address by Dr. W. A. Mackintosh of Queen's. Members of the local Board of Education will also take part, while a representative of the St. Julien Chapter of the I.O.D.E. will present a new flag for the school.

Two Vehicles Badly Damaged

Campbellford — Two vehicles were badly damaged on Monday evening on No. 30 highway about three miles north of this town, when an automobile and a road grader were involved in an accident. Ralph Alley, 29, of Havelock was driving north on the highway and attempted to turn out to pass a road grader operated by Garfield Palmateer of Picton. Alley noticed the lights of an approaching truck and swung back to his own side of the road but was unable to stop in time to avoid hitting the grader. The front of the car was badly damaged and a tire was blown on the grader. The front wheel of the grader was also damaged. There were no injuries.

Provincial Constable George W. Rose of Campbellford investigated.

Dairy Director Emphasizes Need of Clean Milk for Cheese

The need for clean milk for cheese production was emphasized by C. E. Lackner, Ontario director of dairying, in an address which he made at the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association convention, being held at the Quinte Hotel here.

Mr. Lackner devoted a large part of his address to compulsory grading and the sediment test used in such grading. He said that some cheese factories were allowing patrons to take milk in which there was a high sediment content home, filter it, and bring it back. "This, Mr. Lackner said, "did not remove the bacteria and other impurities and resulted only in a lower quality final product." "Cheese factories which permitted such practices," he said, "were fooling no one but themselves."

The testing of milk at the factory during the last year, Mr. Lackner said, had had one good result. This was that there had been a substantial decrease in the volume of grade C milk, and a corresponding increase in the volume of A and B grades. He quoted statistics to prove this point.

Mr. Lackner then quoted statistics to show that the quality of the cheese that was being produced in Ontario was rising. These figures, Mr. Lackner explained, were from the federal government department of agriculture's laboratory in Montreal.

Number of Factories Close

J. F. Robinson, of Kemptville, chief cheese instructor for Eastern Ontario, spoke on "What is Wrong with the Cheese Industry in Eastern Ontario?"

Mr. Robinson quoted figures showing that large numbers of cheese factories in the eastern part of Ontario had closed since 1944. Some had been destroyed by fire and not been replaced. Many had been amalgamated. There were 133 fewer than in 1944, he said. Many had closed because they could not get a sufficiently large volume of milk.

Mr. Robinson also dealt with the turnover in labor at cheese factories. Cheese makers got tired of working seven days a week for six or seven months in the year and then being laid off for five or six months. "Something would have to be done to provide these men with year-around employment if the industry were going to survive," he said.

Referring to other factors which were affecting the industry adversely, Mr. Robinson said that one of the worst of these was the inability of the industry to provide a year-around market for the milk producers. When a cheese factory closed in the fall, he said, the farmer was often left without a market. He either found a new market or reduced the size of his dairy herd. In either event, he often ceased permanently to be a patron of the cheese factory.

Armin A. Roth, of Wyandotte, Mich., gave a lecture on products made by Wyandotte Chemicals Corporation, which makes products used in dairy plant sanitation. Mr. Roth illustrated his talk with a moving picture.

Two County Welfare Groups And Bancroft Hospital Seek Financial Assistance of Council

A request for grants or other financial assistance was heard Wednesday by county council from two county welfare organizations and from the Bancroft Red Cross branch.

The request from the Bancroft Red Cross branch was to enable its members to make some contribution toward the maintenance of their Red Cross hospital.

Mr. D. L. Storey, chairman of the Hastings County Tuberculosis Association, told councillors that 23 chest clinics had been held in the county with five persons being discovered to have T.B. Four of these were now in hospital.

"I feel sure that we are stamping out T.B. in the county," Mr. Storey told council. "The Belleville Shrine Club are sponsoring the work and it is free to the public".

Another aspect of the work was after-aid for patients following their return from hospital with assistance being given to help re-establish themselves in positions.

"You have been generous with us in the past; give us all you can, will you?" he asked.

Society Lacks Funds

The growth of the Children's Aid Society and the work it was doing in the county, was outlined by the C.A.S. superintendent Mr. William Lockyer. Their work was still hampered, however, by lack of sufficient funds.

Three hundred children were now under the care of the C.A.S. in Hastings, including county cases and cases from Belleville and Trenton. Of this number 153 children were having their board paid at boarding homes.

The Society collected from the county but $1 per day per child which was one of the lowest rates in the province. Mr. Lockyer admitted they had to watch finances very closely.

Work among the unmarried mothers was on the increase, according to Mr. Lockyer with 72 being on their lists last year.

What was termed by the speaker as "protection work" or work toward the prevention of homes being broken up, took up much time of the field workers and still more was needed. "Another problem were the children of mentally defective mothers and here, in the interests of humanity, something must be done," he said.

Warden Asks Question

To a question placed by Warden Coulter, Mr. Lockyer replied that the family court was assisting in the work of the C.A.S. "in a sense".

"We have been relieved to some extent by reason of the family court because if all the former work was carried on we would have to increase our staff."

Mr. Lockyer said Trenton was not included in the family court set-up and all former work of the C.A.S. was carried on here.

Reeve Clarke Rollins of Wollaston, wanted to know if more social workers could be placed in the northern part of the county.

Mr. Lockyer agreed that this was necessary but again pointed out it was purely a matter of finance.

Reeve Ross Neal of Deseronto, wanted to know what could be done about welfare cases from the nearby Indian Reserve which had to be handled by his municipality when they moved to Deseronto. Mr. Lockyer said his organization worked very closely with the Indian Agent in cases associated with the reserve.

All requests for grants will be considered by council before the close of the December session.

IN MEMORIAM

UENS. — In loving memory of my husband, Frederick Arthur Uens, who passed away December 6, 1946.

There is a road we call remembrance
Where thoughts and wishes meet
I take that road in thought today
For the one I cannot greet.
'Tis sweet to know we'll meet again
Where troubles are no more
And that the one we loved so well
Has just gone on before.

—Ever remembered by his wife. D6

UENS. — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, Frederick A. Uens, who passed away December 6, 1946.

Dear God will you take a message
To Dad in heaven above,
Tell him how much we miss him,
And give him all our love.

—Sadly missed by daughter Nellie, son-in-law Lou and granddaughter Betty Lou Harvey. D6

WINTERS. — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, William George Winters, who passed away December 6, 1950.

He is gone but not forgotten,
And, as dawns another year,
In our lonely hours of thinking.
Thoughts of him are always near.
Days of sadness will come o'er us,
Friends may think the wound is healed,
But they little know the sorrow
That lies within the heart concealed.

—Sadly missed and ever remembered by wife Eleanor and family. D6

AYLESWORTH. — In loving memory of a dear daughter and sister, Bessie B. Aylesworth, who passed away December 6th, 1932.

What would we give her hand to clasp,
Her patient face to see,
To hear her voice, to see her smile,
As in the days that used to be,
But some sweet day we'll meet again
Beyond the toil and strife,
And clasp each other's hand once more
In heaven, that happy life.

—Sadly missed by mother and brothers Harold, Garfield and Edwin. D6

ALL MOTIONS DEFEATED

Ottawa, Dec. 6 — (CP)—Opposition members, supported by a lone government adherent, yesterday urged the parliamentary committee on resale price maintenance to slow down consideration of government legislation to ban retail price-fixing.

They introduced four motions aimed at slowing the proceedings of the committee, which has decided to bring the hearing of witnesses to an end today and then consider recommendations on the proposed legislation.

All four motions were defeated.

Malcolm Robb Says Government Ruining Money

Toronto, Dec. 6 — (CP) — The Ontario Automotive Transport Association yesterday protested against powers which may be given the Toronto Harbor Commission to collect tolls from all traffic in the harbor area.

Earlier the annual convention heard Malcolm Robb a Belleville lawyer, charge that the federal government is debauching Canadian currency by a settled policy of handing out cold cash without increasing production.

"We are on the same path as a business headed for bankruptcy", he said.

Toronto Harbor Commission powers may be increased in a bill now before a Senate committee to replace by a tax on oil pipelines the revenue previously derived from a toll on oil tankers coming into port.

Volcano Erupts For Fourth Time In Three Days

Manila, Nov. 6—(AP)—Racing Hibok Hibok volcano spewed out a new rain of fiery ashes tonight in its fourth major blast in three days. Additional casualties were feared.

Official reports from the terror-stricken little south Philippines island of Camiguin said naval patrol boats moved close inshore to pick up survivors at Mambajao on the northern coast.

The latest eruption from the mile-high inferno was reported to have occurred at 4 p. m. (3 a. m., EST).

Some 200 persons, mainly Chinese storekeepers and their families and Philippine army troops, had remained in Mambajao.

Despatches from the Philippines News Service and Manila Times correspondents on the 13-mile-long island said the latest eruption apparently came from a new vent on the northern slope. The new vent was opened Tuesday night.

Halt in Dairy Production One of Most Urgent Problems Facing Canada Today--Gibson

The halt in the progress of dairy production is one of the most urgent problems Canada faces today, Dr. A. L. Gibson, dairy division, Kemptville Agricultural School, told the Eastern Ontario Cheese Makers' Association convention yesterday afternoon.

Canada, with such great agricultural possibilities should be able to relieve the shortages of dairy foods in other countries rather than barely producing sufficient for its own needs, Dr. Gibson said.

Previous to 1945 there was general reason to be proud of the steady progress in Canadian dairying but the past six years shows a halt and decline which if not corrected, may mean catastrophe to the national welfare.

Dr. Gibson deplored the fact that milch cows on Canadian farms, had as of June 1st, 1951, reached the lowest point in twenty years. Milk production has declined over a billion pounds since the end of the war, and despite favorable conditions, the 1951 production will be the lowest since 1940. Annual production of butter has declined by more than 50 million pounds since 1943.

Production Drops

"The Canadian cheese production", Dr. Gibson said, "has dropped 100 million pounds since the war. Had it not been for the stabilizing of the price this year by the Ontario Producers' Marketing Board, the decline would have been much greater than 12 per cent in 1951 as compared with 1950".

The production of fluid milk has not been sufficient to meet the year-round requirements of a large number of city markets. This shortage, the speaker predicted, will become worse unless the overall decline is halted. He said it was significant to note that Canada, out of the 13 major dairying countries of the world, is the only one to show an overall decline in milk production between 1948 and 1950.

U. S. Farmers Prosper

The fundamental reason for unsatisfactory conditions in various dairy industry branches, lies in the fact that milk production is not sufficient to meet Canadian requirements. Dr. Gibson wondered if the wholesale and unlimited export of dairy cows has been accompanied with the export of Canadian dairy prosperity. Notwithstanding high prices paid for Canadian cattle, American farmers are prospering on milk production. The state of Wisconsin alone is producing almost as much milk as the whole of Canada.

"It is easy to deplete our dairy herds by export", he said, "but it will take years to build them up again to meet increasing milk requirements."

"In seeking wealth the easiest way" Dr. Gibson said, "we are neglecting to provide the necessities of life in sufficient quantity. The danger of constantly looking for a more easy and lazy way of life with ever reducing hours of work at increased pay, and increasing hours of leisure and play is daily becoming more apparent. A better way of life can only be attained by working for it and not by voting for it when election time comes."

Must Keep Them on Farms

Certain men in the country, Dr. Gibson declared, have said the farmer is a "downtrodden victimized individual, not getting a square deal and creating discontent. The sooner we get back to the idea of keeping our people on the farm the better off we shall be. It seems like a theme to keep people off the farm when we should be saying 'Thank God' there are farms.

Referring to margarine, the speaker told the convention that when milk production fell off, butter production fell with it and the argument against margarine fell through. Had there been a surplus of butter no member of parliament would have brought in an argument to bring in "fat".

Not Many Apprentices

Dr. Gibson also deplored the fact that the number of young apprentices in dairy plants is decreasing. Consequently attendance in dairy schools is likely to be reduced with the result qualified dairy operators will be scarce until the situation is remedied.

Referring to the suggestion that the cheese makers form a union, Dr. Gibson said he would not like to see unions among cheese makers, "the same as some others. Remain free men," he said. "Get together for improvement of conditions, but not with the idea of staging a strike."

Urges New Markets

O. R. Evans of the Family Herald, Montreal, urged that new markets be made for Canadain milk products. He believed there there was a steady development for Canadian cheddar cheese, and felt that if the federal ruling against selling cheese under three months of age was eased, greater consumption would ensue.

A more attractive package would sell more Canadian cheddar, he felt, adding that the new style of block cheese was gaining in popularity to such an extent that 60 factories in Ontario and Quebec have "changed over." He felt the Marketing Board might do something about the packaging and retailing of cheese instead of leaving it to private firms.

"While Canada produces the finest cheddar made, there is a slowly growing market for other milk products," Evans said. Every year Canada pays thousands of dollars for imported cheeses. Canada should be able to manufacture them more cheaply here, and with a greater cash return than that from cheddar.

If Canadians are to have the benefit of training given her people at dairy schools, all types of milk products should be developed including cottage cheese, yogurt, etc. Dairy spreads reaction on the consumer public is being watched with interest by government officials. Blue cheese made in Canada is proving a serious competitor to the Danish and American types.

More Research Needed

Evans said that enough is not being done in research for new products. He suggested that more activity along research lines be asked for and demanded. It could be done at the Kemptville school.

He stressed the need for more extension work from the factory to the farmer in order to bring up the low quality milk. Field men were as necessary in the cheese industry as in others. If it is to have a quality product it should do something about getting it.

Alderman Harry Rollins extended the formal welcome of the city to the visiting cheese men in place of Mayor R. T. Potter. Alderman Rollins commented on the fact that Belleville is in the heart of the largest cheese-producing area in Canada. He deplored the lack of suitable accommodations for the cheese show, but promised they would be available in the near future.

Warden James Cleminson of Prince Edward County also welcomed the convention dwelling on the importance of the cheese industry to his county. Warden Harry Coulter, Hastings County was unable to be present due to his council being in session.

CAMPBELLFORD

Barrister Gives Rotarians Talk On Civil Law

Campbellford—The Campbellford Rotary Club plans to have a number of the town's senior citizens as guests at their annual Christmas meeting December 17. There will also be a meeting on December 24, but as it was felt there would be a large number absent on the day before Christmas, it was thought advisable to hold the Christmas meeting a week early.

Bob Bateson was named chairman of the Christmas cheer baskets for the needy, and the club will co-operate with other local clubs and organizations in looking after as many families as possible.

Rotorian F. G. DeCarrol introduced the guest speaker J. F. R. Douglas, local barrister, Mr. Douglas was scheduled to speak on court procedure but he thought it better to give the club members a little understanding of the law leading up to court procedings.

He sidestepped criminal law as he did not think knowledge of it would be of much practical use. The speaker described civil law and its two main branches.

In the administration of the laws, there are three trial courts. These are the division court, the county court and the supreme court. There are two courts of appeal. The Supreme Court of Ontario and the Supreme Court of Canada. There are no appeals heard now by the Privy Council.

The judge of the county court usually presides at the division court. This court deals with matters generally not exceeding $200 and does not cover deeds, titles, or the recovery of property. Appeals from this court go before one judge at Osgoode Hall. County court appeals also go to Osgoode Hall but are heard by at least three judges.

Personal actions not generally exceeding $1,000 are heard by the county court. This court deals with properties and legacies and can be presided over by a judge or judge and jury.

The speaker went on to describe the steps in taking action through various courts and procedure of filing claims.

President Franklin S. Linton thanked Mr. Douglas for his talk on behalf of the members of the local club.

Excellent Performances Given In Theatre Guild's Plays

By Harold Bankier

The bright new auditorium of Prince Charles School formed an appropriate setting on Wednesday evening, for the first presentations of Belleville's Theatre Guild. Three one-act plays gave the capacity audience an evening of entertainment which ranged from comedy to melodrama, and back to farce.

"Bird On The Wing", by James Reach, opened the bill. This lighthearted family comedy, reminiscent of "Junior Miss" featured Jack and Catharine Darlington, as Mr. and Mrs. Vincent, parents of the problem child Ellie, played by Jeanne Sisler, and her long-suffering elder sister, Susan, portrayed by Shan Robinson. Mrs. Sisler turned in a characteristically fine job of acting in a difficult part, and, with Mr. Darlington, avoided a tendency toward over-acting and elocution which appeared in the other members of the Vincent family circle.

Robert Dickens, as Sonny Roberts, the boy-next-door, was very convincing in his juvenile role. However, local allusions might better be left to the world of the minstrel show. Pearl Miro, as Baleria, the maid-of-small-work, made the most of a part which consisted largely of stage-falls. Her accent was facile and convincing.

The second presentation, "The Mask", by H. M. Harwood and F. T. Jesse, is a very gory work, indeed. Bert Simpson and Sadie Rose were excellent in this melodramatic pas-de-deux. The Acadian accents rang true, and the parts of the crippled miner, his faithless wife and her lover were faithfully portrayed. "The Mask" is a play of considerable merit, with a most interestingly tangled plot.

Robertson Davies' brash young comedy, "The Voice of the People" was the undoubted favorite of the audience. Providing full scope for the volatile talents and raucous voice of Ted Schwab, who played a strongly reminiscent barber, "Shorty Morton" this lively farce proved an uproarious success. Elizabeth Barrie, as "Aggie Morton", Shorty's long-suffering wife, did much to turn the stage set into a real-life kitchen. Miriam Bishop, the gum-chewing school girl daughter, Myrtle, completed the family scene with her startling vocabulary. In the part of Sam North, Horace Ward-Whate, from his fox-hole behind the kitchen stove, formed an effective foil for Shorty's tirades.

Byy clever use of furniture, drapes and pictures, the same stage set was made to serve very effectively as a living room, a miner's dreary cottage and the rackety kitchen of the "Shorty Mortons". Audibility throughout the evening was excellent, and the voice of the prompter was not heard in the land. In all respects, the productions were most satisfactory, and the directors, Murray Irwin, Elaine Jardine and Sydney Rose are to be congratulated. It is to be hoped that subsequent ventures of the Theatre Guild will take place in a much larger auditorium, so that many more of the people of Belleville may enjoy their efforts.

CHURCHILL SAYS

"So far as Britain is concerned, we do not propose to merge into the European army. But we are already joined to it and we shall do our best to make worthy contribution to the deterrents against aggrsseion."

Some French politicians have said that the British position may make it difficult for France to enter into the plan for a European army. France prposed creation of such an army as a way of bringing west German troops into a defence plan for the west without reviving German militarism.

Churchill is one of the backers of European unity. But since assuming office six weeks ago he has been following the traditional British policy of keeping aloof from actual union with the continent.

He told parliament today that the European army "will stand alongside the British and U.S. armies."

First head of the Daughters of the American Revolution was Mrs. Caroline Harrison, who died in the White House in 1892.

Tribute Paid to J. J. Trudeau By Community Chest Executive

It was a happy occasion at the Queen's Hotel on Tuesday night when members of the executive of the Belleville and district Community Chest and a few civic friends gathered to do honor to J. J. Trudeau, this year's chairman of the Red Feather campaign. P. C. McGuire, who presided spoke on behalf of the entire group and expressed great appreciation for the leadership Mr. Trudeau had given. He called on the presidents of the participating organizations to express their tributes. Douglas Burr spoke on behalf of the Victorian Order of Nurses. F. J. Wilson spoke on behalf of the Children's Aid Society. Mrs. R. J. McLuskie expressed the thanks of the St. John Ambulance and Lorne McDougall spoke on behalf of the Y.M.C.A.

Judge J. C. Anderson made a presentation of a sport jacket to Mr. Trudeau on behalf of the guests and expressed the hope that the real success of the campaign, which was largely due to the leadership of Mr. Trudeau, would encourage the development of a larger Chest and more participating agencies for future years.

Mr. Trudeau in his reply stated that it was the effort of the various chairmen, the numerous workers and the generosity of the citizens, that made the campaign a success. He explained that throughout the campaign he had worked toward a plan and had made several observations which he believed would be helpful for future years. The report which was received for further consideration provided for a permanent organization with a board of directors and standing committees. This organization would be responsible for early and careful preparation of annual campaigns.

In the period which had elapsed since the official close of the campaign two weeks ago, contributions and pledges had been received or estimated which would put the total beyond $21,200. In addition it was noted that an amount of close to $500 had been collected for agencies not members of the Community Chest.

The interim financial statement presented by the treasurer, Jack Walton, was accepted, and following the audit, will be published in the press.

The thanks of the meeting were expressed to Judge Anderson for convening the distribution committee and bringing about a union of agreement of the agencies regarding their share in the campaign funds on the basis of requirements, which the committee carefully examined.

Mr. Trudeau again expressed thanks to members of the executives, the various committee chairman, to the Y. M. C. A. for providing, without charge, campaign headquarters, to the press and radio for their co-operation in providing time and space for publicity, to the office staff, to Rev. Duncan McTavish for his invaluable support and to the citizens who in the final analysis through their generosity had sent the campaign over the top.

The final list of contributors will appear tomorrow.

Higher Education Has Some Uses

Boulder, Colo., Dec. 6—(AP) —When Dean of Men at Colorado University opened a letter from a former student, now in Alaska, a cheque slipped out.

It was for the full amount of a loan the student had made from the university's loan fund.

The borrower explained he was able to pay his debt faster than he'd expected because of a bonanza at the racetrack. He said he figured his university training had something to do with his picking five winners in a row.

CHEESE MAKERS WELCOME

Belleville takes pleasure in playing host, as it is today, to the members of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association, who are holding their twenty-fourth annual convention and British Empire dairy show here.

It is fitting that Belleville, the "capital" of the Bay of Quinte region, should be the scene of a cheese makers' convention, because cheese making is the main industry hereabouts.

In fact, Hastings and neighboring counties constitute the chief cheese-producing area of Canada, both for volume and for quality. Cheese produced in Hastings has not only earned a high reputation in the domestic market; it enjoys a similarly high reputation in the British market.

During the decades, the cheese industry has brought many millions of dollars into this district. This in turn has benefited every business and store in the district.

We hope delegates and other officials attending the convention enjoy their brief visit to our city and that they will return as often as possible.

PRICE CONTROLS AT WORK

People in this country who want price controls should take note of some of the things that are happening in the United States, where an agency called the Office of Price Stabilization, established by the Truman administration, has established certain price controls and is struggling to make them work.

Only recently, Hammond Standish, a Detroit pork-packing plant, was forced to close. The company, which had been in continuous operation for nearly 100 years, found it could make no profit while buying hogs at controlled prices and selling pork products also at controlled prices.

After the three hundred employees of the plant had been out of work for a while, they made a deal with the management to go back to work in an attempt to get the plant running again.

The company will draw no profits from the business and neither executives nor workmen will get any wages, unless and until the plant again starts paying its way.

A situation like this will not, of course, last forever. Either the Office of Price Stabilization must relax its controls, or the plant will be forced to close again.

Ironically, most of the demand for price controls in the United States, as in Canada, comes from labor unionists, and the 300 workmen at Hammond Standish who were thrown out of work by price control regulations are themselves members of a C.I.O. union.

PLANNERS CRITICIZED

Arthur Homer, the president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, doesn't think very highly of government planning as being conducted by the Truman administration in the United States.

Mr. Homer says that, under Washington's allocation system, 18 tons of steel were set aside for squeegees, 354 for corsets and brassieres, and 718 tons for games, toys and dolls. This was for a single week recently.

During the same week, Mr. Homer said, the United States Maritime Administration, apparently a governmental agency, had to suspend work on 14 defence cargo vessels, because of a lack of steel.

It seems that, even in the country which has the most efficient industrial system in the world, the government "planners" are not satisfied to let well enough alone.

Anyone who has even a smattering knowledge of American history knows that government "planners" were unknown during the period when American industry was growing to its present giant size and productive capacity.

HAROLD DINGMAN

By the death of Harold Dingman, which occurred last Sunday in a Vancouver hotel, Canadian journalism loses one of its outstanding reporters and magazine writers. Mr. Dingman had worked for the Mail and Empire, the Globe and Mail, the Montreal Gazette, various western papers and the United Press. He had also written articles for magazines.

He achieved numerous notable "scoops." One of the most famous of these was a magazine article entitled "Babies for Export," which formed the basis for a libel action involving himself, J. Kent Cooke, his publisher, Charlotte Whitton, now mayor of Ottawa, and certain notables in Alberta. The action ended in victory for Mr. Dingman and his associates.

Harold Dingman was a younger brother of the late J. J. (Jeff) Dingman, who died in 1947 in Windsor and who was considered the best copyreader in Canada.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

WHY TALK YOURSELF DOWN?

More than forty years ago the members of a college class voted a certain student the most conceited man in the class. The chap who had received this vote was greatly pleased by it. He said to a roommate: "I consider that the best compliment my classmates could have paid me. Nobody ever amounts to anything who doesn't have a high opinion of himself."

Now, forty-odd years later, it must be confessed that this egotistical chap is the best authority in the world in a certain field. The writer of this column would hesitate to praise conceit or to comment it as a virtue. It usually causes men to grow long ears and to become jackasses in every sense of the term. But it must also be confessed that the world usually adopts the estimate we make of ourselves and of our abilities. If we think little of ourselves, the world thinks little of us. If we have no confidence in ourselves, there are few people who will place any reliance on our judgment or on our capacities.

Conceit is an evil, but self-respect and a good measure of self-confidence are undoubtedly the ingredients of a wholesome personality. Humility is a virtue, but a sense of inferiority can neutralize the most outstanding capacities and make one ineffective.

Think well of yourself—it pays.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Is Santa Claus losing his grip? Yesterday in a department store I saw a woeful sight. There on his throne in the toy department sat Santa Claus, a figure of majesty in scarlet and white. He was surrounded by scenic splendor, in which toys of great price, together with toys of very modest price indeed, down to forty-nine cents, were skillfully displayed about him. This demonstrates the true democratic character of dear old Santa Claus. He can accommodate the dreams of childhood in practically any price class.

Up the ramp leading to his throne filed a procession of very small children, whose parents stood in the throng waiting at either end of the ramp, all lost in tremulous delight at the beautiful spectacle of infant delusion.

Suddenly the procession halted. A little girl of about three years of age was next in line for the great moment. She hung back, clutching the railing of the ramp. Then she burst into wild screams of terror. She could not back up, because of the solid queue of children behind her. To go forward, she would have to pass the awful ogre she beheld square in front of her.

What an ogre it was! A vast stuffed ogre, clad in scarlet, its face hidden by a ghastly jungle of fur, out of which two wild eyes peered. Even as she screamed, the little girl saw the ogre reaching out its arms for her, and it half rose from its throne to get at her. My sympathies were all with the little girl. An imaginary Santa Claus is spooky enough. A real stuffed one is more gruesome than a stuffed moose.

Her screeches were electric. Suddenly, all the children behind her on the ramp caught the infection. And dear old Santa Claus was surrounded by howling, screaming childhood, madly tumbling backwards off the ramp and down to the safety of their Mummies' arms.

OUR TOWN

BY JACK SCOTT

GLANCE INWARD

Now that we've all been amused by Uncle Nat Gubbins' funny remarks about how to write a column let us wipe the grins from our ugly faces and look at this subject from a more serious, or duller, viewpoint.

Nat says he keeps getting letters from people who want to get into the column-writing industry. I keep getting that kind of letter, too.

Small children no longer wish to grow up to be railroad engineers or fire chiefs. They want to write a column. And the way things are going they'll probably make it.

The field's getting more crowded every day. If the trend continues the papers will soon have to put out special supplements with the news and market quotations.

Most of us can remember the days when newspapers had only one columnist, if any. Invariably this man was either an uncommonly lively writer or a person of extreme erudition.

The rule seemed to be that the columnist must either dazzle the reader with his athletic personality or stun him with superior knowledge.

As time went on editors and publishers began to discover through highly unreliable polls and surveys that the readership rating of these features was astonishing high.

Something similar to the Hollywood "star" system was developing. Readers were becoming acquainted with writers as individuals, getting to know them pretty well through their styles and opinions, and remaining loyal to them either because they were pleasing or irritating.

Thus the demand was established. Many quiet, capable newspapermen were launched into a bright and unrelenting floodlight.

Gone Tomorrow

In many ways the job is rewarding. For one thing the columnist is almost always his own master, free to express his personal views, a luxury not always enjoyed by the anonymous editorial writer. If that is his disposition, he may enjoy a certain amount of public attention.

In his earlier days this will astonish him. Many ordinary, uncomplicated newspapermen, elevated to the ranks of the perpetual byline, have been astounded to find that everything they write causes some heated reaction.

I can still recall the overwhelming dismay I felt on receiving the first of some 10,000 letters of hate and how I tottered to my editor with trembling lower lip.

Can still recall the editor's words, too. "I was beginning to wonder if you'd be any good," he said. "Now I see that there's some slight chance."

It takes but a short time to develop the crocodile hide and the knowledge that any opinion worth an inflated nickel is going to have opponents. You can criticize the taste of an Ashcroft potato and expect a dozen hot letters in the mail by the next post. (I love Ashcroft potatoes and am merely using this as an illustration, so shut up.)

The only discouraging part of the trade is the indisputable fact that there is almost no lasting sense of accomplishment whatever.

A man who writes a book or even a magazine article has the feeling that his prose will lie around for awhile and that it will be read again and again, if only by himself.

But the man who writes a newspaper column knows full well that it will be wrapped around some old cabbage leaves and coffee grounds before the next sun goes down.

More than that he soon recognized that the whole thing is, in fact, a tour de force. The specifications of the job call for between 250 and 300 individual essays each year and no man alive has that many fresh ideas.

He may think he has up to the first 500 columns, but after that a doubt begins to enter his mind.

Only the other day a colleague said to me: "It isn't the next idea I worry about. It's the one that will be the last I ever have.

Helping Hand

Fortunately, the reader is an amiable, forgiving sort of fellow who doesn't expect too much and will take the good with the bad.

I discovered this for myself last summer and discovered it the hard way. It seemed to me that if I could write only three columns a week each might be based on what we call a strong idea, each might be honed to a sharpness not possible on a daily basis.

I then went on this limited schedule—with alarming results. The readership surveys showed in a short time that I'd dropped down to a notch just above the hog prices—although, in fact, I was pretty sure the quality of the columns had improved.

The letters I got then gave me a whole new perspective on the relations between reader and writer.

I discovered that readers don't expect anything more than they get—the day-to-day thoughts and ideas and blarney of an individual who becomes a kind of habit.

If the writer rings the bell occasionally they know it. If he lays an egg they shrug and wonder what he'll do tomorrow.

This is a peculiar thing for it is precisely what the columnist is wondering too.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

PREPARATION AND READINESS

Nature gives to us our best and most revealing lessons on life. The glory of Autumn is about over. The evidence of this fact is seen by the drowsy leaves, covering the ground with what was yesterday's farewell voice to the Summer sun. Now the winds scatter these leaves and rains beat them tightly to the earth—and there they sleep to rise!

Each one of our beautiful seasons is a preparation for the next, and all that each season contributes to the next is kept in readiness for the event. And so with each one of us, every good act and every useful effort put forth not only gives evidence of preparation for what may be just ahead, but readiness for any task.

Underneath the great blanket of Autumn leaves, outside my library window, sleep the seeds of the Springtime, and the promise of newly born flowers, and all the beauty and life that is distributed with Summer "just around the corner". There are voices that keep whispering to us about the eternity of everything, that all life is a preparation for it, and that our readiness should be our greatest joy.

Every day of our lives we are preparing for something, whether we have it carefully planned or not. And to our state of readiness to perform, wherever called upon to do so, may depend the success of happiness for which we most yearn. Preparation and readiness work hand in hand. We never know when we may be called to demonstrate our readiness and to prove our preparation as something vital and essential.

Nature conserves and doesn't waste. There is more potentiality in her sun than anyone knows about, and her earth is latent with undreamed -of treasures of wealth and beauty. For each step ahead nature is always preparing so as to be in readiness.

It is not only a privilege, but a duty, to be happy and to radiate that happiness as though it were a fresh gift from heaven, as frequently it actually is! Unfortunately many of us ill prepare ourselves even to receive happiness!

Union Secretary Denies Report Of Mass Meeting

Toronto, Dec. 6 — (CP) — Sidney Hare, secretary of the Street Railway and Motor Coach Employees Union (A.F.L.-T.L.C.) in Toronto, yesterday denied published reports that a mass meeting of Toronto Transportation Commission employees next Monday morning might tie up all bus and street car service.

Mr. Hare said no mass membership meeting is planned for next Monday morning. A regularly-scheduled meeting would be held Sunday, Dec. 16, he added. In the past, street car and bus service had not been interrupted by attendance of employees at union meetings.

Mr. Hare also said there is "no justification" for published reports that members of the union at a meeting last Monday night threatens to call a strike for Dec. 17 if a conciliation board has not reported by then on a union-T.T.C. dispute.

The union has been seeking a 15-cents-an-hour wage increase.

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

ANTACIDS ARE WONDERFUL

All my professional life I have wondered why so many people take antacids.

As many an old fogy has told me, ever since I broke into the newspapers to tell the world truths I couldn't tell my patients because they wouldn't remain my patients long enough, some day I'll learn what it is to have a nervous breakdown, get the rheumatiz from the bad climate we have wherever we live or perhaps catch cold from exposure to foul weather and come down with pneumonia.

None of these misfortunes has overtaken me yet, although a very good doctor hustled me into the hospital a couple years ago when I took shaking chill one day and developed signs of virus pneumonia. It was such a piffling case that I felt ashamed to occupy a bed which might be really needed by some one with a real illness.

But we live and learn. In the past year I have suffered terribly from time to time, well, anyway, I have felt uncomfortable, and I suppose a bit worried, with vague bellyache — and I mean ache in the wall of the great body cavity.

It will do no good to list here the diagnoses made by the doctors I consulted about it, but I must say that in view of the history of this here bellyache the doctors — and I have no less confidence in 'em than I had before — were not very warm.

In my locker at the bowling green I happened to have a vial of antacid discs which I meant to give one of my bowling cronies to take for his "gas" and "hyperacidity" instead of soda. The discs consist of calcium carbonate and magnesium trisilicate. The calcium neutralizes acid without disturbing the acid-base balance in the blood as soda (sodium bicarbonate, saleratus) does. The magnesium is an absorbent.

For the first time in my life I took an antacid. The bellyache was relieved. Coincidence, I thought. In a day or two another bellyache, another chew of discs, and again complete relief.

One swallow doesn't make a summer nor one chew of calcium carbonate and magnesium trisilicate a cure for hyperchlorhydria or ulcer.

I hope I'm not the type to get an ulcer. There's nothing wrong with my digestion. You can't say I have Yankee stomach just because I abhor mashed potato — it's just that I don't drink.

But I can say that a lot of you readers have Yankee stomach — because you tell me about it in droves every day. Perhaps you had better stop fooling with digestive tablets and dietary restrictions and send me a stamped envelope bearing your address, for the pamphlet on Yankee Stomach. The suggestions therein can do no harm and may bring relief to your bellyache.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Blackheads and Pimples

Answer — It had that same effect on my personality when I was 17. In the pamphlet on Acne-Blackheads and Pimples, available on request if you provide stamped, self - addressed envelope, I have tried to tell the young victim how to cope with what at the time, as I well know, seems an insurmountable handicap.

Answer — Yes. Send stamped, self-adressed envelope for pamphlet How to Lose Weight.

Find Original Site of Fort Qu' Appelle

Saskatoon — (CP) — The rolling Saskatchewan prairies have given up a secret they had kept for more than 100 years — the location of one of the most famous early trading posts in western Canada.

They gave up the location of the original Fort Qu'Appelle to a device invented to save lives in wartime — a mine detector.

A survey crew of the Saskatchewan Department of Natural Resources turned the mine detector to its new peacetime use. It was the first time in Saskatchewan, and perhaps the first in Canada, that the device had been used in archaeological work.

A handful of old square nails, part of a saw, a copper bucket handle, a horse bit, a broken knife — those were part of the evidence turned up by the mine detector.

The men with the mine detector did not actually locate the site of the old fort but they did prove that the area involved was the correct site.

The actual site was discovered by Thomas Petty, principal of the Indian Head Public School. After searching the Qu'Appelle valley for 10 years, he located what he believed was the old fort site on the farm of Charles Tanner, four miles south and 1½ miles west of the present community of Qu'Appelle.

Pieces of clay, chinking had been found on the location and Indian stone hammers and parts of old muskets had been picked up in the general area. But no excavation had been attempted and only one relic — a gold sovereign — had been picked up on the fort site until the mine detector was tried.

Now, since the mine detector has worked so effectively on the Fort Qu'Appelle site, plans are being made to use the device on other fort sites and battlegrounds in an effort to fill in the gaps in Saskatchewan's history.

Yule Fund for School Guides Suggested

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

At this time each year we all are looking forward to the Christmas season. While we contribute to a fund for the garbage collectors, and other personnel, who service our homes with milk and bread.

I have never heard of a fund for our children's school guides. These men are out in all kinds of weather, protecting the safety of our children.

The thought came to me, that this could be a way of proving our appreciation.

Couch Tells Public Meeting $750,000 Will be Spent On Improvements in Trenton

Trenton (Special)—On the eve of the municipal election, Mayor Kenneth J. Couch, who was returned to office by acclamation, announced that within the last few days papers had been signed authorizing the spending of three quarters of a million dollars. Mr. Couch was speaking to a ratepayers' meeting sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce in the town hall last night. He explained that plans had been completed for the construction in Trenton of a $400,000 filtration plant to supply the R. C. A. F. station east of here with water. The federal government is bearing more than half the expense while the Trenton Public Utilities will receive sufficient revenue from the project to retire its part of the debt within 15 years.

Mr. Couch made it clear that the water from the new filtration plant pumping from the Bay of Quinte would not be mixed with the towns's spring water only in the case of an extreme emergency.

Bright Prospects

Mr. Couch, beginning his sixth term as chief magistrate, spoke of bright prospects for Trenton in 1952 He announced that arrangements were about to be finalized whereby the 127 acres under option west of the town would be annexed and construction of a housing project was starting at once. First plan calls for the building of 25 homes in the new area. They will be of brick-veneer construction and cost not less than $10,000 each. It is understood that the town has signed an agreement with the Central Mortgage financing the bulk of the housing development.

Mr. Couch said that under the Land Assembly Act the new project would cost the federal government 75 per cent, the provincial government 17½ per cent and the town 7½ per cent. Sufficient money will be advanced by the government agency on the 15th of each month to carry the project. None of the town's money will be tied up during the construction period.

Mayor Couch considered the development one of the best things that had ever happened to the town. He felt that it was Trenton's one chance to expand.

Trenton Gets Taxes

When the houses are completed and rented, Trenton, in accord with the federal and provincial government, will receive 7½ per cent of the monthly revenue from the project. Trenton will also receive all of the taxes. Lots with services provided will sell to prospective builders at cost.

Mr. Couch said that the enthusiastic meeting in the town hall last Monday indicated that there would be a lively election next Monday. He hoped that the voters would use great discretion, as the best men were needed to fill the offices.

The chief magistrate appealed to the voters to sanction the bus franchise by-law. He said he had a letter from the present operator, J. Armstrong, that the service would be stopped immediately if the by-law was turned down. Mr. Couch recalled that the town was fortunate to have Mr. Armstrong introduce a bus service five years ago. The bus line is not a money maker, but the owner has faith. Mr. Couch was of the opinion that the franchise should have been voted on when the line first started, explaining it was a case that the cart had been put ahead of the horse. Mr. Couch considered that Rathbun and Armstrong were the only two people capable of operating an efficient service. He assured the meeting that a "yes" vote for the bus franchise was not a question of tying up the rights but a question of providing the people with a service they seemed satisfied with. It was found that the Armstrong Bus Company needed a franchise when it asked for an increase in fares to three tickets for 25 cents.

Don't Go Overboard

Referring to the community centre by-law, Mr. Couch pointed out that Trenton needed a centre badly but suggested people keep their heads above water and not go overboard in spending. "I'm heartily in accord with the idea but let's put money on the line before we build," he said. The community centre planning committee plans to raise $150,000 by government grants and public subscription before asking the town for $100,000.

The mayor said he felt the centre was justified but warned the voters against being trapped twice. As an illustration he mentioned the Trenton Memorial Hospital, saying some of the boys sweat blood to put it where it is today.

Mr. Couch looked for the new bus terminal to become a reality soon after the first of the year. He figured private capital would be raised to pay the cost of construction.

Air Force Employs Women To Replace Ground Crew Men

Trenton (Special) — Woman has again proved that she is as capable as man.

A job heretofore handled entirely by men of the R.C.A.F. has become the task of airwomen recruited into the service this year.

A few days ago eight airwomen from all parts of Canada graduated from the flying control school at Grand Bend fully qualified in trafficking aircraft on any air force station across the country. The girls work in airport control towers as dispatchers, recorders and map readers.

Out on the tarmac they effect take-offs and landings with visual signals.

A woman tower operator must be as proficient with the Verey pistol as she is with a powder puff. She learns to handle ably a heavy Aldis lamp used in relaying messages from ground to air.

The location of airwomen as traffic control operators has released tradesmen for more suitable work. There is a great measure of responsibility attached to the job and pilots flying under instrument weather conditions depend on their judgment.

One officer praising the airwomen's adeptness considered feminine operators as capable as men. "I have every confidence they will maintain the 100 per cent efficiency established by the men they are taking over from."

Since airlines have been operating under government traffic rules in Canada there has never been a mid-air crash. Flying control operators proudly point to this record and now there is an ever-increasing number of aircraft plying the air routes the operators will have to do absolutely perfect figuring.

That is why it was necessary for airwomen making application for the flying control course to have higher than the average I.Q. On completion of the course they were given a group 1 rating. In six months time they will be promoted to the rank of AW1 and in a year they will receive another boost to leading airwoman.

The airwomen now all in the same category as men and draw the same rate of pay and enjoy similar quarters. Too, they are liable for corresponding punishment under the air force law.

The women traffic operators were trained specially in search centre operations and co-ordinators too can now expect relief during some of their long and tedious assignments.

Most of the girls on the course were introduced to flying for the first time when they were given flips to observe a pilot's actions on instruments.

Two of the graduates are now on duty in the tower at the Trenton Air Station. AW2 Corinne Anderson of Calgary, Alberta, and AW2 Susie Mol of Chatham, New Brunswick, both enjoy their work as they strive to maintain the high standard of their corps.

Mrs. McMechan Finds Lilacs Blooming in Yard

Trenton (Special) — Old timers say the seasons have changed and now Mother Nature supports the statement.

On Monday Mrs. William McMechan, 38 McColl Street found a lilac bush leafing out on her premises. The unusual warmth for this time of year had caused buds to open and foliage to grow half an inch in length.

DRIVERS UNHURT

Trenton (Special) — Herbert Fitzgibbon, 42, bread truck driver of Belleville, and Roderick Campbell of Glen Miller were involved in a car-truck smash on Sidney Street on Monday. damage to the truck amounted to $135, while both drivers escaped without injuries. Police said the truck struck the car as it entered the right-of-way from the C. P. R. station road.

RUTTAN PROMOTED

Trenton (Special) — Air Force Headquarters announced that Wing Commander G. C. Ruttan of Belleville had been promoted to group captain.

G/C Ruttan is with the service requirements branch at Ottawa. He joined the R. C. A. F. in 1938 after graduating from Brandon College. He earned his pilot wings in 1939 and served as a flight commander with 119 and 10 squadrons in 1940-41.

In 1942 he commanded 415 night torpedo-bomber squadron with which he completed his second tour of operations. After his operational tour he was deputy senior air officer with 16 group R. A. F.

On return to Canada, G/C Ruttan was stationed at air force headquarters and then in Toronto on the directing staff of the R. C. A. F. staff college. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Ruttan of Hamiota, Man., and is married to the former Doris Irene Younge of Belleville.

FALSE ALARM GIVEN

Trenton (Special) — The Trenton fire department has answered another false alarm and authorities are looking for a disturber with a voice that sounds between 12 and 14 years of age.

Both fire trucks went roaring across the bridge to the east side of the river when fireman Gordon Coughlin received the call. The pumper and hose truck headed for 158 Marmora Street.

A house had been reported burning at this address.

Firemen found a peaceful scene at the Dominion Tar and Chemical yards.

Beaver Families in North Sections of County on Increase Causing Considerable Damage

Beaver families have increased to a point, where they are making a nuisance of themselves in some of the northern sections of Hastings county, council members were told at their December session Wednesday.

It was pointed out that in isolated instances beaver dams had raised the water level to a point, where farmers had difficulty in harvesting their crops, while in another section roads were being damaged by flooding conditions caused by beaver dams.

The discussion of beaver was brought up by Reeve Clarke Rollins of Wollaston township, who wanted the game and fisheries act revised to do away with restricted area for trapping.

He said that under the present system only so many trapping licences are granted for a particular area and deserving farmers in some instances were thus prevented from earning extra money at a time when their income may be low.

Several of the northern reeves voiced their opinion on the matter, the majority apparently favoring increasing the number of licences granted.

Mr. Rollins said he was interested mostly from the economic standpoint. "It is a matter of livelihood for many," he said. "If farmers cannot trap or cut timber under a certain size, I would like to know what else they can do if their farms are not too productive."

Reeve Charles Buskard said beaver were the best engineers there were. He said they assisted in maintaining the water level. No immediate action was taken on the matter.

Meyer's Aunt Believes Former Officer Innocent

Bath, Ont., Dec. 6 (CP)—Mrs. Carole Boehmer Ham, grey-haired and 59, believes in the innocence of her nephew, former German General Kurt Meyer. Mrs. Ham, who has lived in Canada since 1916, said in an interview that her nephew was idolized by people in Germany because of his imprisonment on charges of responsibility for the 1944 shooting of 18 Canadian prisoners of war. She believes he should be given his freedom but doesn't like the idea of his returning to a military career.

WEDDINGS

SEAMS—MAYO

Evergreens and colored flowers formed a pretty setting in Salem United Church on Saturday, Dec. 1, at 11 a.m., when Margaret Eileen Mayo, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mayo, of Minto, became the bride of Donald Gilbert Seams, of Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Seams. The Rev. B. B. Beckel, pastor of the church, officiated.

The wedding music was rendered by Mrs. V. Hagerman, and the soloist, Mr. Grant Davenport, sang "O Perfect Love" and "The Love of God".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was charming in her bridal gown of white embroidered nylon over white satin. She wore her mother's wedding veil and carried a shower bouquet of red roses.

Miss Georgina Seams, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor, gowned in blue satin and net, and carrying a bouquet of baby 'mums and carnations.

Miss Jean Mayo, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, wearing pink satin and carrying white and mauve baby 'mums.

Mr. Donald Taylor, of Belleville, attended the bridegroom. Mr. Carl Boyle and Russel Herrington were ushers.

The reception was held at the bride's home where the bride's mother attired in beige alpaca with brown accessories, received the guests. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother, who wore mauve silk with black accessories.

For the wedding trip to Toronto, the bride chose a gown of winter white, with brown accessories and moss green topcoat. Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Seams will reside in Belleville.

Out-of-town guests were present from Belleville.

Hardtime Dance And Box Social Decided Success

The long forgotten custom of box socials came into its own again with a greater appeal than ever when the Parent-Teacher Association of St. Michael's High School sponsored one at the Knights of Columbus Hall last week. A capacity crowd danced until two to the music of McEvoy's orchestra. Riotous fun was had during the square dances when all the Hill-billies, Little Abners, Daisy Maes and Farmer Johns entered into the spirit of the occasion. The students and their friends and the parents and everyone interested in this new organization all cooperated to make this a success. For those who did not wish to dance there was television to watch or card games, or it was fun just to watch guests arrive in their hardtime clothes with patches hanging off and ripped seams and crownless hats.

When the time came for the auctioning of the boxes the gentlemen were determined to get the box they thought belonged to their best girl-friend. A group of business and professional men of St. Michael's parish bid fantastic prices for the prettiest boxes and then turned them in to be auctioned a second and third time.

This generous gesture helped greatly to make the event a financial as well as a social success. During the evening several spot dances were held and the winners included Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Lynch, Mrs. K. Broadworth and Mr. Egan, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Burley, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Barrett, Miss Shirley Fox and Mr. Douglas Foley.

The president of St. Michael's High School P.T.A., Dr. F. Raymond Ross arranged to have on display the many handsome prizes included in the draw which is to be made shortly and much interest was taken in these articles.

A special thanks goes to the ladies on the hospitality committee and all the other members who helped make this party so enjoyable.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Holds Yuletide Bazaar, Tea

Garlands of red and green, frosted evergreens, glistening globes and blue and gold, rose and silver, green and red all bore mute evidence yesterday afternoon in the Sunday School assembly rooms of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church that the citizens of the city had a second last chance to procure that elusive Pimpernel of a Christmas gift at the booths of a bazaar, and to enjoy the happy camaraderie over the "cup that cheers but not inebriates."

Welcoming the many guests into this atmosphere of cheerful fellowship, where friends with friend exchanged the gift problems, and assisted in helpful suggestions, were the smiling receptionists, Mrs. H. Elvidge and Mrs. J. G. Hornsby.

Christmas Gifts

The first booth was the answer to many a puzzling moment, for here were dozens of aprons, with scarcely any two alike, that were suitable for that afternoon snack, the morning clean-up, and washday; all prettily made of either prints, colorful and cheerful, or of unbleached cotton edged with dainty lace, and embroidered across the front and pockets, of organdy with lovely blue borders and waistbands of rose-sprinkled print. Two outstanding aprons, one of white dotted dimity, bordered across the bottom with bands of red rick-rack, and on the side, two over-lapping red satin hearts, just the thing for that "two hearts that beat as one," St. Valentine's party, not so far off as one might think. The other, all of crochet work with red border outlined with blue, yellow and white daisies, a dream of an apron, most Christmas-like. This booth was convened by Mrs. P. Tounsley, Mrs. H. Yorke, Mrs. J. Miller, Mrs. E. Pigden, Miss H. Blair, Mrs. G. Milligan, Mrs. G. Casey and Mrs. W. J. Mills.

W.M.S. Calendars

On this same booth, tucked in one corner were the blue and white calendars for 1952 of the Women's Missionary Society, showing scenes of various places of missionary work and personnel.

Truly, no little Miss Dollie need go with an abbreviated wardrobe this Christmas, for on the dolls' clothing booth, were more outfits than could almost be imagined, over which a flock of rougish clowns in polka dot red with ogling eyes and "Mona Lisa" smiles were doing a tightrope dance in reverse dangling by the tip of their puckish caps.

Surrounding the centring Christmas tree, beside the multitudinous outfits, were a cowgirl, fully outfitted with hat, chaps, holster, vest and the regulation accoutrements of the range, a rather worried looking Santa, not serious, but just the usual reflex action of the male sex when confronted the habiliments of the fair sex, and a dainty Miss in a chic tailor-made coat of bluish plaid with white fur collar, double breasted, and matching hat, and a sweet sunbonnet Sue in old fashioned print.

Lovely Pink Bassinette

There were blue satin dresses with matching bonnets; tartan berets, knit suits in heather wool for boy dolls, jumper suits, a lovely pink, brocaded satin dress, a satin dress of white shrouded in misty tulle, and the joy of any little girl's heart, a tiny pink satin bassinette complete with satin comforter with pale blue satin bows, and inside a golden-haired little doll in pink. In charge of these were, Mrs. E. Helm, Mrs. C. Burrowes, Mrs. M. Anger, Mrs. P. Chambers and Mrs. L. Wood.

Downstairs were the fancy work, the homecooking, the candy, the white elephant booth and the tea room. The fancy work was in charge of Mrs. W. D. Adam, president of the group, with Mrs. H. Brown convening, assisted by their helpers. There were fancy felt slippers; a white stocking doll with a red, red mouth and two yellow braids; socks of all sizes and kinds; felt hoods, appliqued with pretty felt flowers in pastel tints; shopping bags with realistic red poppies, pillow cases, lace-edged; children's sweaters; and a beautiful bed jacket in pale pink with bishop sleeves, embellished with satin bows, of pink. A fine display of dainty gifts.

Thronged With Buyers

The homecooking was thronged with buyers of the toothsome cakes, chocolate, cocoanut, cup cakes crowned with tinted icings and topped with maraschino cherry, cookies, hermits, rolls, relishes, jellies, and about everything one could wish for, which was eagerly purchased. Mrs. P. Gelsthrope, Mrs. J. Cunningham, Mrs. D. Kane, Mrs. J. Browning, Mrs. P. Thompson, Mrs. Williamson, Mrs. Fargey and Miss I. Muir were busily packaging and wrapping and making change, as were Mrs. T. Cathcart, Mrs. J. Cathcart, Mrs. Robinson and Mrs. Niblock.

The candy booth was pretty with its ruffles of white, green and red, with its myriad baskets of pale green, cellophane bags of honey popcorn, boxes of pink and white cocoanut creams, divinity fudge and maple creams. A most attractive assortment convened by Mrs. Benger, Mrs. Alex. Cunningham, Mrs. W. Marner, Mrs. C. Powell and Mrs. J. Fullerton.

As usual there was the White Elephant table, backgrounded by marching white elephants heading south, but quite unusual, was the small amount of articles seeking new resting places; new owners, but a nice selection withal; baby tears in tinfoil covered pots; a few little lonely-looking cacti, several books, games, glassware, costume jewellery, salts and peppers, crochet holders, zipper purse, basket of apples, basket of onions, two pie pumpkins, silver butter dish and pretty pot holders. In charge of these oddments were, Mrs. Vernon Weir and C.G.I.T. group.

Symphony in Silver

The spacious tea room was lovely with its frosted Christmas tree a-gleam with scintillating spheres of silver, blue, rose, gold green and red; its windows with more frosty evergreens and gleaming globes; its pillars, each ornamented with a big, green bow centred with more Christmas spheres; the twin tea tables each with its snow-white damask cloth, centred by white-frosted evergreen sprays surrounding a centre of sparkling spears, and flanked by gleaming tri-branched candelabra with tall green, flickering tapers, and at either end the shining silver services—the whole a symphony in silver and muted green— and round about the long tea tables, were the quartet guest tables, tastefully arranged, each with its white linen cloth, centred by shining silver cream and sugars.

Presiding at the silver services were: Mrs. Tayler and Mrs. Tounsley, Mrs. Bell, and Mrs. Gelsthrope, Mrs. Ketcheson and Mrs. McLean, Mrs. Brisbin and Mrs. Adam. The tea hostesses included Mesdames Keeler, Arnott, Barlow, Wallbridge, Argue, Kinnear, Stiver, Thorne, Smith and Cameron.

Dispensers of Good Things

Those who served in the kitchen were Mesdames Adams, McKenzie, Browning, Cathcart, Cole, Harvey and Kidd, while those who served the dainty sandwiches so attractively arranged with a red candle bolstered by two tiny Christmas canes on each serving tray, included Mesdames Merson, Broomfield, Hay, McDonald, Harper, Lattimer, Reid, Anger, Orr, Plunkett, Ward, Persons, Williamson, Ketcheson, Gryce, Richardson, Ward-Whate, Baker, Cormier, Marner, Ryan, Downey, Hill, Hayman, Cooke, Blue, Shorey, Chaplin, Locke, Michaud, White, Trill and Miss I. Muir.

Replenishing: Mesdames McCreary, Kelly, Ryan, Thom, Wilsey, Robinson, Jeffrey, Graham, Waldorf, Walker, Rathbun and Keeler, while those who arranged the attractive trays of cakes included Mrs. Sheffield, Mrs. Elliott, Mrs. Robertson, Mrs. Durno and Mrs. Merson.

Lovely Decorations

Mrs. G. Robertson and Mrs. J. Marshall were responsible for the very lovely decorations and Mrs. Reid, Mrs. Marvin and Mrs. Mantle were the ticket dispensers and in charge of the check room, Mrs. Alexander.

The tiny tots were allotted a room for themselves where toys and other trinkets kept them busy and happy during the time the several mothers were occupied. Mrs. C. Thorne and the C.G.I.T. girls were the guardians here.

Much credit is due the conveners, Mrs. W. J. Taylor, for a fine bazaar and to Mrs. M. Ward for a most delightful tea, both splendidly convened and so pleasantly culminated, and to all those who so willingly assisted to make it so.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Husband in service?—Make him proud of you while he's away!

My heart goes out to the young bride who has been married for only a short time and whose husband is already overseas.

She is missing out on the fun of keeping house together, on all the newly-wed experiences upon which are built the first foundations of married life. At the same time, being married, she is prevented from participating in most of the activities of her young unmarried friends. If she lives alone or, as one young woman writes me, if she is bunking with a couple of her old girl friends who are busy with dates, she is bound to feel lonely and forsaken unless—and this is the moral of my piece today—she thinks up some way of making these days and weeks and months, and perhaps even years, count for something.

How can she make them count? There are plenty of interesting and fruitful things she can do during this time which will be a real investment for the future. If she already has an earning capacity, and enjoys the work she knows how to do, she can get a job to earn money for future needs. For furniture for a home, perhaps; for the down payment on a plot of ground, or a house; or just for savings against a rainy day.

Continued Education

If she lives in a city which has a program of adult education at the local high school, she can continue her education, either with a view to supplementing the family income, or simply to widen or deepen the field of her own interests. If she has a flair for writing, or is fond of reading, she might be interested in a course in writing or literature. If she has a talent for drawing, and she can take lessons in painting or sculpture. If she is more interested in the household arts, she could take up sewing or cooking or interior decorating. Or if she wants to prepare herself for motherhood, she might take a course in child psychology. The possibilities are limitless.

If she wants something more informal, and perhaps less demanding, she might participate in some of the activities of the Y.W.C.A. She will find a variety of opportunities at the Y. There are hobby clubs, handicraft classes, lectures, discussion forums, swimming classes, hiking clubs to mention only a few. In fact, the Y, being inexpensive and casual, might serve as a kind of testing ground, a way of finding out what her interests are. And later, if she feels she would like more intensive work in any field, she can go on to a more professional course.

Social Service

Then there are the fields of community work or social service. The hospitals, both general and veterans' are begging for volunteer aids. The Red Cross needs people in all of its volunteer services. The Civilian Defense services are under-manned. All of these activities are interesting and rewarding, and, since most of them are carried on in groups, they offer excellent opportunitiy to make friends, which does much to relieve loneliness and boredom.

The fine thing about embarking on one of these adventures is that one never knows where it will lead. A course in child psychology, for example, may become so stimulating that a girl may decide she wants to take a herself for a job in this field. Or a course in photography at the full-fledged course to prepare Y may lead to professional work.

So, to you young wives whose husbands are sacrificing a part of their youth to the cause of freedom and democracy, and who write me asking whether it is right to go out to parties, to go with a boy who happens to take your fancy, or to write to an old flame, I have just this to say. Waiting for your husbands to return will be, of course, a period of trial. But it can also be your time of opportunity. It all depends on you, and what you want to make of it.

And one final word: If you follow some such plan as I have suggested, you'll not only never be at a loss for interesting things to tell your husband, when you write those daily or weekly letters, but, knowing that you're spending your time in useful activities, he will feel secure, and happy, and —best of all—proud of you!

BEAUTY

Affability a quality of charm.

Suppose today, the members of this beauty class forget about commercial blushes, the ruby lipstick and the chic hairdo and consider some of those inner qualities that are so important if we are to get along happily with our fellow creatures, enjoy popularity among our friends. External loveliness counts, but it is not the entire beauty story.

Personality is an over-worked word, but it is something we've all got. If it is of the compelling, admirable type, the wheels of life are oiled and one can live with oneself with a certain amount of contentment. Being nasty to others is being nasty to oneself, because ill-humor has a terrible throw-back.

Curtness, criticism, snobbishness, and a domineering attitude pay no dividends in the way of happiness or good looks. Unpleasant emotions can stamp themselves upon the human portrait. Of course, there are women with faces like angels and souls like rattlesnakes, but they are the exceptions. The lemonated woman looks sour. The sharp-tongued dame has steely eyes, while the suspicious femme has furtive ones. All who look can read these messages. And sometimes, when they read, they run away.

If a girl is to look really nice, she must be nice. Beauty starts in the heart and the mind and, though a girl has plain features, spiritual loveliness will supply radiance. It seems silly for any woman to spend time and money on dress, beauty treatments and cosmetics and ruin the effect of these pulchritude trimmings by being ill-mannered and ill-natured.

Success in business and social affairs is often won by kindliness, thoughtfulness, the friendly attitude. In every large shop and office there are the sweeties and the meanies, and you know what you think about them, if you are a career girl. The sweeties have the right outlook; the meanies seem to fancy that every hand is raised against them, that everybody is out to get the best of them, all of which, probably, is a lot of bunk.

Bitterness of feeling is expressed in a sharp glance of the eyes, a shrug of the shoulders, a tight expression of the lips. Bitter individuals disapprove of practically everything, a state of mind that cannot bring any rewards.

Some people are born with affability ,it would seem. Consider even the babies. One will reach out his arms, embrace a little companion. Another will haul off and sock him.

Christmas Box Candies

By MARY MOORE

If I laid all of the letters requesting candy recipes end to end —well, they wouldn't "girdle the globe" but they might girdle a fat lady.

So you are going to make candy for Christmas? I am glad I started early with those candies a few weeks ago for it gave you time to write and let me know your special desires. I have to cut this preamble short today, much as I love to talk to you, for I must give all the space I can to recipes.

CANDY-MAKERS:

Buy a candy thermometer. You will save yourselves hard cash if you do.

HOMEMADE TURKISH DELIGHT

Two cups corn syrup, 1 cup white sugar, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 4 tablespoons good quality gelatine, 1-2 cup cold water, juice and grated rind 1 medium-sized lemon, red coloring. Soak the gelatine in the cold water 10 minutes. Mix together the corn syrup, sugar and salt and heat to 270 deg. Fahr. (hard ball), using candy thermometer. Remove from heat and add the soaked gelatine, lemon juice and grated rind and a few drops of red coloring to make mixture a delicate rose color. Stir well, then pour into a pan 8 x 8 inches which has been very lightly buttered then rinsed with cold water. Let stand at least 8 hours. Cut into 1 inch squares and roll in a mixture of 2 tablespoons icing sugar and 1 teaspoon cornstarch.

FONDANT

CAREFUL:

This requires all of your skill.

Two tablespoons corn syrup, 2 cups white sugar, 1 cup hot water.

Mix together corn syrup, sugar and hot water, cover and bring to boiling point and leave cover on long enough to melt grains of sugar on sides of pan. Remove cover. Insert candy thermometer and boil uncovered until temperature reaches exactly 238 deg. Fahr. Immediately remove from heat and pour onto marble slab or tile counter or large china platter, which has been buttered then moistened with cold water. Do not scrape pan with spoon—just allow what syrup will pour out of pan readily to mix with what is first poured, but do not touch it. When syrup begin to "string" from pan add no more. Let it stand for about 2 minutes or until you can hold your hand on it comfortably or dint it with finger tip and dint leaves some impression. Now using a spatula, begin to knead it, using a backward and forward stroke. This creaming determines the fineness of the grain of your finished fondant.

Cream until fondant is cold, then put in lightly buttered wide-mouthed jar, cover tightly and let stand 24 hours.

Fondant is now ready for flavorings, colorings, fruit and nut additions that make chocolate centres so interesting. For instance

GLORIA CREAMS

To half of the above rule for Fondant add 4 drops coffee essence, 1-2 cup washed and dried white sultana raisins, 1-2 cup blanched almonds. Cream ripened fondant by working between warm palms. Add the raisins, flavoring and nuts by making a deep dint in centre and knead them into it evenly. Form into large "centres" 1 or 1 1-2 inches long. Roll lightly in cornstarch and allow to stand at room temperature for surface to harden.

CHOCOLATE DIPPING

The sure sign of the amateur is a greyish hue to the chocolate coating of her candies. Overheating causes it.

Put broken dipping chocolate (or semi-sweet bar chocolate) in bowl. Stand over warm and slightly steaming water. Do not hurry it. Do not let any water get into it. To begin dipping have bowl of chocolate standing in larger bowl containing warm water—not hot. Professional dippers use both their fingers and a dipping fork. Take your choice. Be sure to make little swirls on top. As soon as chocolate hardens a little heat it again. If you do not use up all you have softened it may be kept cold, and reheated and used another time.

CHOCOLATE FUDGE

Three-quarters cup corn syrup, 3 cups sugar, 1 tablespoon cornstarch, 1 1-2 cups milk, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 6 tablespoons soft butter, 2-3 to 3-4 cup good quality cocoa, 1 tablespoon genuine vanilla.

Mix first 4 ingredients, then add milk. Bring to boiling point, insert candy thermometer and heat to 243 deg. Fahr., stirring after it reaches 235 deg. Fahr., to prevent scorching. Meanwhile mix the soft butter, cocoa and vanilla in a small bowl to a smooth paste. As soon as 243 deg. F. is reached, remove fudge from heat, add cocoa and butter paste and beat until the mark of your wooden spoon begins to leave tracks which do not disappear when you are resting. Pour into buttered pan about 11 x 8 x 1 1-2 inches and press down fairly evenly with palm of hand. Mark into squares with back of knife. Cool.

NOTE:

Some readers want sponge candy. This is a rather long recipe but I will try to find room for it in the next week or so, so watch.

GOOD MANNERS

Today not much attention is paid to wedding anniversary symbols

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Next month some very dear friends of ours are going to celebrate their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary, and they are going to give a late-afternoon party on the Sunday following the actual date of the anniversary. Most of our mutual friends are in a dither about what to give them, for silver happens to be what they have most of, and it does seem foolish for all of us to give them more. Now my husband has come up with a suggestion of something we know they would like very much, as a matter of fact need very much. But it isn't silver. Would it be proper for us to give them a "not-silver" gift on this "silver" occasion?

Husband-and-Wife

Yes. . .yes. . .yes indeed! Today most people very sensibly don't pay much attention to giving the symbols formerly prescribed to the various wedding anniversaries. I urge you and your husband to give the hosts the present they want and need. . . they will bless you for your thoughtfulness and good sense.

Today the symbol of the anniversary is more often suggested in the gift-wrapping. The twenty-fifth anniversary present, for-example, may be festively wrapped in a radiant heavy silver paper, tied with silver string or silver ribbon. . .atop the package some shining silver leaves, or a pert branch of miniature silver leaves, or a cluster of tinkling silver bells. And the message written on the card in silver ink.

A gracious way to send Christmas card to mother and father and children

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When one is sending a Christmas card to a mother and father and wishes to include the children, please tell me how it should be written, both on envelope and card inside.

C. C.

The best way is to address the envelope to "Mr. and Mrs." and then on the card write your message to the family, mentioning the names specifically. For example, "Heartiest Christmas greetings to you, John and Mary, and to Joan and Joe. A Happy New Year too from all here to all there! George and Christine and Carol."

Her son killed in Korea. . .should she send Christmas cards this year?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My son was "killed in action" in Korea last July, and I would like to know if you think I should send Christmas cards this year. (I am a widow.) I certainly do not feel like sending cards, but if you think that my friends would expect to receive Christmas cards from me, I will of course send them.

Lillian N.

You yourself have really answered your question, my dear lady, by your deeply touching and so-understandable words, "I certainly do not feel like sending cards this year." If your heart and spirit are too sorrowful, too heavily-laden, for you to take on such a "memoried" responsibility, I think that you should not even consider adding this burden of sending Christmas cards, to the burden you already are carrying in your heart. Please, please don't attempt this task if you feel it will be too wearying. Your friends, with the gentle understanding they would have, could not possibly expect you to send Christmas cards to them. (And may I please have the privilege and honor of bowing my sympathy to you . . . I have a very personal understanding of your sorrow.)

Fashion Flashes

GOOD CUTTING is vital to prevent bulkiness in those comfy alpaca-lined coats. Slim enough for a town coat, yet easy to wear, is a design in fine black and white herringbone tweed with an alpaca pile lining.

STEPPING out smartly again is the plain reptile pump, with polished alligator favored—not only in brown, but in red, blue and quite some green. Black and gray lizard pumps are selling, too.

MELROSE

Melrose—Mr. and Mrs. Clare Weese recently entertained Mr. and Mrs. Charles Treverton and boys of Plainfield and Mr. and Mrs. J. Emerson, 2nd line.

Mr. and Mrs. Grant McLaren lately visited relatives at Madoc.

The social evening sponsored by the Melrose W.I. in the Shannonville Orange Hall was largely attended and everyone reports a good time.

News of the accidental shooting of the late Edward Meagher was received with much regret and the community extends sincere sympathy to the bereaved relatives.

Saskatchewan Farmers Plan To Start Making Margarine

Saskatoon — (CP) — A group of Saskatchewan farmers have an about face on margarine. Instead of fighting it, they'll make the butter substitute themselves.

"We have no prejudice against margarine any more," said George Urwin, president of Saskatchewan Federated Co-operatives.

C. T. Gooding, manager of the Saskatchewan Dairy Pool, added: "Margarine has been giving the dairy industry a ride. We believe that rather than have margarine hurt us, we should have it help us."

Last year 10,000,000 pounds of margarine were brought into Saskatchewan from outside the province. The Saskatchewan farmers decided they might as well cut themselves in on the profits.

"We're going to take the ball away from the soap companies and other manufacturers of margarine and keep the savings for Saskatchewan," said Mr. Urwin, whose 300 retail co-operative stores have been selling between 6,000 and 7,000 pounds of imported margarine a week at about 43 cents a pound. Butter is selling here at 69 cents.

The dairy pool and the federated co-operatives are controlled by some 120,000 Saskatchewan farmers. The two organizations have organized a subsidiary, Western Foods Ltd., to manufacture margarine. Equipment owned by the dairy pool will be used.

Use Dairy Products

An aim of the new enterprise will be to make maximum use of dairy products. Legislation may be necesary. Saskatchewan law now requires that at least 80 per cent of any butter substitute be vegetable oils. Western Foods Ltd. will be able to incorporate about 16 per cent whole milk in its product, but Mr. Urwin and Mr. Gooding would like to see the proportions reversed.

Sponsors of the plan see another long-range advantage for Saskatchewan farmers, who long have been urged to lessen their reliance on grain growing. They will encourage farmers to grow sunflowers, whose seeds yield a high-grade vegetable oil.

Southern Manitoba has had considerable success in growing sunflowers for salad oils. In northern Saskatchewan, about 100 experimental sunflower plots were set out this year. Already there is a vegetable oil extraction plant in Saskatoon, which has been processing rape-seed oil for low-quality European margarine.

The two influential co-operatives do not speak for the entire Saskatchewan dairy industry, but their decision to get into the margarine business marks a big step from the previous stand. Only a year ago Mr. Gooding, voicing scepticism regarding a news story that some dairy farmers cashed their cream cheques in order to buy margarine, said:

"A dairy farmer would be a fool to cut his own throat, and dairy farmers are not fools."

Won't Hurt Dairying

Announcing the new plan, Mr. Urwin said: "Before very long you will be able to buy co-operatively produced margarine. For the life of me I cannot see that this is going to hurt the dairy industry in any way because, as I say, the dairy pool came in with us on the proposition."

Federated Co-operatives will distribute the margarine through its 300 stores. The dairy pool will take care of selling it to independent retail outlets.

Butter production in Canada, now at the lowest level in 20 years, has dropped by about 40,000,000 pounds a year since the manufacture of margarine was declared legal by the judicial committee of the privy council nearly three years ago.

Besides competition from margarine, dairy men blame the decline in butter production on the difficulty of obtaining labor for dairy farms and the relatively high returns to farmers for other products such as beef cattle, grain, hogs and poultry.

Saskatchewan Dairy Pool won't go out of the butter business. It expects to continue processing into butter all the cream its farm members have to offer. But it will keep its facilities going full tilt with margarine an added product.

MADOC JUNCTION

Eggleton Church W. A. Sponsors Fine Bazaar

Madoc Junction—The bazaar sponsored by the Eggleton Church W.A. was held last Friday night at the home of Mrs. Harold Chambers with a good attendance.

Prior to the bazaar, there was a short program, presided over by Mrs. Hugh McMullen which included community singing with Mrs. George Ashley of West Huntingdon playing the accompaniments.

Mrs. Clarence Fitchett was called on and warmly welcomed the friends from West Huntingdon and Stirling, and on behalf of the W.A. thanked Mrs. Chambers for opening her home for the bazaar.

Mrs. Russell Sills, of West Huntingdon, gave a humorous reading which was greatly enjoyed.

Miss Sandra Chambers contributed a piano solo.

A "flower contest" was put on by Mrs. Gordon Nelson and a "menu contest" by Mrs Hugh McMullen.

Refreshments and coffee were then served by ladies.

Farm Produce

The farm produce table with potatoes, vegetables and lovely potted plants, was in charge of Mrs. Hugh McMullen.

The candy table with Mrs. Maurice Clancy and Mrs. Gordon Clarke conveners, looked attractive with boxes of pop corn balls and a great variety of homemade candy.

The home cooking table, in charge of Mrs. Harry Clarke, and Mrs. Bert Reide, with appetizing cakes, cookies, tarts and prints of butter were quickly sold out.

Apron Display

Mrs. Carl Bridges and Mrs. Clarence Fitchett were conveners of the apron display where eager purchasers vied with each other for the lovely and practical aprons.

The novelty table at which Mrs. Gordon Nelson, Mrs. Harlow and Mrs. H Chambers were conveners had a beautiful assortment of fancy work, table runners, crocheted doilies and table mats, embroidered scarves and clothes pin bags, pin cushions and oven mitts, as well as boxes of Christmas cards which were soon sold.

Altogether the bazaar was a splendid success and a nice sum was realized for the W.A. work of the church.

The ladies wish to thank all who patronized the bazaar and also every one who contributed in any way in making it successful.

RAWDON

Rawdon—The first euchre party sponsored by River Valley Women's Institute was recently held at the school house with a large attendance. It is hoped to have a series of euchre parties this winter and begin at 8.30 sharp and play ten rounds. The proceeds of the evening were $11.10.

STIRLING

Baby Band Leaders Sponsor Party

Stirling — Last Thursday afternoon the leaders of St. Paul's United Church Baby Band sponsored a Christmas party in the Sunday School rooms for the babies and their mothers.

Eleven mothers and 17 children attended the party also a few grandmothers and several members of St. Paul's W.M.S. The leaders had mailed out 40 invitations and they have over 60 babies' names on the roll.

The leader Mrs. Sid Demorest conducted the worship service which included the singing of "Praise Him, All Ye Little Children." The assistant leader, Mrs. Harold West, presided at the piano and she also constructed central decoration. This was a lighted church covered with glittering snow and surrounded with Santa and his reindeer. All was enclosed with a white picket fence and inside each corner was a small Christmas tree ornament. This decoration was placed on a table covered with a linen cloth.

Mite Boxes

During the service each child came to the front and placed their mite box on the table and the older children also carried up those of the wee babies. Mrs. Demorest read "The story of the pictures on the mite boxes." Mrs. John B. Thompson and Mrs. Mabel Megginson counted the contents which was around $19 and prepared the mite boxes which were again given out after the meeting.

The leaders plan to make home-and-home calls to gather in the other boxes before Christmas. All sang a Christmas hymn "Away in a Manger". Some of the older children assisted with the program.

Graduation Service

In the graduation service from Baby Band to Mission Band, five certificates were given out as follows: Robert Paul Leury, William Clarence West, Barbara Chambers, Robert Maurice Bell and Brenda Adeline Stewart.

A collection was taken to help defray expenses and this was gathered by Master Herbie Demorest and amounted to over $2.

The guests were seated in a circle and the small children occupied kindergarten chairs. All were given serviettes with Santa smiling in the corner and appetizing refreshments of sandwiches and cookies were served by the two leaders assisted by Mrs. Roy Duffin. There was a glass of milk for the children and tea for the mothers.

Several members of the W.M.S. furnished food for this party even though they didn't attend.

The children in the River Valley district were enrolled in the "River Valley Baby Band" in January 1951 so they will have their own contribution to send to Presbyterial despite the fact that several families in that district are members of the St. Paul's United Church, Stirling.

Mrs. Earl Bailey assisted the leaders in the kitchen.

At the close of a social half hour, Mrs. Maurice Bell extended a vote of thanks on behalf of the mothers and children to Mrs. Demorest and Mrs. West for the lovely Christmas party arranged for their enjoyment.

The remaining sandwiches and cookies were served to the junior choir at the close of their practice in the auditorium of the church and these youngsters enjoyed the treat.

Dr. Sidney Gilchrist Speaks on 'The Missionary's Task'

Tweed — A large congregation attended the Sunday morning service in St. John's United Church, Tweed, to welcome Mr. Sidney Gilchrist, M.D., of Dondi, Africa, as guest speaker.

Rev. A. L. Sisco B.D., minister conducted the order of service. The senior choir sang as an anthem, "O Come Let us Worship," with Mrs. M. G. Dales singing the solo. The junior choir sang "How Lovely Are Thy Dwellings."

Sidney Gilchrist was born in Pictou County, N.S. He attended Pictou academy and Dalhousie University, taking the arts and medical course. After graduation Dr. Gilchrist spent more than a year as county officer, Dale County Health Unit, Ozark, Alabama.

Medical Missionary

In 1928 he was appointed as medical missionary to Angola, West Africa. Following two years of language study in Portugal, reached the field in 1930.

Village Clinics

Dr. Gilchrist is known and respected for his service in the Dondi hospital. The treating of diseased persons, surgically and medically has created a deep interest in Christ in addition to the physical benefits provided. In addition he organized village clinics whereby the native dispensers would administer injections of chaulmoogra oil to arrest leprosy, thus laying the foundation for more adequate treatment of this dread disease.

On arrival in Canada for furlough early in 1940, Dr. Gilchrist enlisted in the R.C.A.M.C. and served overseas as a medical officer in North Africa and Italy. In recognition of his services he was appointed a member of the military division of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire.

On his release from military service in 1945, Dr. Gilchrist enrolled in the public health course, University of Toronto, to better prepare himself for medical missionary service in Africa. In his remarks he said how good it was to be back for special reasons, to share in meeting friends and loved ones. He paid a wonderful tribute to Miss Millicent House who is also a missionary worker in Dondi, Africa. She is a sister of Mr. Carl House of Madoc, and well known in Tweed, where she visited during the past year.

Look on Bright Side

He spoke of the task the missionaries have in putting things right, but they look on the bright side of things and see where the sun is shining, and if one lets Him, God can do great things.

He said "there were a lot of people not interested in foreign missions and people have been heard to say "leave the Africans alone", but he said "thank God we haven't left the Africans alone. They are just as capable a people as we are capable, and are showing a wonderful ability to rise, and what we need is more missionaries, more doctors, and nurses and more men and women well trained to go to Africa to reach out and establish more churches and first aid posts.

"While they are doing their best to carry o nthe work they need our help here at home through the missionary and maintenance and Women's Missionary Societies and added that this work is only made possible through the people using the red portion of the church envelopes. This is the one message the people of Africa send to us."

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 6, 1951

More Than 100 Canadians Killed in Korea During 1951; U.S. Honor Awarded to 'Pats'

Ottawa, Dec. 6 — (CP) — Canadian troops went into battle in 1951 for the first time since the Second World War, in defence of the principles on which the United Nations is founded.

The first Canadians to die in action while their country remained technically at peace died in Korea late last winter. Others died under the U.N. banner through the spring, in the savage Chinese offensive of late April, and through the long, dull summer and fall while the armistice talkers wrangled and an uneasy mixture of lethargy and violence held sway in the hills.

As the year drew to a close, the number killed exceeded 100. By world war standards, the cost was not great numerically, but its toll struck home in cities, towns and hamlets across the country.

The dead and wounded came from the 25th Brigade, the special force formation raised in mid-1950 for U.N. service and united for battle in Korea last May after one battalion — the 2nd Battalion of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry—had fought alone for several months.

Navy, Air Force Shares

The navy's destroyer flotilla served off the Korea coasts through the year without battle casualties, it's three warships alternately escorting aircraft carriers and ranging the shores for bombardments of enemy troops and installations.

It took five destroyers to keep three serving off Korea. The five, relieving one another on a fairly regular schedule,' were Cayuga, Athabaskan, Sioux, Nootka and Huron.

The air force's 426 Transport Squadron moved its base from McChord Field, Wash., back to Montreal's Dorval Airport in June, but kept flying the trans-Pacific airlift as it has since July, 1950, without a major accident or loss of life despite thousands of hazardous flying hours.

There were at various times during the year indications that U.N. countries might be asked for greater contributions but Canada's share appeared to have levelled off with this three-edged commitment, involving possibly 8,500 men in the theatre of operations plus thousands of others at home preparing to relieve those already there.

The big news of the year centered around the 25th Brigade. The big news in the brigade was made by the Princess Patricias.

Citation for Patricias

When the Chinese launched their April offensive, the Patricias "stood like rocks" and won an American presidential citation, a coveted unit award, for being one of the units whose courage turned potential defeat into victory.

They had then been in the line two months as part of a commonwealth brigade. They had been in Korea since December, 1950. Two days after they went into action, on Feb. 19, it was announced in Ottawa that the remainder of the brigade would leave its training base at Fort Lewis, Wash., to join them.

Brig. John Rockingham's 25th came together in Korea and went into action as a formation in late May. In May, too, it was announced that the brigade would become part of the 1st Commonwealth Division, but it was several months before this union of British, Canadian, Australian, New Zealand and Indian troops actually materialized.

The Patricias, since they were the first Canadians into Korea, were picked as the first unit to leave there under a rotation plan announced in August on the basis that no soldier should serve in that theatre more than one year if possible and, above all, no more than one winter.

Replacements Move

As hundreds of the 2nd Battalion Patricias started moving homeward late in the year, men of the 1st Battalion reached Korea from Canada to take their places. Decision to use paratroops of the 23rd Airborne Brigade in Canada to replace the men in Korea was announced along with the rotation plan.

The only battalion affected by the rotation plan this winter however is the Patricias. The other will start coming home in the spring — from the 2nd Battalion of the Royal Canadian Regiment and the 2nd Battalion of the famed Van Doos, the Royal 22nd Regiment which in November for five days bore the brunt of Chinese communist assaults on a vital ridgetop position 40 miles north of Seoul.

The Canadian brigade in Korea added new honors to Canada's great battle records, and from all indications more than lived up to Canada's proud military traditions. In the words of Maj-Gen. A. J. H. Cassels, O.C. of the 1st Commonwealth Division , the Canadians have been magnificent."

Released Prelate Asserts Right to Title of Archbishop, Will Not Yield to Govt. Pressure

Krasic, Yugoslavia, Dec. 6 — (AP) — Archbishop Alojzijc Stepinac today grimly asserted his right to the title of archbishop. He said his release from prison changed his situation "only slightly."

The Roman Catholic primate of Yugoslavia revealed that conditions of his release by Premier Marshall Tito's government included a ban on his performing the duties of an archbishop and confined him to this tiny Croatian village where he was born.

But in an interview, Monsignor Stepinac firmly declared today: "I am the legitimate archbishop and I am not a former archbishop. If the Pope wants it, I am ready to quit my archbishopric, but I will never give it up to government pressure."

(In Rome, Vatican circles took quick exception to the conditions of the prelate's release and declared "no civil authority" could oust him from his place as spiritual head of Yugoslav Catholicism.)

The archbishop said he had not asked for the conditional release from Lepoglava prison granted him yesterday.

He had served five years of a 16-year sentence imposed in November, 1946, after his conviction on charges of collaborating with the Nazi occupiers of his country. He denied the charge, levelled against him two years before Yugoslavia broke with the Russians.

Not Yet Settled

Monsignor Stepinac said today major issues between the church and Tito's communist government are "not yet settled."

"There must be an agreement based on honesty and the essential conditions demanded by the Catholic church," he said.

"These include church marriages, religious education in the schools and a free Catholic press. Church marriage must be defended to the last breath, for it is a sacrament established by the good Lord and man has no right to change it."

The 53-year-old high churchman indicated he is willing to live the rest of his life as a simple parish priest in the church where he was baptized.

Monsignor Stepinac arose at 4 a.m. today to celebrate mass. He appeared in excellent health.

The small church was filled with several hundred worshippers.

After mass, the archbishop talked with correspondents in the vestibule of the church.

"I am personally very satisfied because I am fulfilling my duty," he said. "I can perform my priestly duties here just as I did in prison (he was allowed to maintain a small chapel near his cell).

"I can do my duty here and I am willing to stay here my whole life."

The archbishop said he did not want to discuss political questions, but firmly declared that "veryone unjustly attacked has a right to defend himself."

"However," he added, "now it is better to pacify the situation and not inflame passions."

Letters to Santa Contain Some Eye-Openers

New York, Dec. 6 (AP) — Santa Claus finds nothing backward about the 1951 crop of juveniles.

Postmaster Albert Goldman has made public some eye-openers among the hundreds of Christmas letters he gets.

A tyke in Middletown, N.Y., listed just about everything a kid could want. But, taking no chances, he added "and everything else for a little boy like me."

Even offered Santa a bribe too.

"On the kitchen table there will be some apple pie and a glass of home made grape wine for you," he wrote.

A little girl named Barbara wants a baby gorilla "more than anything in the world."

A young boy—and who do you suppose coached him? — suggested Santa "bring my mommy a mink coat and my daddy a car."

Another lad took a dim view of his brother and two sisters. sisters.

"I really think you shouldn't bring them anything for Xmas," he told Santa. "They really are very bad."

The clincher came from eight soldiers in Germany:

"Dear Santa Claus: Please send us rifles that never get dirty, boots that always stay shined, beds that always stay made tight and uniforms that never need cleaning or pressing. If the above articles are unobtainable, we would be very happy with a discharge."

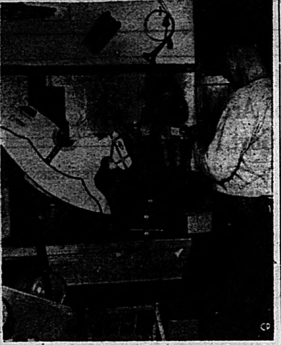
Santa's Kingston Workshop



CP

Cells at Kingston, Ont, penitentiary are transformed into individual workshops as prisoners repair toys to brighten Christmas for some of the city's underprivileged children. Here a prisoner sorts some of the toys sent in by Kingston service clubs. The men hope the plan, carried out during their leisure hours, will be extended and that other Ontario cities will send broken toys to the penitentiary for repair throughout the year. FRANKFORD

Frankford — The third meeting of the Young Adult Group of the Frankford United Church was held in the Rose-Lowery Hall on Wednesday evening, with approximately 40 present. A sing-song, led by Eernie Wallace, opened the meeting.

Sid and Evelyn Martin took charge of an inspirational worship service.

Rev. MacEachern then took charge of the meeting for the business portion. In the temporary absence of the secretary, Myrtle Poland took charge of the secretarial duties.

After some discussion, it was moved that the meetings be held monthly instead of bi-monthly. Meetings will be held on either the first or second Monday night of the month, depending on what night the Young People's Union will be using the Rose-Lowery Hall. It was decided that no meeting would be held in December, in view of the many activities of that month.

The report of the nominating committee was given, and several nominations were made from the floor. From the large number of nominations, the following slate of officers was chosen:

Honorary president, Rev. MacEachern; president, Claude and Marjorie Moran; secretary treasurer, Gene Lohnes; vice president, Ray Scott; pianist, Evelyn Martin; assistant secretary treasurer, Ray Scott; conveners, Sid and Evelyn Martin, Preston and Jean Chase, Jack and Ruth Beach, Jim and Myrtle Poland.

Several names were submitted for the club, and on a vote taken, the name "Three 'M' Club" was chosen. The three "M's" stand for Mr., Mrs. and Miss, thus keeping in mind the young adult status of the club.

On completion of the evening's business, Ruth Beach took charge for a brief, but enjoyable period of recreation.

Bountiful refreshments brought to a close a very successful meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lohnes spent Thursday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lohnes.

Mr. and Mrs. George Wannamaker and family of Wellington Street have moved to Deseronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Milford Macauley have moved into the dwelling on Wellington Street, formerly occupied by Mr. and Mrs. George Wannamaker.

BUT ACT NOW...

Scrambling to make a Will when danger threatens is probably better than not making one at all but the preparation of such an important document should not be left to the confusion of a last minute rush.

Making a Will is something that can easily be attended to before emergencies arise. This duty should not be neglected. The logic and advantages of appointing a Corporate Executor and Trustee are obvious and well recognized.

All that is needed to get the job done, and done well, is to ask us to help you plan your Will, which we shall gladly do without charge. You can then have it drawn in proper legal form, naming The Royal Trust Company your Executor and Trustee, execute the Will and file it with us for safekeeping.

AROUND THE HOME

There are many other interesting little ideas like these in the booklet "AROUND THE HOME". Write for your copy to Tom Gard, c/o MOLSON'S (ONTARIO) LIMITED, P.O. Box 490, Adelaide St. Station, TORONTO.

Tom Gard's Note Book

The Gards rely almost entirely on native material for Christmas decorations, other than lights and fancy tree ornaments.

Every year the whole family has a cone-hunting spree in the country. Occasionally we draw the ire of some "country cousin" but we usually try to secure them in well-wooded areas that are little frequented. We journey forth again when it comes time to gather evergreen boughs for our wreaths and other decorative purposes.

Christmas Table Centre

Nothing could be more typically Canadian than the Christmas table centre we used last year, with its pressed oak and maple leaves and collection of cones. Some of the cones can be dipped in bright red and bright green paint to add color to the arrangement. This year we plan to include evergreens to replace the leaves. In case you are interested in making the candle stick holders, a couple of designs are illustrated.

Cone Place Markers

To complete the slogan "let's make it an evergreen Christmas", place markers are made from cones. Gather cones from the Austrian pine, larch and Jack pine when they are dry. Leave them in a sunny window or on top of the furnace overnight. The warmth will open them. Three types of cone place markers that have been used are illustrated. The whole family has a share in making them. This adds to the interest and the anticipation for that day of days so quickly approaching. It is fun drawing on one's imagination to help make the cones look as realistic as possible. It is surprising how closely some do resemble different types of birds when they are carefully selected, placed and finished. All I hope is that you have as much fun in your house as we have in our preparing for Christmas.

IVANHOE

White Lake Church Holds Bazaar, Tea

Ivanhoe — A successful bazaar and afternoon tea was held at White Lake Church, Crookston, on Wednesday afternoon. The guests were received by Mrs. J. B. Beckel, Mrs. Earl Holland and Mrs. William French.

Mrs. J. Wesley Wickens president of the W.A. presided over the following program. She extended a warm welcome to all present and read a short poem "Helping Others." The scripture found in Luke 10: 25-37 was read by Mrs. Carman Mullett

Visitors Present

Visitors responded to the roll call from Beulah United, Ivanhoe, Salem United, Trinity United, Madoc, St. Peters Presbyterian, Madoc, Hazzard's United and St. Andrew's Presbyterian, West Huntingdon.

A piano solo was given by Mrs. Edwin Foster, of Tweed, followed by a reading "Learning to Drive an Auto," by Mrs. Earl McMaster of Ivanhoe. Solo "It is no Secret" by Mrs. George Sine of Salem.

Mrs. Claude Barnett of Tweed, guest speaker, in her opening remarks recalled attending church here when a child in paying tribute to members of Bethesda church said, there never were finer people. There is a certain seat in this church that means much to me and I cherish the memory of once worshiping here with my father and other members of my family."

Mrs. Barnett based her address on "When they saw the star, they rejoiced with exceeding great joy." Matt. 2-10.

"The wise men had come to the end of their long journey. They were men of wisdom and understanding; but here was mystery beyond their comprehension. Once again we come to the season when we remember the following of the star but we are blest, for what was hidden to them, to us has been revealed. God gave His only son, Jesus gave His life for us, the wise men brought gifts, we who have so much what have we given? How far does our sharing extend?

What Have We Left?

"It matters not so much the amount we give let us ask how much have we left.

"It is the men and women who call themselves Christian who have made communism possible because they have abandoned their spiritual stewardship.

"As we near the Christmas season let us not let the little things crowd out the most important. Let us remember the babe in the manger and fall down and worship Him."

Mrs. Cecil Holland on behalf of the W.A. expressed thanks to Mrs. Barnett for her fine address and to all for coming to help make the bazaar a success.

A delicious tea was served by the ladies and all were invited to the basement where the bazaar was held.

The booths were very attractive.

The fancy work booth was convened by Mrs. J. Wesley Wickens and Mrs. Carman Mullett. Here practically any useful article was found including children's dresses, aprons plain and fancy, towels, knitted goods, pot-holders, handkerchiefs and novelties could be purchased.

The home cooking table, convened by Mrs. Percy Downey, Mrs. Wm. French, offered an array of delicious homemade cookies, cakes, tarts and buns.

The country store did a thriving business, an array of vegetables, pickles, fruit, jam, butter and cream. This table was in charge of Mrs. Elmer Wood and Mrs. Elvin Holland.

The fish pond was well patronized with Mrs. Carman Downey and Mrs. Cecil Holland in charge.

The proceeds amounted to $83.36. The ladies of White Lake W.A. are to be congratulated on the success of this event.

RAWDON

Executive Meeting Held at Wellmans

Rawdon—An executive meeting of Wellman's W.M.S. Mission Band and Baby Band was held on Thursday and all officers were in attendance except the assistant leader of the Mission Band.

Mrs. Lindsay Pollock opened the service with a brief worship after which the year's work was fully discussed.

It was noted that during 1951 there were three life memberships in the Mission Band. It was hoped that these girls would continue to be interested in Missions and that they would join missionary auxiliaries later and become workers there. Younger women are needed to give good leadership as they assume homes of their own.

All presidents of the three organizations hope to improve their departments in the new year just ahead.

It was decided to hold another executive meeting in 1952 to make future plans.

At Easter 1951 Wellman's Mission Band under the leadership of Mrs. Burton Morton and Mrs. Carman Nix took charge of a special Easter service. This was so successful that the community hope it will be an annual event.

In August the Mission Band visited the W.M.S. and gave most of the program. The W.M.S. women thought this visitation was a step in the right direction and that they should entertain the younger groups and take a greater interest in their work. Some thought it wise to have get-togethers twice yearly. This will be decided at the 1952 executive.

Study Book

A discussion re the Mission Band Study Book was of interest as all were agreed that the study had been most helpful and interesting and that the children had enjoyed the book with only one person in full charge for the whole term. Mrs. Morton gave the chapter in story form and reviewed the previous chapter and this all gave a vivid picture to the children and it kept the chapter better in their memory.

The W.M.S. women will put together a quilt and have it complete for the Band to send for supply work. Each child is asked to bring one quarter yard of the ladies can ponder over and over sewing, or purchased in a store, to the next meeting. The auxiliary ladies will do the work from there until the completed quilt.

Those in attendance at this executive meeting all thought it an instructive afternoon with many points brought up which the ladies can ponder over and decide what is best to do.

The Wellman's Mission Band leaders were commended for their excellent leadership all through the year.

Up to Her Old Tricks

Arizona police met with surprisingly little resistance when they captured Ruth Judd, trunk murderess, in Phoenix, after 24-hour search. The 48-year-old red-headed "tiger woman" had, for the fourth time, escaped from the state hospital for the insane at Phoenix, Ariz., where she was sent in 1931 after being convicted in the gruesome trunk slaying of two girl friends. The above picture was taken when she was captured and returned to the hospital after her sensational 1939 escape. — Central Press Canadian.

Canadian Delegate to U.N. Has Little Time for Fun

By NORMAN ALTSTEDTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Paris, Dec. 6 — (CP) — The work day of a Canadian delegate to the United Nations' Assembly leaves little time for fun — even in Paris.

If Maurice Bourget, civil engineer and Liberal member of parliament for Levis, had any misconceptions about a diplomat's way of life, they were corrected the hard way. He's been working a 12-hour day, representing Canada in two U.N. Assembly committees in emergencies.

Bourget said in an interview that he knew little about the U.N. before his appointment to the Canadian delegation to the Sixth Assembly. But since opening day Nov. 6 he has dived into the intricacies of both the economic and budgetary committees, where he has spoken as Canada's representative.

He approves highly of the system of appointing M.P.s to Canadian delegations. He feels it gives them a better understanding of the problems of international relations.

There are four M.P.s and one senator now on the Canadian delegation. All political parties are expected to be represented on the delegation with scheduled switches in personnel coming after Christmas.

The M.P.s attempt to keep in touch also with what's happening in Canada and their constituencies in particular.

Reads Correspondence

That's how Bourget starts his working day. At about 8.30 a.m. he reads his correspondence, which includes a report from his secretary in Ottawa.

At 9:30 he attends the daily meeting of all members of the Canadian delegation, where the representative in each committee outlines to the others what happened in his particular committee the day before and what will be coming up.

That meeting usually lasts an hour. Then the delegates and advisers are driven to the Palais de Chaillot for the Assembly meetings.

Morning meetings of the U.N. last usually until about 1 p.m., the committees don't open their afternoon meetings until about 3:15. But the luncheon hour usually involves conferences with other delegations over the dining table.

Following an afternoon meeting recently, Bourget went back to his hotel at about 6 p.m. and went to work on a radio talk he was preparing for the CBC. He took 1½ hours off for dinner and then went back to work on the radio address, finally getting to bed at about 11.30 p.m.

SETTLE LIBEL SUIT

Freehold, N.J., Dec. 6 (AP)—Frank Hague, deposed New Jersey democratic boss, last night settled a $2,000,000 libel suit against him out of court. Hague settled with lawyer John Warren, a longtime political opponent, on the condition that the amount of the settlement would not be made public.

A reliable source said however "you can rest assured it was substantial."

In his suit, Warren claimed Hague "falsely and maliciously wrote and published and caused to be written and published" words referring to Warren as a "tax rackateer."

Oliphant Resigns As Chief Legal Officer of U.S.

Washington, Dec. 6 (AP) — Charles Oliphant resigned as chief legal officer of the United States Internal Revenue Service yesterday, deploring "vilification" and piling another sensation on the heap already collected by a Congressional investigating committee.

As Oliphant gave up his $14,800-a-year job, Frank Nathan, a self-described "promoter," went before the inquiry group to deny a charge that he tried to shake down a wealthy Chicago lawyer for $500,000 with promises to "fix" his tax troubles through influential friends in Washington officialdom.

Nathan shouted that the accusation was "a dirty, filthy lie."

The conflict in testimony brought an announcement from representative Cecil King (Dem. Calif.), chairman of the committee, that a transcript of the testimony about the alleged shakedown would be sent to the department of justice for perjury action.

"It has been quite clear in the last 24 hours that one or more persons perjured themselves before this committee," King said.

METERS SOON READY

Toronto, Dec. 6 — (CP)— Toronto motorists will have to pay 10 cents next January for the privilege of parking at the curb in downtown Toronto. Parking meters expected to be installed by then will give half an hour of parking time in the centre of the area and a full hour at the outskirts.

Sartorial Color Puts Army On Top in Fashion World

By DOUGLAS HOW
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the Canadians in Germany, Dec. 6—(CP)—Ladies, the army, of all people, is stealing your thunder in the hat line.

Indeed, now that this trend has received the official sanction of no less a military deity than Gen. Eisenhower himself, it is apt to report that never has such a surge of fashion made itself felt in the army's ranks.

As one spectacular example, eight Canadians arrived at an officers' club in Hannover one night recently in eight different kinds or shades of headdress.

The Eisenhower blessing came at the big Rotterdam ceremony in which he took the 27th Brigade into his Atlantic Pact forces. There he looked down upon a sea of scarlet, the berets of the 1st Infantry Battalion, and he said in the most stimulating way that no other soldier had better earned the right to a headgear of his own choice than the Canadian infantryman.

This firmly entrenched the scarlet beret—the soldiers call it the cherry beret—in its position as the extreme element in this fashion movement. Its lesser fellows are the green berets of the Rifle Battalion, the Glengarries and Balmorals of the Highland Battalion and the navy blue berets coming in for the other arms such as engineers and signals.

In addition, the soldiers are looking forward to the day when they can abandon their khaki berets for work hours and don the new peaked, C.W.A.C.-like cap reported coming in.

But the officers are the spearhead of this dress development. They dress up at nights now either in khaki serge or the tight-fitting navy blue No. 1 dress and they top this off with splendid variety in hats.

Take the eight officers arriving at the club. They boasted a maroon airborne beret, a scarlet beret, a Glengarry, a Guardsman's hat, the somewhat similar No. 1 dress hat, navy blue and braided, a blue wedge cap, a Balmoral and one brave if obsolescent traditionalist in khaki.

Justice Rules Wife Entitled To Share Estate

Toronto, Dec. 6 — (CP) — A wife who returns to her husband after a separation and resumes normal married life is entitled to share in the husband's estate, a court has ruled here.

Mr. Justice F. H. Barlow of the Ontario Supreme Court Tuesday awarded Mrs. Robert Wiggins the net value of the estate of her late husband, a farmer in Mara township in the Oshawa area. Two of Mr. Wiggins' children by a former marriage had claimed that the widow relinquished her dower rights in the separation agreement and that the agreement still was in effect.

But Mr. Justice Barlow said evidence showed that the couple entered into the separation agreement Sept. 5, 1946, but resumed normal married life Dec. 12, 1946, and so continued until Mr. Wiggins died early in 1951.

Stepinac Says Release Act Of Mercy by Tito

Belgrade, Dec. 6—(Reuters)—Archbishop Stepinac, Yugoslavia's senior Roman Catholic prelate, said his release after five years in prison was in many ways an act of mercy by Marshal Tito's government, the official Yugoslav agency Tanjug reported today.

In his first public statement after leaving Lepoglava prison, the Tanjug interviewer said the archbishop told him that he could not say that his 16-year prison sentence was an act of repression of religious freedom.

"It is my own wish and I shall do my best not to come into conflict with the people's authority," the reporter quoted the archbishop as saying.

The 53-year-old prelate said he was not "forced at all to perform hard physical duties" while in prison.

While in prison, "I was busy with my work, with my books, writing and translating."

Brewery Truck Driver Best In Every Class

Toronto, Dec. 6 (CP) —Three Canadian truck driving champions were named last night at the fifth National Truck Roadeo.

Frank Bell, 37, a Toronto brewery truck driver, piled up 370 points out of a possible 400 —the highest in any class—to become national tractor-trailer champion. It was his second all-Canadian championship.

Jack K. Martin, 35, of Edmonton, who claims to have driven on every road and highway in Alberta, is the new straight truck champion with 353 1-2 points. Martin, the Alberta champion, is a soft-drinks truck driver.

The RCAF team with Lac. T. Zimmer of Calgary in first place took all the main prizes in the armed services competition.

Just behind Martin was 19-year-old Don Fitzpatrick of Burlington who won last year's title. He was followed within half a point by Bernard Johnston of Chatham.

Eagles Claw Senior Hawks; Juniors Whip Lindsay 12-4 To Increase Lead

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

BREAK EVEN!

For a moment last night it looked like both senior and junior editions of the Hawks would come through with twin wins for the Old Lady of the Moira. But whatever it is, decreed otherwise. The best the lads could do was a split on the evening's honors with the junior Hawklets rising to scoring heights to turn back the Lindsay Kinsmen 12-4 and take undisputed lead of their group, while the senior lads faded badly in the third period to absorb a 10-4 defeat at the claws of the Peterborough Eagles.

At time of writing we have no particulars outside the score on the senior game, but we did see a score-hungry Hawks junior team come through with one of the best junior performances we have witnessed in many years.

The kids played hockey last night. They were stung by two quick Lindsay goals in the first period. They battled back, tied the score and from then on it was all Hawks. They slashed home an even dozen goals with but a two return from the smart Lindsay crew.

"Red" Doran's book-tossing apparently did a good job. The Hawklets played their hockey on the ice last night, and for the first time showed that they do constitute a good hockey club and can play the game if they want to. They checked hard, took advantage of whatever opportunities were along their way, and battled both ways.

But, don't sell this Lindsay team short. They were clearly outplayed last night but one swallow does not constitute a binge nor does one defeat decide a championship. The Kinsmen have a smart club and it is extremely doubtful if they are defeated by such a wide margin again. They will be a force to be reckoned with in this junior "B" race.

BET THEY KISS, MAKE UP!

Marshall Dann a Detroit sportswriter has blossomed forth with a neat little piece in the Detroit Free Press to the effect that "most National Hockey League players can't punch their way out of a jersey".

Dann claims that most of the fights at National Hockey League games are "phony" and staged for the benefit of hockey fans.

Brother they should invite Danny Bhoy down to some of these "amateur" senior and junior soirees. If they're phony then we're Rita Hayward's next heart throb.

Master Dann opines, though, there are some "tough guys" in the NHL. He includes Rocket Richard, Tom Johnson and Boom-Boom Geoffrion of the Canadiens; Fern Flaman and Harry Watson of the Maple Leafs; Gordie Howe, Red Kelly, Ted Lindsay and Vic Stasiuk of the Red Wings; Lee Fogolin of the Black Hawks and Bill Ezinicki of Boston.

Most of the boys in the big time, Dann claims, "save their menacing gestures" until after the fights have broken up. Up to that point it's the act.

He gives out with some tips to players who want to appear "warlike". He says "Make threatening gestures, shove, push, jostle and act thoroughly tough until the linesmen wander over. Then and only then, when the restrainers are nearby, drop your stick and start throwing punches. Chances are you don't hit anyone except an official and he cannot strike back."

"When play has stopped and all the fans are watching make your motto "hold me back". Tug and strain as though trying to break away from officials holding you. Carry on this way right up to the point where you might escape."

Well, there's good advice to the boys. Watch the fireworks blaze now that the laddybucks figure the other guy is "putting on a warlike act".

We don't know what happens in the National Hockey League generally, or especially in Detroit, but if those puck warriors are pantomimists, as Pierrots in hockey paraphernalia then this Korean incident is a Punch and Judy show.

It could be that Mr. Dann from his lofty perch in Olympia in Detroit only visions National Hockey League tiffs. He should come "no'th of the bo'der, suh" and get an eyeful of one of these strafes in the sticks that are being waged these spring-like nights in almost any arena in the district. How do they get these "shiners"? Paint 'em on? And mebbe hockey players up in this neck of the woods are born with detachable molars. Or it could be the lads carry small bottles of ketchup in their hip pockets and smear it on their faces after they stop a shillalagh swung from the hands of a "phony warlike warrior". 'Tis belittlin' yez are, Danny bhoy.

JUVENILES TONIGHT

The Hockey Association's juvenile league gets its schedule under way in Memorial Arena tonight with Team No. 1 meeting No. Two and Three clashing with Four. The schedule will be ready in a day or so and will continue through till January 31st. A league winner must be declared soon after that date.

Savitt, Sedgman Meet in Aussie Tennis Final

Melbourne, Australia, Dec. 6 (AP)—Dick Savitt and Frank Sedgman battled their way into the finals of the Victorian championships today as America and Australia broke even in a "preview" of the Davis Cup challenge round.

Savitt, pounding the ball hard, trounced the Aussies' No. 2 player, Ken McGregor 6-3, 6-4, 6-4.

Vic Seixas put up a thrilling struggle against Sedgman, but finally went down by 5-7, 6-2, 11-9, 7-5 after two hours and 15 minutes of brilliant tennis.

A crowd estimated at 6,000 witnessed the two matches which might well be duplicated on first day of the challenge round at Sydney, December 26.

It was learned reliably today that Lennart Bergelin, Swedish ace still is having bad trouble with his injured shoulder and is unlikely to be in shape for interzone final starting a week from today. The U.S. is more or less being conceded victory under the circumstances.

As far as today's two matches were concerned they proved only what members of the American team have thought all along—that they can take the Davis Cup Trophy home if they can defeat Sedgman and McGregor in the doubles.

Force Three-Way Top Slot Tie With 10-4 Win Over Hawks; Score Five in Third Period

Peterborough, Ont., Dec. 6 — Trimming Belleville Hawks 10-4 here last night the local Eagles climbed into an OHA senior B group top place tie with Belleville and Kingston, who were downing the Petes in the Limestone city. After trailing 3-2 in the first frame, Ned Vitarelli's squad began clicking and they had a narrow 5-4 margin to end the second. They roared through for five tallies without a return in the final chapter of a lightning fast, clean fray. But three penalties each were drawn.

Fredy Mortimer sparked the Eagles attack with three goals and two assists in a nifty showing. Bob Parnall and Dootch Vitarelli each hit the twine twice and aided on another, George Brabin had a goal and two assists, Reg Stewart one and two, Toodie Greenlaw a goal and an assist, Bert Hill a brace of assists and Bill Crowley one assist. Ross Nicholls turned in a nifty effort in goal, and he had a solid defence working for him.

Wardhaugh Gets Two

Jackie Wardhaugh led the losers at bat with two goals and an assist, Peter Jones scoring once and helping on a pair. Don Barrett got the other marker, as an assist apiece went to Vern Goyer and Red Doran. The Hawks flew fast all through and fought hard to the finish, but seemed to have shot their bolt after the first half. Lefort kicked out some hot thrusts, as he was peppered mercilessly throughout the second and third chukkers. An 11th Eagles goal was called back for the crease.

Barrett tallied first on a nice play out of the corner, but Brabin got it back on long forward flips up from Slater and Parnall finishing neatly. Stewart put Eagles up on a pass at defence from Fred Mortimer. Semark was gated for elbowing and Doug Mortimer followed for tripping. They were still off when Wardhaugh tied the score on passes in close from Jones and Vern Goyer. The culprits returned and Montgomery got the nod for tripping but was back when Wardbaugh gave Hawks a 3-2 lead on fine standing combination inside with Doran and Jones.

Fred Mortimer sewed it up again to open the second heat on nifty passing from Greenlaw and Vitarelli and smart finishing. Slater and Day drew the ref's ire for high sticking and were away when Jones, uncovered, slapped home the biscuit from Wardhaugh. Later, Fred Mortimer checked and recovered at centre to go in fast on a sweet solo and backhand the disk home from a sharp angle. He then put Eagles in front on a fast goal inside with Stewart's pass. Doran drew the game's final penalty near the close of the period for tripping.

Eagles swarmed in fast from the face off in the third to rack up the count. Greenlaw cuffed home the first in a scramble from Fred Mortimer and Stewart. Then Parnall broke in twice to tally, Brabin and Slater fashioned the play in each case. Vitarelli added another near the crease with Hill's pass and Vitarelli later on wound up the scoring on classy combination inside with Hill and Crowley. They got one more later but it was ruled no goal. Belleville made Nicholls hop on some hot one again in the third, but Eagles had the most of the play.

Teams

Belleville—Goal Lefort; defence Bastedo and Semark; centre V. Goyer; wings McDonald and Moher; alternates Doran, Jones, Wardhaugh, Barrett, Desjardins, Day, L. Goyer and Graham.

Eagles—Goal Nicholls; defence Montgomery and Munroe; centre Hill; wings Crowley and Vitarelli; alternates F. Mortimer, Greenlaw, Stewart, Parnall, Brabin, Slater, D. Mortimer and Wootton.

Marlboros Back On Top Rung; Indians Win

(By The Canadian Press)

Toronto Marlboros kept up their battle for the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A league leadership last night when they pulled off a hard-fought 9-6 overtime victory from ninth place Barrie Flyers to move back into a first-place deadlock with the idle Guelph Biltmores.

The Maple Leaf farm club led Barrie 2-1 at the end of the first period and 6-4 at the close of the middle session, but a late-game rally left the issue tied at 6-6 as the third period closed. Three overtime goals were all the Marlies needed to earn their win.

At Waterloo, the Hurricanes chalked up their fourth straight junior win with an 11-2 route of the eighth-place Oshawa Generals. The Hurricanes' triumph puts them two points out of fifth place in the ten-team loop.

Stratford Indians continued to hold their mastery over the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A standings by delighting a packed home town arena with a decisive 13-2 win over Sarnia Sailors.

In drubbing the Sailors last night, Stratford notched their eighth straight victory and increased their league lead to seven points over second-place Hamilton Tigers who dropped a 3-2 decision to Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen. The Indians have yet to lose a game in Stratford this season.

Up north the Sudbury Wolves roared back from a 5-0 second-period deficit to earn a 5-5 tie with the first place Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior A Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds. The game was played right in Sault Ste. Marie.

Leafs, Red Wings Battle to Tie; Bruins Edge NY Rangers 3-2

(By The Canadian Press)

Detroit Red Wings and Toronto Maple Leafs can play it cleanly and still come up with some first-class hockey.

That was demonstrated at Toronto last night when the Wings and Leafs, cooled out considerably since their Sunday heyrube at Detroit, showed 13,579 fans why they are running one-two in the National Hockey League. The game ended in a 2-2 stalemate and both missed enough chances to make it a much-higher scoring game.

The one point left the Wings two up on the Stanley Cup champions Boston Bruins picked up a little ground with a 3-2 victory over the Rangers at New York to leave them just five points behind Toronto.

No Rough Stuff

The big crowd at Toronto was prepared for a continuance of the rough stuff and they weren't disappointed when only nine penalties were called. It appeared at the start that tempers still were on edge after the fist-swinging at Detroit, but the players soon settled down to fast-pace hockey and the crowd went home happy.

Detroit, with a record of no losses in 11 road games, came from behind twice to earn the point. The hero of the piece was Toronto's Sid Smith who produced both Leaf goals. Glen Skov and Ted Lindsay netted for the Wings.

The loss may be costly to Toronto. Winger Howie Meeker was removed to hospital with a torn knee cartilage after crashing into wing goalkeeper Terry Sawchuk in the first period.

The cellar-dwelling Rangers ran out of steam in the last period allowing Bruins to break a 2-2 deadlock and take the two points. Johnny Pierson's two-goal effort, his second at 13:08 of the final session, broke up the game. Hal Laycoe got the other Boston tally.

Probably the happiest guy of the Rangers' Gaye Stewart. The veteran scored both Ranger goals, the first time he hit the scoring column this season.

Hawklets Roar from Behind To Score an Even Dozen Goals In Best Display of Season

Belleville Junior Hawks came up with one of the best displays of hockey seen here in some time as they completely overpowered a strong Lindsay Kinsmen team last night at the Memorial Arena to score a 12-4 win over the visitors.

The victory strengthened the Hawks hold on first place in Junior B group, advancing them to a three-point lead over thesecond place Lindsay squad. They remain the only team in the group who have not tasted defeat.

Play was the cleanest in any of the contests seen here to date, due in part to the very capable officiating of referee Louis Lecompte. Both teams skated hard, checked clean and made many interesting passing plays. The Hawks were back-checking tenaciously, a feature noticeably absent from their games thus far and had their passing plays working to perfection.

Started Strongly

Lindsay started out strongly in the first period with two goals before the five minute mark and looked better on the play during most of the period. However, the Hawks came alive toward the latter part of the same chucker with goals by Strahan and Carey knotting the count before the Bell. Only three penalties were handed out and all were minor infractions.

Belleville took the lead at 2.22 of the second period for the first time in the game and did not relinquish it. DeGray, standing on the edge of the goal crease, tipped in Gilmour's pass. Twenty-four seconds later the same duo combined for another score and the Hawks were well away.

The Kinsmen had their chance when Houle drew a tripping penalty but were only able to get two shots on the net during the two minutes that they had the advantage. Lalonde and Houle tallied for the homesters before Powell batted in Deeth's rebound for Lindsay's only score of the frame. The Hawk defence looked rather weak on that one. Doran completed the scoring in the second period with a solo effort.

Had Wide Edge

Belleville held a wide edge in play throughout most of the period, stopping the visitors before they could get organized. Lalonde and DeGray were particularly noticeable for their play-making.

The last stanza was merely a repeat of the previous period, the Hawks outscoring the Kinsmen by a five to one margin. Jacklin with two, DeGray, Strahan and Doran were the marksmen while Deeth picked up his second counter.

Both teams were back-checking fiercely in that period and a couple of scuffles started but were broken up by referee Lecompte and linesman Fitzpatrick before any serious damage was done.

The Moira City boys fattened their scoring averages extensively at the expense of Truax in the visitors net. DeGray turned the hat trick again, Jacklin and Strahan each countered twice and assisted on a like number while Lalonde scored one and drew three assists. Gilmour assisted on three, Doran, Carey, Houle and Brown garnered a pair of points and Pete Green got his first point, an assist.

The line of Copeland, Deeth and Powell picked up all the scoring honors for Lindsay, each one gathering in three points. They were, without doubt, the pick of the visiting team. Shervington, a huskily built lad on defence, also looked good.

All forward units of the Hawks ensemble were worthy of mention with a particular thought to Lalonde whose stick-handling prowess was a standout. Pete Green appeared to be the best of the rearguard, playing a heady two-way game. Barclay also played a steady game in the nets.

The teams:

'Kid' Mathews Adds Another To Win Record

Cleveland, Dec. 6 —(AP) — Harry Matthews had another victory for his impressive record today, but the crack Seattle light heavyweight was a weary fighter.

The No. 1 contender for the light heavyweight crown held by Joey Maxim ran into unexpected opposition last night in winning a unanimous 10-round decision over hard-hitting Danny Nardico of Tampa, Fla.

Although he got a thorough pasting for his efforts, Nardico shook up the west coast battler on a number of occasions with his dynamite laden fists.

Jack Hurley, Matthews' manager, was the first to admit that his fighter didn't perform like he has in the past.

"He was very sloppy and couldn't put two punches together during the entire fight," said the studious ring veteran who changed Matthews' style and made him one of the hottest names in boxing.

Hurley said his fighter "took more punches than he usually takes in a year."

"Matthews had the flu a few months ago and I don't think he has fully recovered his strength" he added. "He was dead tired after the second round."

In Matthew's last two previous fights, Hurley pointed out, his battler won on early round knockouts and hadn't had to extend himself. Hurley said he planned for Matthews to take a good rest after his fight Dec. 13 with Art Henri in Omaha.

Then he is hoping to line up a bout with heavyweight Rocky Marciano or heavyweight champion Joe Walcott. He doesn't think he has much chance of lining up a title bout with Maxim at any early date.

Arrest Another On Bribe Charge

New York, Dec. 6—(AP)—Donato Lamorte, Altoona, Pa., shoe manufacturer and former racehorse owner, was booked early today on a charge of bribery in the collegiate basketball scandals. The scandals already have involved 31 former players from seven schools and at least seven other persons as fixers.

Lamorte, who also is known as Daniel Lamont, was arrested yesterday.

District Attorney Frank S. Hogan described him as the "money man" behind the bribing of Harvey (Connie) Schall, former New York University Court star. Schaff is serving six months for taking $2,000 to hold down N.Y.U.'s score in a Madison Square Garden game last Jan. 1.

The shoe manufacturer was described by authorities as a wealthy former bookie and horse owner barred from New York tracks for gambling.

If Ted Williams Is Put on Block Yankees Will Get Him, Says Ryan

By JOE REICHLER

Columbus, O., Dec. 6—(AP)—Owner Ellis Ryan of Cleveland Indians said today he wouldn't be surprised if Boston Red Sox traded Ted Williams to New York Yankees.

"I would say the Yankees have the best chance of getting Williams," he said. "That is, if Boston really wants to trade Ted. New York has more to offer, in the way of good young dispensable players, than any other club."

Ryan denied an oft-rumored story that Williams had been offered to the Indians for right-hander Bob Lemon and catcher Jim Hegan.

"Ted Williams' name has never come up for discussion in any of our talks with the Red Sox," he said. "I have no way of knowing whether the Red Sox have ever attempted to trade Williams to any club."

Previously, general manager George Weiss of the Yankees hinted that his club will be interested in making a deal for the Red Sox slugger if they are sure Joe DiMaggio is not returning next season.

Up to Joe

"We might be interested in Boston's big fellow if we knew just what our big fellow is going to do," is the way he put it. "If Joe decides to play, then I don't think there would be room for the two of them."

DiMaggio is scheduled to meet with Yankee officials in New York this week. If a Williams-to-the Yankees transaction is made, the guess is that the Red Sox will ask for outfielder Hank Bauer, second-baseman Gerry Coleman, pitcher Bob Morgan and a young catcher.

The Cardinals' persistent efforts to land Eddie Stanky as manager were expected to wind up successfully. The announcement may come within the next 48 hours.

President Fred Saigh of the Cards and manager Leo Durocher of the Giants huddled for 2 hours yesterday then lunched for another two hours together.

"I told Mr. Saigh that we still were determined to get Max Lanier (southpaw pitcher) and Chuck Diering for Stanky," Leo said. "We did want the other fellows he offered. He said he'd think it over."

"I think the deal will be made," Leo added with a broad grin.

"The "other fellows" are pitcher Red Munger and catcher Del Rice. The Giants were to throw in catcher Sal Yvars and infielder Jack Lohrke in the deal.

Yanks Curtail Daily Broadcasts

Columbus, O., Dec. 6 — (AP)— The world champion New York Yankees yesterday reduced their radio operations in reply to George Trautman's grim warning that the minor leagues cannot long survive the "radio umbrella" of big league broadcasts.

Trautman, president of the National Association of Minor Leagues, called for "reasonable restraints" on big league broadcasts in his annual report to the Minors' Golden Jubilee Convention.

The Yankees will not license any national network broadcasts — such as "game-of-the-day" from Yankee Stadium. They will curtail their "home of champions" network that covered 18 cities in 1951, and will limit these broadcasts to day games. There will be no out-of-town television of Yank home games. They will continue to broadcast all games, home and away and televise all home games over a New York station.

Last season the Yankees permitted network broadcasts to all points, carried day and night games on their own 18-city chain and let a New Haven, Conn., TV station carry some 30 games.

The attitude of other big league clubs was not definite. Many were tied down to long term contracts that would rule out drastic action in '51.

'Shoeless Joe', Baseball Great Dies at 63

Greenville, S. C., Dec. 6 (AP)—"Shoeless Joe" Jackson, once one of baseball's greatest hitters, died last night still maintaining his innocence of any wrong-doing in the 1919 World Series scandal.

Jackson, 63, was one of eight Chicago White Sox players accused of accepting bribes to throw the series to Cincinnati Reds. Jackson, Oscar Felch, Arnold Gandil, George Weaver, Charles Risberg, Fred McMullin, Eddie Cicotte and Claude Williams were barred for life from organized baseball by the late Commissioner Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis.

Jackson, who played the outfield and hit .375 in the series won by the Reds, had been plagued by heart trouble in recent years.

Last night he went to bed at 9:30 and awakened shortly after complaining of chest pains. He died before help could be summoned.

After his banishment, Jackson returned here, citing his acquittal of conspiracy charges in a Chicago court as proof of his innocence.

In the 1920's Joe starred as a player and manager in semi-pro baseball at Waycross, Ga. When his baseball years ran out, Joe settled near his boyhood home here and kept in contact with sandlot baseball.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

You should have no trouble with a takeout double. It shows a hand at least as good as an opening bid of one. It orders partner to bid something if there is no intervening bid.

If there is no intervening bid, partner's response with (1) a non-jump bid shows from none to four tricks (less than five); with (2) a one-jump bid shows five tricks or more.

If there is an intervening bid, partner's response with (1) a pass shows less than three tricks; with (2) a non-jump bid shows three or four tricks; with (3) a jump bid shows five tricks or more.

The fact that both opponents have bid before the double does not alter the responses. The fact that partner must respond at the level of two or three or four must not deter him.

South opponent starts with an opening bid of one heart. Your partner in west passes. If north then bids two clubs, your proper call is double with this east hand:

♠K 9 6 2
♥9
♦A K 10 3
♣Q 10 6 4

Your double says you have as good as an opening bid of one or better. If south does not intervene with a bid, your west partner must bid; non-jump with less than five tricks; jump with five or more.

If south intervenes with a bid, your partner in the west should pass if he has less than three tricks; bid without a jump if he has three or four tricks; jump bid if he has five tricks or more.

If your partner in the west does not pass, what suit should he bid? Opponents have bid hearts and clubs. He must bid only suits that have not yet been bid; spades or diamonds.

His first choice should be in an unbid major of four cards or more. So, unless he has less than four spades, he should bid spades in that spot. Even if his diamonds are stronger.

If partner does not co-operate, he is just a third opponent.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Dec. 6 — (AP) — Any discussion of morality in Hollywood brings up the movie industry's morals clause. But amazingly little is known about it.

The history of the clause goes back to the turbulent 20s, when the industry was struck by a series of scandals that rocked its foundations.

Wallace Reid, portrayer of the all-American boy, died at the age of 31, a victim of the narcotic habit. Fatty Arbuckle, lovable comic of slapstick shorts, was tried three times for manslaughter in the rape death of a San Francisco girl. After two hung juries, he was acquitted. Director William Desmond Taylor was murdered in an unsolved mystery that involved two actresses, Mary Miles Minter and Mabel Normand.

Since the Arbuckle case, most film players have had the clause included in their contracts. It reads something like this:

Covers Plenty

"The artist agrees to conduct himself with due regard to public conventions and morals; and agrees that he will not do or commit any act that will tend to degrade him in society or bring him into public hatred, contempt, scorn or ridicule; or that will tend to shock, insult or offend the community or ridicule public morals or decency, or prejudice the producer or the entertainment industries."

But Not Used

That should cover any situation concerning immorality. But the joker is that the clause has never been invoked for immorality.

A veteran, top-flight Hollywood lawyer confirmed that the clause has never been used until the last three years, and then only for political reasons. It was used to fire workers accused of communist activities.

"I may be cynical," he said, "but I believe that the producers have never felt the need to cancel a contract because of moral reasons. I think that when a star is involved in a scandal, particularly if it involves sex, the public is generally sympathetic and forgiving.

"But communism is another matter. If a star gets a red label, he and his pictures are subject to organized and effective pressure. The producer could well consider him a bad risk and fire him under the morals clause."

The legality of the morals clause has never been tried. Some lawyers feel that it might be an infringement of individual freedom assured by the U. S. constitution.

Sport in Brief

(By The Canadian Press)

Warren Stevens, director of athletics at University of Toronto, said today that the university has been approached for television broalcasting rights to football games held in Varsity Stadium, one of Canada's largest stadia.

"Naturally, we haven't been able to make any decisions," he said.

At Columbus, O., Frank Lane, Chicago White Sox general manager, yesterday completed a deal that has been hanging fire since September when he bought third baseman Hector Rodriguez 31-year-old Cuban Negro third baseman, from Brooklyn's Montreal farm of the international league. The White Sox shipped first baseman Glenn (Rocky) Nelson to Montreal, completing the deal. Nelson was with St. Louis Cardinals and Pittsburgh before coming to the Sox.

Jack Tighe, 38, who managed Toledo of the American Association last season, yesterday at Columbus, O., was named manager of Buffalo Bisons of the International League. Detroit recently added Buffalo to its list of farm clubs and disposed of the Toledo franchise.

Flicka Volo, owned by John R. Reid of Ailsa Craig, Ont., and driven by Joe Hodgins, and Colonel Hedgewood, owned and handled by Herman Stepro of Carydon, Ind., divided the fifth and featured race at Toronto's Dufferin Park yesterday when they each paced a heat victory.

The fourth event, the secondary feature, resulted in a split decision between Amos Pointer, owned by O. Boisvert of Shawinigan Falls, Que., and Duchess Brooks, owned by M. Dello of Niagara Falls. Each won a heat.

FINISHED FOR SEASON

Boston, Dec. 6—(AP)—Pentti Lund, Boston Bruins forward, may be lost for the remainder of the National Hockey League season with his eye injury.

He was accidentally struck by Clare Martin's stick during a game with Chicago Black Hawks here Nov. 13.

Lund, who was born in Finland, said the decision would be made by Dr. Thomas C. Cavanaugh, Boston eye specialist, Friday.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is according to the stars.

For Friday, December 7

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—Friendly day, especially for domestic interests; artistic, skilled work; practical matters. But guard against ill temper, impatience, unprofitable arguments. Keep usefully busy.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus).—Try for big goals, high artistic achievement today. Your planet Venus now heightens creative and cultural ability; urges peace, harmony and also personal advancement.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—Though you may not have bright ideas or be mentally keen as usual, it is a day for finesse, artistry and honesty in all fields of endeavor. Laborer, executive, soldier among top honored.

July 22 to July 23—(Cancer)—Unexpected changes may occur but these should not deter your ambition to succeed in your tasks. Favorable on whole especially if you maintain self-control and show your genial, unselfish side.

July 24 to August 22—(Leo)—Promising for personal affairs, for activities of keen interest to you. Care advised against indulging unpleasant moods. Be serene, faithful to duties and you can make gains.

August 23 to September 23—(Virgo)—Never lose zest for creation, for climbing higher on any worthy ladder. Today challenges you mentally active, urges you to try to accomplish, though some things may hinder. Cheerio!

September 24 to October 23—(Libra)— Your reach may exceed your grasp in money matters, immediate returns. But it is wholesome day for home, family, sound business and some private interests. You can exert pressure.

October 24 to November 22 —(Scorpio)—These are tricky Mars days: tendency to combativeness. Use the Martian rays for getting ahead in useful ventures, daily tasks, for stimulating aid to our armed forces. Gentleness counts.

November 23 to December 22—(Sagittarius)— Correct faults in finances. Business does not always have to show big monetary gains to be successful. Keep pushing ahead and successes will be timely. Private interests favored.

December 23 to January 21—(Capricorn)— Extra thoughtfulness and patience urged in difficult matters where energy and strength may be taxed. Perhaps delicacy of touch and manner will aid where force wouldn't. Try it.

January 22 to February 20—(Aquarius)—Uranus, Mars positions now warn against harmful restlessness switching from one proposition or task to another without giving any one the right time. Be sensibly consistent to gain.

February 21 to March 20—(Pisces)—Be careful of doubtful schemes, investments where losses could be sustained; shun persons and places unworthy. Day will yield fruit to intelligent management, proper application.

..YOU BORN TODAY: Frank, generous, innately genial, highly talented and capable. These are grand attributes but must be developed and rightly used in daily life to be the great service they can be. Sympathetic, willing to help others and often work too hard, tending to strain. Guard against being imposed upon. You esteem order, system; will usually conclude anything you start. Can become very popular; perhaps have musical, literary ability. Worry not about unfinished matters or become irritable. Pray for blessings.

Birthdate: Allan Cunningham, Scot, poet, man of letters; Heywood Broun, noted newspaperman; Willa Cather authoress.

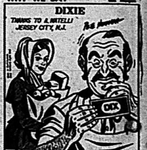
WHY WE SAY



DIXIE
DIX
11-3

. . . From ten dollar bills

We call the Southern part of the U. S. Dixie today because some people did not know how to pronounce the number ten in French. It started in 1833 when the bank of New Orleans issued currency for its French population. Ten dollar bills were marked "dix" (French for ten). When the bills drifted North, people called them "Dixies." (Thanks to A. Natelli of Jersey City, N. J.).

Far-Northerners Find Water Warm

Hannover, Dec. 6—(CP)—Cold back home?

More than 100 Canadian soldiers cluding two who had their last dip in the Arctic Ocean off their home town of Aklavik.

The two far-northerners are Pte. Fred Albert, 19, and Pte. Francis Francis, 20, both Indians. They were advised to join the army by Canon C. R. Montgomery, brother of Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery. Canon Montgomery now is the Anglican clergyman in charge of the Aklavik Mission.

The two are members of the Loyal Edmonton Regiment, a company of which yesterday was the first among Canadians of the 27th Brigade in Germany to go swimming in a big indoor pool here which is expected to get daily visits from the troops from now on.

"It's warmer than the Arctic," said Francis, who is half Eskimo.

SHANNONVILLE

United Church Bazaar Highly Successful

The ladies of the Shannonville United Church W.A. held their annual bazaar and afternoon tea in the church hall on Tuesday afternoon last.

The hall was attractively decorated in Christmas colors of red, white and green. The favorable weather brought out a crowd of buyers. The long sales tables extended along both sides of the hall and were covered with snow-white cloths and trimmed with loops of colored ropes along the outside. The Reverend L. Scott officially opened the bazaar, and congratulated the ladies on the fine appearance of the hall.

Mrs. Scott welcomed the guests as they arrived.

During the afternoon, Mrs. Harry Sine favored with several musical selections, accompanied by Mrs. G. E. Currie on the violin, which added much to the afternoon's enjoyment.

Ready Buyers

Vegetables were donated and sold by Mrs. Robert MacFarlane and Mrs. W. D. Robertson. The pantry shelf booth was in charge of Mrs. F. Doxtator and Mrs. Arthur Houston and its supply of jellies, pickles, canned goods and mince meat found ready buyers.

In the next booth a tempting display of homemade candy was sold by Mrs. C. Wescott and Miss Winnifred Eckhardt, while at the homecooking table, pies, cookies, cakes and tarts made a tempting array. These were sold by Mrs. Everett Stratton and Mrs. Archie Greatrix.

On the other side of the hall, the parcel post was a busy corner until all the parcels were sold by Mrs. S. MacDonald and Mrs. Earle Thompson. None knew what the parcels contained, but all were worth the price asked.

Aprons were in good demand and the complete supply was sold out in record time with Mrs. Saul MacFarlane and Mrs. Fred Wilson as conveners. The various colors and sizes and styles made a wide choice.

Fine Display

The fancy work table was also well patronized with its fine display of fine pillow slips, towels, pot-holders, baby bootees and novelties as well as many useful articles suitable for Christmas presents. The showing on this table was due to the members who had done such fine hand work in embroidery. The busy sewers who had made the attractive aprons also deserve credit. The fancy work was in charge of Mrs. Damon Hinchey and Mrs. Charles Keirl. Also on this table were some very nice Christmas cards under the convenership of Miss Sarah Stickney.

At one end of the platform, a small Christmas tree glowed with many colored lights in front of the fish pond corner, which in turn, was one busy place after school hours, keeping its convener, Mrs. Gammon, constantly on the go. The president, Mrs. K. R. Vivian was busy looking after everything and doing the task nearest at hand.

Mrs. Claude Clarke, treasurer, sold tickets for the tea and also helped in the kitchen, while Mrs. Scott later took her place at selling tickets.

The long lace-covered tea table extended across the front of the hall and was centred with a large silver vase of pale yellow baby 'mums, flanked by candles of the same shade in silver holders, and at either end, the silver tea services. Those pouring were Mrs. Allan MacDonald and Mrs. Curl, Mrs. McFarlane and Mrs. Hudson Cook.

The quartet tables were centred by a vase of yellow 'mums, with Mrs. M. Little, Mrs. L. Uens, Mrs. R. Clarke, Mrs. Woodman, Mrs. G. Stratton and Mrs. W. Houston as attentive waiters at luncheon time. Those who helped in the kitchen included, Mrs. Gammon, Mrs. Asselstine, Mrs. Orval Stratton, Mrs. C. Mastin, Mrs. Elmer Vivian and Mrs. K. R. Vivian, the president.

The members were well pleased with the results of their efforts and extend appreciative thanks to all who gave of their efforts, also to those who gave donations, to those who attended and patronized, and to all who contributed in any way to the success of this year's bazaar.

The proceeds amounted to over $200.

WALLBRIDGE

BRIDE HONORED

On Monday evening last Mrs. Hudson Ketcheson held a kitchen shower in honor of the recent bride of this neighborhood, Mrs. Ernie Vardy (nee Lorna Fair).

The evening was spent in preparing a book of recipes after which games were played. Lorna was then invited to take a chair where a table of lovely presents were waiting to be untied. After all had been unwrapped Lorna thanked the givers for their presents, inviting them to come and see her in her new home.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Ketcheson and her helpers. W.I.

The W.I. meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Nicols on Wednesday night last with a good attendance.

On Saturday afternoon a pretty wedding was held in Wallbridge church when Miss Jean Reid and Mr. Thomson were married by her pastor, Rev. W. Neelands. After the ceremony all wended their way to the Orange Hall where the Wallbridge L.O.B.A. catered to about 80 guests. The committee under the convener Mrs. Vera Lough and all the members were praised both for the bountiful luncheon and the manner in which it was served, which all enjoyed.

Sorry to report Mr. Fred Maggie is under the doctor's care and his many friends wish him a speedy recovery.

Mr. W. Sine is at the convalescent home of Mrs. Kemp, Frankford, where he has been a bed patient for a number of days. His many friends with him a speedy recovery.

Quite a number in the neighborhood have been confined to their home with severe colds.

Christmas seems to be near as the children's concert is to be held on the 20th of this month and old Santa will soon be coming to make all little ones happy.

Mrs. M. Harris is spending some time with her daughter, Mrs. E. Tucker of Belleville.

Woke Up Every Morning Feeling Tired, Achy Dizzy

Entire System Was Rundown After Suffering Very Bad Stomach Disorders, Says This Man, But "Feel Like Different Person Since Taking Syntona."

MR. LEONARD PULLEN, 80 Tisdale street north, Hamilton, Ontario, is glad to pass his experience along to others, because he knows what it means to get relief from health disorders which had troubled him a long time and made him feel tired, achy and rundown.

"I was really in a bad way, couldn't get to sleep at night and would get up every morning feeling tired, achy and dizzy," said Mr. Pullen. "I suffered from acid indigestion, would get awful gas, belched up hot, sour liquids, and had a bloated, full, heavy feeling in my stomach. My nerves seemed all on edge. I had no appetite and my back was aching all the time.

"I heard a lot of praise for Syntona, so I decided to give it a trial and soon found this medicine did all that was said about it. I never had anything before to give me such quick relief from the acid indigestion and other stomach distress. I now sleep better, feel more rested and refreshed when morning comes and I don't get those dizzy spells that I did before. The aches and pains have gone away. I now enjoy my meals and literally feel a different person."

MR. LEONARD PULLEN

Syntona is purely herbal, contains no soda, iron, or other minerals. It is safe, pleasant to take and has helped thousands of men and women in this city and vicinity.

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

The Outsiders

By Jane Abbott

Then at sight of the schoolhouse his thought swung to Jeremy and his relief was for her. That letter he'd written at the Albany airport while waiting for the plane going farther west had accomplished what he'd hoped it would. There hadn't been time to write it tactfully, and he hadn't been certain the brother would not take offense at it. He had written that Jeremy was in a critical emotional condition.

Well, the brother had come and Jeremy'd gone away with him. Streeter could tell him more of what Smead had called Jeremy's collapse."

Past the schoolhouse he came to the clearing of the trees, through which he could see the big house on the side of the Spruce Hill. He waved a hand toward it. "You said you never wanted to see me again but you are going to, my dearest, this afternoon."

Hespeth said at luncheon, "Chris Cameron's back. He came into the store this morning. Louie told of it when he brought up the order."

Eliza had her tea cup up in her hand. She put it down.

"He's missed all the excitement" observed Hespeth, with pride in her voice for the "excitement." "He'll come up to hear all about it.

But he wouldn't, Eliza told herself. His going away without a word to her, without trying to see her, was proof that he had accepted her dismissal. "I never want to see you again!"

And there was so much, so much she longed to share with him.

Henry Wilbur had gone over with Eliza every figure of every statement and account back to the time of her grandfather's death. She had been stunned to discover that those heavy losses of which the manager had spoken so frequently existedly only in the papers he showed her. That the failure he'd pictured never had been imminent.

"I suspect he framed it all up to get you to sell, Miss Forrestal. There's criminal intent involved, if you want to go after him."

"No," Eliza had said quickly. "We didn't sell and he's gone. And—can we buy new machines?"

They had figured on that. They had called old Tom Matthews in to help them.

The lawyer had spoken of the bigger profits in the manufacture of other kinds of paper. Old Tom had said "the old man had a notion about book paper."

"Then we'll keep the notion," Eliza had said. "With new machines. . ."

Old Tom had given her a deep approving look — very different from the one he'd given her the day she first had gone to the mill She wanted to tell Chris of the triumph of that.

She was sitting at piano marking off a lesson in an exercise book for Tod when the knock came at the door. Her heart leaped and sank. It wasn't he—he would not come! She went slowly to the door, steadying herself against disappointment.

But when she opened the door it was to see Chris on the doorsteps. "Oh," she said, and that no more than the sound of her breath catching in her throat.

Chris' smile did not reach his eyes. "You won't — shut the door on me?"

For answer Eliza put out her hand. He took it and with it still in his he nodded at the step. Eliza nodded her own head and they sat down on the broad doorstep.

"I had to come," Chris said with some awkwardness. "I wasn't sure you'd see me but I had to try it, once at least."

"I went up to your camp one day," owned Eliza. "To tell you . . ." She stopped, remembering Jeremy there. She finished. "You were gone."

"I got word that Sunday that my uncle was very ill and I had to go to him. I hated to leave things as they were between us—I dashed off a note to you and gave it to Smead to put in your letter box. He admitted he forgot to do it." Chris drew the envelope from his pocket.

Eliza moved to take it, but he put it back in his pocket. "About all it said was that I love you and I'm here now to say it for myself. If you'll listen— if you'll believe it. . ."

Eliza averted her face. "That girl—who wouldn't that day—I hope she's dead! Oh, I tried to think I meant it, what I said — but I — I couldn't! Not — in my heart!"

"You're telling me that you know your heart? But you must be sure. . ."

She gave a little quick nod of her head, the color high in her cheeks. "I think . . . Yes I do" she said.

He did not move to touch her. He said, a little hesitantly, "I've got to ask it! Just once and never again. That man you were with in Altemont—will you always remember him? Will it—hurt when you do?"

She did not answer on the instant. When she did it was slowly as if she were searching out in herself the words she would say." Yes, I suppose I'll always remember him. Every experience that—changes one, stays, doesn't it? But I won't think of it with any feeling, now. No, it won't—hurt, ever again. You see, what it did mostly to me was to kill my trust in everyone, in everything. And—I have it back now!"

My darling," said Chris, unsteadily. "If I can make it up to you. . ."

She turned to him, her eyes glowing. "I think I'm really beginning now Chris! With everything I mean. I've so much to tell you."

Chris, grinned. "More than Pete has told me already? He covered enough to make me feel I'd been gone a year!"

"You never really were away, Chris. Whenever I most needed to remember it, I'd think of something you'd said and it would help me."

"I was thinking of you all the while I was gone, even though I was terribly anxious about my uncle."

"How dreadful—I haven't asked you about him! Did he die?"

"No. He pulled through surprisingly well. It's his heart—but he's good to live for some time longer."

"Didn't he want you to stay?"

"On the contrary, I told him I was going to live all my life here in the valley and I think he gave it his blessing. I've something to write that's been in my head for a long time. Something on human relationships. I think I can do it now."

"You could preach Sundays in the meeting house."

"Not preach," corrected Chris quickly. "Share in worship." He laughed. "If they'll let me! I'm still an outsider. Funny, it wasn't so many weeks ago the six of us sat around Mrs. Streeter's table. A good deal has happened to each one of us. . ."

The shadow of Jeremy touched Eliza. She said, a little constraint in her voice. 'Chris, what about Jeremy? That day I went up to your place—she was there. Was she ever. . ."

He spoke before she could finish gravely, "She's gone—I can tell you her story now."

He told it with compansionship and Eliza, listening, felt a very real pity for she had known the loneliness Jeremy had suffered. Because she, like Jeremy, had sealed up her heart.

She let her eyes rest in utter astonishment on the green and gold valley below them.

Hespeth appeared in the doorway behind them. She looked down at Chris. "Oh, it's just you! she turned, then, back into the house, shutting the door behind her.

Chris asked, his laugh breaking a little, "think we can take that as Hespeth's approval?"

Eliza slipped her hand into his. "Yes. You belong, too, Chris. We're both beginning. . ."

"Together?"

"Together," repeated Eliza.

ALLIES OFFER TO DISCUSS TROOP WITHDRAWAL

New Soviet-Bloc Attempt to Seat Red China Lost

U.N. Assembly Votes 39-7 To Defeat Russian Move

Paris, Dec. 7—(CP)—The United Nations' general assembly today slapped down a new Soviet-bloc attempt to seat communist China and oust the nationalists.

Meeting in plenary session, the 60-country group also:

1. Discussed asking the security council to approve Italy's admission to the U. N. Three council majorities in favor of Italy have been blocked by Russian vetos.

2. Decided to disband its special on-the-spot commission which has been keeping an eye on the explosive Balkan situation and give the job to a stand-by group which will sit at U. N. headquarters in New York.

3. Rejected (38 to 5 with 6 abstentions) a Soviet resolution calling for a halt to "American interference" in Greek affairs. The assembly accepted (48 to 5 with one abstention) the recommendations of a political committee report dealing with "threats to the political independence and territorial integrity of Greece."

The vote on the Chinese issue came on a Byelo (white) Russian resolution denouncing a report from the U. N. credentials committee declaring the nationalists represent China legally. The Soviet move was defeated 39 to 7 with four abstentions.

Prepare Positions

Meanwhile the big four were preparing their final disarmament positions for outline at a secret meeting they have scheduled for late today.

There was little optisism that Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky, Russia, United States Ambassador Philip C. Jessup, the British Minister of State, Selwyn Lloyd, and French delegate Jules Moch would come to any agreement. The general expectation was that they would report next Monday that they have been unable to compromise rival disarmament plans.

The assembly already had voted Nov. 13 not to discuss the Chinese representation issue at this session. But Acting-President Sir Gladwyn Jebb of Britain allowed it to be brought up today "because this matter raises deep feelings on both sides."

White Russia's K. V. Kisselev urged the assembly to seat the red Peiping regime as the genuine representative of the Chinese people.

Nationalist China's T. F. Tsiang and Ambassador Ernest A. Gross of the United States opposed the motion.

Russia's Jakob A. Malik tried to speak in favor of the resolution, but Jebb pointed out that U.N. rules in this case permitted only the sponsor to speak in favor of his roposal and two opponents to answer.

Patrol Vessels Begin Evacuating 12,000 Refugees

Manila, Dec .7 — (AP) Philippines naval patrol vessels today began evacuating 12,000 refugees from Camiguin Island and the fury of Hibok Hibok's erupting volcano.

The known dead from Tuesday's eruption rose to 266. Officials estimate another 500 are buried under lava and ashes.

The volcano blew a continuous rain of hot ashes over the northern end of the island, sending more frightened residents fleeing to the southeast.

The naval evacuation began at the overcrowded Sok Heast coastal town of Mahinog. Refugees are being taken to nearby Mindanao Island in the central Philippines.

Other villagers were taken off the northwest coast after the volcano's molten lava stream reached the coast. It bubbled into the water spouting explosive geysers.

Schacht Charges Policy Lacks Responsibility

Jakarta, Indonesia, Dec. 7 — (Reuters)—A charge that United States foreign policy lacks responsibility was made today by Hjalmar Schacht, Hitler's one-time finance minister, in a 15,000-word report on Indonesia's economic condition.

Schacht, who juggled the Nazis' finances before and during the Second World War, has been here for three months on the invitation of the Indonesian government, which took over from the Netherlands after the war.

He said that the Americans and Dutch, with support of the United Nations, are responsible for the present political turmoil in Indonesia.

He said that a "prominent" American—whom he did not name—had said after a four-day stay in Jakarta that Indonesia is ripe for communism or dictatorship and will not be able to govern itself for generations.

Schacht interpreted this as a sharp if unintentional criticism of American policy.

"The lack of responsibility could not be characterized in a better way," he said. "A German cannot help remembering that the allies in 1945 gave the opportunity to Russian communism to advance to the Lubeck-Trieste line (in central Europpe), to start three years later a struggle for life with the same Russian communism."

WARMEST IN 110 YEARS

Toronto, Dec. 7 — (CP) — Toronto today enjoyed the warmest Dec. 7 in 110 years on record. At noon it was 55 above. The highest previous Dec. 7 temperature since the weather records were started in 1841 was 52, in 1861.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Dec. 7 (CP)—Synopsis: Record breaking mild weather greeted southern and central Ontario residents this morning with temperatures generally between 50 and 55. However, the mercury will drop tonight and maximum temperatures on Saturday will be 10 to 15 degrees below todays. Scattered showers and even thunderstorms moved across the southern fringe of the province early this morning, but will end in most regions well before noon.

The rain today in the north country will gradually change to snow tonight and Saturday with temperatures dropping to 20 to 25 by Saturday morning.

MEMBERS FEEL SEAWAY SHOULD BENEFIT ALL

Few Indicate Outright Opposition to Project

Ottawa, Dec. 7—(CP)—The federal government's St. Lawrence seaway legislation ran into cautious Commons consideration yesterday, with opposition Maritime members suggesting it be expanded as a means of developing other parts of the country.

That proposal originally came from Clarie Gillis (CCF—Cape Breton South), who urged that the new seaway authority, which will construct and operate the waterway, be empowered to see that it doesn't harm other sections of the country.

The suggestion was picked up and enlarged by other C.C.F. and Progressive Conservative members from the Maritimes and elsewhere. Few indicated outright opposition to the seaway, though many qualified their approval.

Other projects which it was suggested the new government agency might look into where the Passamaquoddy power development in New Brunswick, the harnessing of power in New Brunswick's Saint John River, the Chignecto canal to link the gulf of St. Lawrence and the Bay of Fundy and Saskatchewan's big irrigation project.

Answers Arguments

Answering opposition arguments as the legislation was debated in resolution stage, Transport Minister Chevrier said long economic studies had indicated the seaway would be good for all parts of Canada. Nor would it harm the Maritimes coal industry or its steel industry.

Mr. Gillis said he is not unalterably opposed to the project, though he conceded that he was expressing "justifiable fear" as to it. The Maritimes had legitimate grievances against the possible effects of the seaway on their economy.

With its great possibilities, he hopes the new government agency would be empowered to look into the development of power possibilities elesewhere, including the Passamaquoddy project in New Brunswick and the development of power on the Saint John river in that province.

Only Part of Program

George Nowlan (PC)—Annapolis-Kings), National Progressive Conservative president suggested the Maritimes would accept the seaway only as part of a general program for the development of resources in all parts of the country.

Julian Ferguson (PC—Simcoe North), endorsing the hydro phases of the project, said he also would approve the seaway if the government would undertake to go ahead with the development of projects for the Maritimes and other regions.

Kurusu and Nomura Still Maintain They Knew Nothing of Attack

Tokyo, Dec. 7 — (AP) — Two Japanse Japanese who 10 years ago talked peace in Washington while their navy churned toward Pearl Harbor still insist they knew nothing of the impending attack.

They are Kichisaburo Nomura, retired admiral whom the then Secretary of State Cordell Hull tongue-lashed on that Dec. 7, and special envoy Saburo Kurusu.

Nomura was ambassador in Washington. Kurusu was sent at the last minute with Japan's reply for maintaining peace while his country's militarists kindled the flames of war.

Purged now and living quietly in Tokyo, both men expressed hope that the people of the United States now understand the position into which they were thrust.

"We never knew the attack was coming," said the ailing, 65-year-old Kurusu.

"The situation was very critical. War was a possibility. But we saw a chance of maintaining peace.

"We tried everything possible but our efforts came too late."

Robust and jovial Nomura — who will celebrate his 74th birthday Dec. 16 — said:

"They never told us the attack on Pearl Harbor was coming while our discussions were going on in Washington."

Kurusu lives modestly with his American wife in a small, unpretentious home, built on the site where his former home was burned out during the war.

Two strokes within the last four years partially paralyzed his left side. Kurusu said his time is spent in reading and listening to Japanese and English language news broadcasts.

Nomura lives on the outskirts of Tokyo. He keeps busy reading and writing articles for Japanese publications.

"No political articles, of course," Nomura adds, smiling. "As a purged official, I am one of the untouchables."

Captured Japanese Book Credits Much of Pearl Harbor Destruction to Midget Subs

Los Angeles, Dec. 7 (AP)—A captured Japanese book, distributed privately to high Japanese officials in 1942, credits five midget submarines with much of the Pearl Harbor destruction.

Most accounts of the disaster list the subs' role as minor compared with that of the attacking air raiders.

Nine officers manned the five subs. They are revered as "herogods" in the book, much of which quotes Capt. Hideo Hiraide, chief of the navy press section of Imperial Japanese headquarters. The book leaves two questions unanswered—how big the subs were and whether each carried more than one torpedo.

Also there is no explanation of why it was printed in English, since its circulation was limited and it apparently was never used for propaganda purposes.

The book is owned by Roland A. Martone of South Pasadena, Calif., who was among the first American troops to land in Japan in the late summer of 1945.

Martone seized the book and later learned its history.

Hiraide reconstructed the midget sub raid in these words:

"The enemy had naturally taken elaborate precautionary measures to guard Pearl Harbor ...An anti-submarine network was spread across the entrance of the harbor, while numberless mines were planted.

Steered Past Barriers

"The members of the special attack flotilla. . . .steered their craft past all these barriers with consummate skill and without mishap . . .

"Some of the submarines came close to the big battleships and delivered telling surprise attacks, while others discharged their torpedoes at other capital ships, tearing large rents in their sides."

Hiraide relates how the subs submerged, then surfaced for a second moonlight attack. A detailed announcement by imperial headquarters is quoted:

"At 9:01 p.m., Hawaii time, of Dec. 7, just two minutes after the moon rose, a tremendoues explosion occurred in Pearl Harbor . . . . the enemy anti-aircraft batteries went into action, apparently mistaking the raid of the special attack flotilla for that of the Japanese air force."

A final wireless message was received from one of the subs at 10:41 p.m., which said "attacks successful."

"The vessels of the special attack flotilla are regarded as having either blown themsevles up or having been sunk by the enemy," the book said.

West German Chancellor Says Germany Will Prove Herself Reliable, Unflinching Partner

London, Dec 7—(AP)—Konrad Adenauer said today Germany will prove herself "a reliable and unflinching partner of the free nations" in the pursuit of peace.

Addressing the Foreign Press Association in London, the west German chancellor said the German people have found the path to a democratic commonwealth and are determined to join their fate to that of the western democracies.

Adenauer said that perhaps too much attention had been paid to activities of German veterans' organizations and neo-fascist groups.

"The federal republic," he said, "is determined to bring the entire weight of the law to bear upon all those who act contrary to the constitution. The events which took place between 1930 and 1933 will not be repeated.".

Earlier Adenauer went to Buckingham Palace and was received by the King. He was the first German leader to go there since Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop shocked Britain by giving King George V the Nazi salute in the mid-30's.

Adenauer ends his five-day visit tomorrow. He has had political talks with Prime Minister Churchill and Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, believed to have been aimed at mapping Anglo-German relations once the planned "peace contract" is signed.

Scattered left wing demonstrations have followed Adenauer's sight-seeing trail. But in the main the British press and people have given him little attention.

Lived Finest Hour Leading Surprise Attack

Nara, Japan, Dec. 7. (AP)—A Japanese farmer today said he lived his finest hour ten years ago when he led the surprise air attack on Pearl Harbor.

He is Mitsuo Fuchida, former navy captain who commanded the fighters and torpedo bombers that roared down on the major United States Pacific Naval Base Dec. 7, 1941.

Within two hours, more than 3,000 Americans were killed or wounded, a great portion of the fleet was sunk or damaged and the U.S. entered the Second World War.

Fuchida—now 49 and only recently taken off the purged lists—told in an interview of his momentous flight.

"Flying at the top or a 60-plane formation, I sneaked to the approach on Pearl Harbor with head lifted high. I was proud and felt convinced we were going to fight for the right cause of vindicating the rights of the Japanese race."

That was the Mitsuo Fuchida of ten years ago. Now, living quietly with his wife and two children on a farm in Nara prefecture on Western Honshu Island, Fuchida has had time to reflect in the last six years of peace."

"I might call myself a pacifist," Fuchida said as he leaned on his hoe in a rice field. "But I must honestly say that I am not a pacifist to the nth degree as yet.

'If, for the defence of Japan, my service is needed again, I am ready to answer the call at any moment.. . . ."

Egyptian Police In Zone Refuse To Give Up Arms

Ismalia, Egypt, Dec. 7—(Reuters)— Lt.-Gen. Sir George Erskine, commander of British troops in the Suez Canal zone, said today Egyptian police in the area have refused to give up their arms.

He told a press conference negotiations are continuing in an attempt to reach some agreement which would prevent clashes like those last Monday and Tuesday which cost 11 British and about 20 Egyptian lives.

Erskine said British troops are driving a road to the Suez water filtration plant, now almost isolated from the remainder of the British garrison.

Other roads and bridges are being built to help the Britons avoid trouble spots in their daily operations.

Singapore, Dec. 7 (Reuters)—Malaya shipped 94,988 long tons of rubber abroad during November—nearly 22,000 tons more than in October. The United States took 28,855 tons — 15,000 tons more than in October—and the United Kingdom 29,075 tons —4,000 more than in October. total rubber shipped from Malaya during the first 11 months this year was 1,055,688 tons.

Toronto, Dec. 7 — (CP) Ralph Webster Carey, 26-year-old Port Hope undertaker, Thursday lost an appeal against his 20-year-sentence on a conviction of raping a neighbor's wife.

U.S. CARGO PLANE WITH 10 ABOARD BELIEVED DOWN

Craft Only 40 Miles From Its Destination

Marseilles, France, Dec. 7. (AP) —A United States air force cargo plane with 10 persons aboard disappeared last night after radioing in only 40 miles—16 minutes—from its destination here.

The plane, a twin-engined C-47, was believed down in the mountainous terrain along the French Riviera, east of here, or perhaps in the Mediterranean. It was coming in from the U.S. air field at Tripoli.

A C-47 normally carries a crew of four, and the other six aboard were presumed to be passengers. The plane was attached to the U.S. Third Air Force base at Bentwaters Field, England.

The French army sent ground patrols fanning into the mountains while search planes, hampered by fog, took to the air.

Ships from the French and U.S. Navies steamed into the area to comb the Mediterranean waters. Italian naval and airplane rescue centres also were warned to stand by.

Air Force authorities said the plane last reported by radio at 7:41 p.m. (1:41 p.m. E.S.T.) yesterday. It was due to land at Marignane Field near here 16 minutes later.

Airport officials said the plane was only 40 miles away, flying at 3,000 feet, when it gave its last position.

Two other U.S. Air Force transports have been downed in Europe in the last month.

A C-47 bound from Erding, Germany, to Belgrade was forced down in Hungary Nov. 19 by Soviet Fighter planes. The plane and its four crew members still are held by the Hungarians.

Witness Takes Stand to Show Dance Graceful

Beverly Hills, Calif., Dec. 7. — (AP)— Beauteous Lili St. Cyr takes the witness stand today in an effort to convince a jury that her bubble bath routine is graceful artistry and not vulgarity as the prosecution contends.

Whether the leggy stripper will demonstrate her act remains to be seen. Miss St. Cyr says she is willing even eager, to give the jurors a close-up.

She'll have to go some to top her boss, portly Herman Hover, who put on quite a show for the jury yesterday. He is the proprietor of Ciro's, the Hollywood nitery raided by sheriff's deputies who called Lili's show lewd and indecent.

Hover demonstrated a bump and grind, neither of which, he added, was perpetrated by Lili. He described a bump as a "pelvic propulsion, whereas a grind is a circular movement of the hips without moving any other part of the body."

Nervous Women Need Sympathy More Than Medicine Say Doctors

Los Angeles, Dec. 7 (AP) — The nervous woman of today is "a scared and lonely individual" who needs sympathy more than medical treatment" says a California diagnostician.

She is a product of the machine age and is frustrated and confused by its speed, competition and complexity, Dr. Earl O. G. Schmitt of San Jose, Calif., told the American Medical Association.

There are five kinds of nervous women, Dr. Schmitt said: Those 65 or over; women in the menopause; the young matron; the recently-married woman whose husband may be in the service, and the "missed-by-marriage women."

A surprisingly large number of these women are "unhappy and worried about matters of sex," Dr. Schmitt said. This situation is made worse, he added, by the fact that many doctors neglect the subject or are incapable of giving useful advice about it.

The flood of current books and articles about sex are evidence of this wide uncertainly and confusion, he said. The much-discussed Kinsey report, though it may be well-intentioned, likely would not help the confused woman, and might even have "a very damaging effect on the proper understanding of sex problems and on the dignity of sex in the lives of many otherwise sane-minded women."

One cause of frustration, Dr. Schmitt said, is due to inability to keep up with some other person in doing work. Sometimes this other person is the husband who has a great capacity for work. Outclassed, the woman becomes frustrated.

Work is good medicine, he said. "I have a firm conviction that more nervous women are created over the bridge table than over the wash tub."

Hinted Reds Hold Only Half of 10,000 Listed as Missing

Sub-Committmen Wrangle Over Policing a Truce

By ROBERT B. TUCKMAN

Munsan, Korea Dec. 7—(AP)—Communists hinted at Panmunjom today that the reds hold no more than half of the 10,000 Americans listed as missing in Korea.

The report came from a Chinese correspondent outside the truce tent where allied negotiators, in a move observers said is aimed at getting a truce quickly, agreed to discuss withdrawal of foreign troops before an armistice is signed. But they won't talk about it until the proper time.

Chu Chi-Ping, a communist Chinese correspondent, said he knows of no war in which more than half of the soldiers reported missing were prisoners of war.

"I do not see why the Korean war would be different from other wars in this respect", Chu said.

Data Compiled

The communist reporter reiterated that the red command has compiled data on allied prisoners and will be ready with it when negotiators take up the question of prisoner exchange.

Other red correspondents said all allied prisoners of war are in north Korean camps and none have been taken to China.

They said all big camps are near the Manchurian border and that all prisoners have been issued warm winter clothing.

Maj.-Gen. Henry I. Hodes, United Nations negotiator, told communist delegates Friday the allies will talk about withdrawing troops from Korea after negotiators see eye to eye on enforcing an armistice and exchanging prisoners of war.

Sudden Reversal

The sudden reversal of allied policy came as sub-comitteemen wrangled endlessly over policing a truce.

One of the key roadblocks was allied insistence on rotating troops and replacing equipment and ammunition. The delegates also were a long way from agreement on inspection behind the lines and on communist insistence on building airfields during an armistice.

Until Friday the U.N. command had refused even to discuss plans for pulling troops out of Korea until an armistice is signed.

There was no immediate reaction from members of the communist sub-committee trying to negotiate a settlement of agenda item three — supervision of the truce. The delegates meet again at 11 a.m. Saturday (9 p.m. EST Friday.)

Long, Hard Strike At Ford Plant Is Indicated

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 7 (CP)—The strike of some 10,000 production workers at the Ford Motor Company of Canada plant here today moved into its fifth day with both sides refusing to yield on the issue leading to the work stoppage.

A long, hard strike was indicated after a 2 1-2 hour meeting yesterday of Ford officials and representatives of the United Automobile Workers (CIO-CCL) broke up without any statement from either side or a date set for another conference.

The strike started overtime dismissal of 26 men who, the company said, incited and took part in a wildcat walkout last Thursday. The union has demanded the reinstatement of the men but the company has stood firm on its insistence that the firings be submitted to arbitration.

The company has held to the stand that wildcat walkouts and any other unauthorized work stoppages must end once and for all. It says there have been 34 such stoppages since May, 1950.

The wildcat walkout Thursday was in protest over the delay in receiving a conciliation board report on a contract and wage dispute that has dragged on since last May. The report has since been handed down but it has been pushed into the background by the strike.

No evidence has been forthcoming that the company is ready to work out a compromise on the dismissals. Observers here feel that the company will fight the issue even if the plant should be tied up for some time.

In support of this view, they say the company dismissed the men in full knowledge of the fact that a strike would likely result.

Tuberculin Testing Of Students Arranged

The Board of Health has arranged to offer tuberculin testing to the students in grades IX and XII at the Collegiate next Tuesday. The Separate School students will be tested at a later date.

It is pointed out by the medical officer of health that the tuberculin test is a valuable aid to the diagnosis of tuberculosis. This simple safe procedure indicates whether or not an individual has been previously infected with tubercle bacilli. While a tuberculin reaction demonstrates the previous infection, it does not necessarily mean that actual disease is present. This must be determined by further examination, including a chest X-ray. Investigation has shown that the greater percentage of reactors show no demonstrable evidence of tuberculous disease.

It is important that all reactors and their immediate families should have a chest X-ray. This will be done free of charge at the Provincial Chest Clinic on Bridge Street West.

The success of this program is dependent upon the co-operation of all parents. They are urged to sign the consent form, which has been sent home from the Collegiate, so that all students in grades IX and XII may have this valuable test.

Amateur Radio Club Elects New Officers

The regular monthly meeting of the Quinte Amateur Radio Club was held on Tuesday evening at the Kiwanis Centre with an excellent attendance. "Hams" were present from Trenton, Picton, Campbellford and Belleville.

The speaker of the evening was Flight-Sergeant A. Vellman, R. C. A. F. Trenton, who gave a very interesting talk on "Mobile Radio". As the local amateur radio operators are greatly interested in emergency communication in connection with civilian defence, Mr. Vellman's experiences were most valuable. He was introduced by Al. Smith, and the thanks of the club were expressed by Roy A. White.

The annual election of officers was held with the following results: President, Al. Smith; Vice-president, Ross Dryden; Secretary, Howard Fralick; Treasurer, Pete Burnett.

Four valuable lucky - draw prizes were won by the following: H. Pitt and J. Cousins, who received Hammond plate transformers. H. Carruthers, who won a Philco multi-meter, and A. Vellman who received a supreme milli-amp meter.

After the business session, lunch was served and the boys enjoyed a real ham "gab-fest". The executive of the Quinte Amateur Radio Club extend a very hearty invitation to anyone interested in amateur radio to attend the regular monthly meetings.

Something New For Trapper

He cared little for fishing deadlines, rules or regulations.

When he saw the handsome speckled trout swimming in the lake in a northern area, his immediate dinner troubles were over.

It was out of season, but such trivial matters bothered him not one iota.

However, something must have warned him, for no sooner had he retrieved the speckled dinner from the water, than he hurried to a spot some distance from the shore, dug a hole and buried the finny booty.

He was seen at this task. A trapper emerged from the nearby bush after the culprit had left and dug up the fish. It was still living.

"H.mmmm" muttered the trapper, "I've seen some funny things in these here woods, but that's the first time I ever saw a fox bury a fish."

Tom Hutchinson Speaks to Club On Trip South

Y's man Tom Hutchinson who has recently returned from an intensive course in Maryland in connection with various aspects of the dry cleaning business, addressed his fellow members on his experiences and new developments in his trade at the regular weekly meeting of the club in the Y.M.C.A. last night.

He spoke briefly on the content of various courses which were presented, which he stated could be summarized as scientific management. He developed his subject giving an interesting history of the dry cleaning business from time of the introduction of the solvent benzine a coal tar product used in the mid-nineteenth century to the other dry cleaning solvents and cleaning methods of the present day.

Many Problems

The speaker indicated that there were many problems in the cleaning business which were increased by the great variety of fabrics on the market today. Each required a different treatment involving considerable research in order to establish methods. The industry had established research institute for the purpose of study in standards and methods and had the close co-operation of the Bureau of Standards at Washington.

Other problems involved removal of spots a process known as spotting. This process was in the hands of a highly-skilled person in the plant whose responsibility was the analyzing of the spot and the fabric in order to determine the best spotting method without damage to the fabric.

The speaker also referred to the process known as wet cleaning a technical procedure which was frequently confused with laundering by the public. He stressed that many garments could only successfully be treated by this method.

Y'sman Hutchinson was introduced by Roscoe Mooney and received the thanks of the club by Eric Whitfield.

Ed Littlejohn announced that plans were completed for the Y's-man's family Christmas party which would be held on Thursday December 13. Willis Hutchinson announced that the Christmas tree project was now underway with an excellent selection of trees having been procured.

Donors Thanked For Response At Blood Clinic

Chairman Bill Wills and officials of the Blood Donor Clinic of the Belleville branch of the Red Cross were deeply appreciative today of the splendid response given their appeal last Thursday.

Special tribute went to personnel of the Northern Electric Company here who contributed 135 of the 147 afternoon donors who reported to the clinic to give blood donations.

A total of 267 donors, 17 in excess of the quota set at 250 made their contributions during the day. Another large number offered their blood, but the clinic was unable to receive their donations.

"This strongly indicates that Belleville is maintaining its usual fine record in this very worthy cause," a clinic spokesman said.

Referring to those whose donations were not accepted," he said. "Our thanks goes to these people, too. They will have the opportunity to donate at a future date."

The need for blood is still urgent for the armed forces and any national emergency.

The next clinic will be held on January 5, 1952, at the Kiwanis Centre, Dundas Street.

FARM HOME DESTROYED

Kingston, Dec. 7 — (CP) —Fire today destroyed the farm home of Norman Cochrane, 10 miles northwest of Kingston. A barn also was destroyed in the blaze, believed caused by an overheated stove.

Mr. and Mrs. Cochrane carried to safety their children, Brenda, 7, and Douglas, 2.

Must Have Faith In the Future Makers are Told

"There was great need today to have faith in the future," said Rev. W. R. Johnston, of Toronto, in an address to members of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association, at their annual banquet at the Quinte Hotel, Thursday night.

"Worry, fear and anxiety are poisons, but faith will annihilate these poisons," said Dr. Johnston. Two other great needs of this day and age, said Dr. Johnston, were a sense of humor and a feeling of brotherhood.

Dr. Johnston, told a series of humorous anecdotes to illustrate his belief in the need for faith, humor and brotherhood. "Some of these stories", he said, "were factual, either his own experience or that of people he knew.

Professor W. H. Sproule, of Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, who presided over the meeting, also spoke. Professor Sproule urged upon the cheese makers the importance of doing what he called "a public relations job" for dairy products.

"With milk at around 22 cents a quart and cheese at around 50 cents a pound," said Professor Sproule, "there is no cheaper food, in relation to nutritional value, on the market today than either.

"These are not expensive foods, although a good many people seem to think they are. You have a big public relations job to do in selling your product. You can only do this by educating the public into understanding its value is high in relation to its price."

Accompanied by Dean Whalen on piano, Ethel Smith Lawrenson sang several songs. Other entertainers were three juveniles, Donald Matheson, Sheilagh Canning and Larry Regensburgh, who were presented to the audience by Peter Elliott of radio station CJBQ.

The Quintones, a quartet consisting of Alf Evans, John Grant, Dick Brettingham and Dalton Kaye, sang several songs.

Duncan Cowan, of Toronto, was master of ceremonies. He sang several songs accompanying himself on his accordion. He also led the gathering in a sing-song.

Royal Arch Masons Hold Field Day to Confer Degrees

The new Masonic Temple in Belleville was filled to capacity recently by Companions of Royal Arch Masons in Prince Edward District for the occasion of the first Field Day of conferring degrees on candidates supplied by various chapters in the district.

The district consists of: Moira No. 7, Belleville; St. Mark's No. 26, Trenton; Prince Edward No. 31, Picton; Mount Sinai No. 44, Napanee; Keystone No. 72, Stirling; Presqu'ile No. 144, Brighton; Madoc No. 161, Madoc, and Quinte Friendship, No. 227, Belleville.

Rt. Ex. Comp. Eveertt Wood, ar-Madoc, the Grand Superintendent of the district, was the general chairman of the activities of the day, being assisted by:

Rt. Ex. Comp. Everett Wood, arrangements for degrees; Rt. Ex. Comp. Bruce Smith, banquet and finance; Rt. Ex. Comp. Roy Anderson, entertainment. Ex. Comp. W. P. Youdale as secretary-treasurer of the Principals' Association, arranged the candidates for the various degrees.

Most of the chapters throughout the district supplied candidates for some or all of the degrees, which started at 2.30 p.m., when a class of 14 candidates was initiated into the first degree by a degree team supplied by members of Moira, St. Mark's, Keystone, and Presqu'ile Chapters under Ex. Comp. H. F. Burke as Worshipful Master.

Following this Ex. Comp. Percy Kerr, of Quinte Friendship Chapter, opened the second degree with officers from Quinte Friendship, Mount Sinia, Prince Edward and Madoc Chapters, when 30 candidates were received into the secrets of the second degree.

The impressive degree of the Holy Royal Arch was conferred on 36 candidates in a ceremony seldom witnessed in the district when past Grand Chapter officers of the district under the direction of Rt. Ex. Comp. Everett Wood as Z, exemplified the ritual of this degree in perfect manner. He was assisted in this work by the following:

Second Principal, Rt. Ex. Comp. J. Pow; Third Principal, Rt. Ex. Comp. Roy Anderson; Scribe E, Rt. Ex. Comp. E. T. Nayler; Scribe N., Rt. Ex. Comp. C. E. Goodwin; Director of Ceremonies, Rt. Ex. Comp. Bruce Smith; Principal Sojourner, Rt. Ex. Comp. H. C. McElrath; Senior Sojourner, Rt. Ex. Comp. W. Brady; Junior Sojourner, Rt. Ex. Comp. Gordon Bailey; Master 4th. Veil, Rt. Ex. Comp. N. M. Sprague; Master 3rd. Veil, Rt. Ex. Comp. Tom Solmes; Master 2nd. Veil, Rt. Ex. Comp. Percy Gunn; Master 1st. Veil, Rt. Ex. Comp. George Watson. Ex. Comp. W. P. Youdale acted as organist.

Assisting the above officers were: Most Ex. Comp. Fred Dean, Past Grand Z of the Grand Chapter; Rt. Ex. Companions Charles Letman, O. Morrow; Ex. Comps. Charles Bird, Clarence Meyers and Rt. Ex. Comp. J. A. Phillips, the senior Past Principal of Belleville, with over fifty years a Past Z.

A dinner was enjoyed by the Companions after the degree work followed by entertainment supplied by Alf. Evans' quartet, which received the full applause of those present for the various numbers.

Rt. Ex. Comp. Nayler presided over the toast list, which included toasts to Grand Chapter by Comp. Orval Kelly and responded to by Rt. Ex. Comp. F. McDairmid, of Ottawa.

The guest speaker, Most Ex. Comp. Fred Dean, of Hamilton, Past Grand Z, was introduced by Rt. Ex. Comp. Everett Wood and his address was most interesting, both to the old Companions as well as the newly exalted Companions in the craft.

His knowledge of Masonry and manner of delivering it was voted by all as a fitting climax to an event that appears to become an annual occasion in the district.

The welcome to the visitors was extended by Ex. Comp. Lorne Vaughn and responded to by Rt. Ex. Comp. William Brady, of Campbellford, and on behalf of the Grand Lodge of Canada in Ontario by Rt. Wor. Bro. Alva Collier, of South Bay.

$211,567 of Year's Allotment Of $260,000 Has Been Spent County Engineer Tells Council

Written reports, mimeographed to provide a copy for each council member, will be submitted by committee chairman at county council meetings in the future.

This was decided by Hastings county council Thursday following the reading of a lengthy roads and bridges committee report which took over half an hour to read. The report was read by county engineer Larry Langlois.

Reeve Charles Buskard moved the recommendation calling for the mimeographed reports in the future. He said that councillors would be better able to digest a lengthy report if they were able to read it themselves.

A number of councillors spoke in favor of the idea while Reeve T. Tryon of Bancroft said the mimeographed reports would prove helpful to councillors in assisting them to keep in closer touch with council work.

Not All Spent

The roads and bridges report read by Mr. Langlois showed that $211,567 of the year's allotment of $260,000 had been spent on the county road system by Nov. 1.

During the year a new tractor and angledozer had been purchased at a cost of $13,393, while a half-ton pick-up truck costing $1,550 had also been purchased.

Three hundred and seventy tons of calcium chloride had been used to dust treat 100 miles of county road at a cost of $16,338. There was an increased demand each year for roads to be thus treated. In addition to this asphalt primer had been applied on 34 miles at a cost of $18,920. Total expenditure for dust laying was $35,258.

Portions of several roads were surface treated while 21 roads and bridge construction jobs were undertaken during the year. Construction jobs ranged from installing guide rails to cutting down hills and fencing right of ways.

Hot Mix Used

Hot mix paving was done on a quarter mile stretch of road from Cannifton to No. 14 highway and plans are to pave a short stretch of road in Frankford.

One of the major bridge repair jobs was on the Madoc-Foxboro road at Moira Lake, where it was found necessary to make repairs to concrete piers. The tendered price for this job was $4,366 with an additional $260 for cement.

Mr. Langlois stated that the above bridge although intended to bear a load of only 15 tons safely had been used by a float truck with a 42-ton load.

Plans were being made for snowplowing this winter and efforts would be made to have roads plowed each day after storms in time for school buses to get through. However, if a heavy winter occurs delays were bound to happen.

An agreement had been signed with the highways department for the construction as a development of a four-mile stretch of the Frankford-Foxboro road. However, the government had advised it did not see its way clear to let a contract for this work but money would be provided for the work to be undertaken by the county. No construction could be started until the survey was completed and plans received.

Further Expenditure

A total of $32,922 had been spent on resurfacing and patching up to November 1st and there would be further expenditure before the end of the year.

Reeve Ross Neal of Deseronto said that the survey and preparation of costs estimates for the proposed causeway and bridge at the Deseronto ferry to Prince Edward County would go ahead as soon as safe ice was frozen on the bay. "The survey work could be done much cheaper and easily from the ice," he said.

It was pointed out that the provincial government had agreed to pay 80 percent of the cost of a causeway at this point, the counties of Prince Edward and Hastings to bear the other 20 percent. Efforts would be made to have the Federal government bear the cost of a swing bridge across the ship channel.

Glen Miller Bridge Discussed

Reeve Lee Grills of Sidney township brought up the question of the Glen Miller bridge across the Trent River which he said was closed from time to time for repairs.

Mr. Langlois replied the bridge was frequently put out of condition by heavy loads. The bridge had been recently closed for repairs and was re-opened only this week.

"The bridge presents a serious and dangerous condition," he said.

Plans had been prepared for a new bridge at this point but council had not decided to proceed with the work. Securing of the necessary steel would be a difficult problem now, he said.

To a question as to whose responsibility it would be if the bridge went down and some one was drowned, Mr. Langlois said he was not prepared to answer. When bridges were unsafe for loads over a certain limit the county tried to prevent accidents by asking that trucks over that limit use some other route.

Several of the members complimented roads and bridge committee chairman Verney Heath for the work accomplished during the year. Deputy Reeve Leslie McLaren of Tyendinaga said rebuilding of the Shannonville gravel was a move in the right direction as many of the county roads were being called upon to bear traffic comparable to that of some provincial roads.

County Assessor Heard

County assessor Harry Harrison said re-assessment had been completed in the village of Tweed and also in the townships of Huntingdon and Elzevir and Grimsthorpe. Also work had been done in Rawdon, in Hungerford and Herschel and Monteagle. He said he had been asked to complete re-assessments in the municipalities comprising the Centre Hastings High School Area as soon as possible. He asked the co-operation of assessors in these townships to carry this out.

Reeve R. Neal noted that his town of Deseronto had recently spent $2,000 to have a re-assessment and wanted to know if the assessments would be considered in line. Mr. Harrison said the slightly different method of assessing recommended by the government might change some of the business assessments but he thought assessment of residences would be in line.

Rate Too High Claim

Reeve T. C. Graham of Tweed said there had been complaints in his village that the rate set for business assessments under the re-assessment were too high. He felt these should be changed to suit rural conditions.

The amount to be paid by the county for indigent burials came up for discussion when a bill of $100 from a local undertaker was submitted for payment. It was noted that the previous rate had been $50 for each indigent burial.

A letter from undertakers was read in which it was claimed that costs had risen to an extent that the former rate could no longer apply. It was revealed a council committee had discussed the matter and had suggested a figure of $75 per indigent burial but no decision had been made.

Reeve Grills said the bill for $100 was a test case to see what the county would do. The matter was laid over.

Reeve Harold Wells gave the report of the finance and property committee referring to certain repairs at the court house building which had been laid over until next year. Tenders had been called for eavestroughing but the tenderer was unable to complete the work this year. Tenders for the work will be called again next year.

Heavy Indigent Payments

Mr. Wells noted that $29,949 had been paid out by the county for indigent hospital patients, while since the first of January the Children's Aid Society had been paid $25,343.

"And they say this isn't enough?" asked Reeve Clarke Rollins.

"Don't confuse the issue," urged Reeve Buskard. "The amount mentioned by Reeve Wells is for actual child care and certain other expense, and is provided by a straight charge of $1 per day per child. Extra money is needed for protection care and there is no provision for raising this except through tag days, contributions and so on."

Reeve Neal gave the publicity report noting that the county would not participate in the Cleveland sports show this year. Five thousand additional tourist booklets had been ordered this year. This is less than a year ago as some were left over. "Of the $1,800 budget his committee had spent $1,774," Reeve Neal said.

By-Laws Read

By-laws were read deleting some section of road from the county road and assuming others while third reading was given to by-laws borrowing $175,000 for Centre Hastings High School area, and $300,000 for debentures for the county home. Of this amount $137,000 will be paid by the city.

County representatives to the three high school areas in the county were appointed for 1952. They are Brooks Allen for the Bay of Quinte High School district; Don Campbell for Centre Hastings; Thos. Bronson for North Hastings; John Berry for Deseronto, and John Reid for the Trenton High School board.

Hastings County Council Says $1,200,000 County Home Retains Old Admission Rules

Present rules of admission regarding inmates will be adhered to at the new Hastings county home on the Trent Road just outside the city limits.

This was decided Thursday when the matter was raised in county council following a report on the county home by committee chairman Lee Grills, reeve of Sidney township.

"I don't want it to be thought that we are trying to keep people out of the home," he stated, "but the fact is, in the true sense, the building is still a house of refuge—a place for people who haven't any place else to go."

Mr. Grills went on to say there had been many requests for admission to the home but reminded the county was not "running a boarding house."

"We must try to get across the idea of the purpose for which the home was built," he said.

Infirmary Wing Discussed

Another matter brought up for discussion was the use to which the infirmary wing of the new home would be put.

Mr. Grills said the hospital wing of the home never was intended to be operated as hospital by taking in outside patients. It was built to take care of home inmates who might take sick. It was pointed out, however, that the sooner the new home was filled with admissible inmates the cheaper it would be to operate.

Reeve T. C. Graham of Tweed wanted to know what the present rules of admission were. Reeve Grills replied he did not know off-hand all of the rules that applied but said if they were adhered to there would be no trouble.

One of the rules was that an inmate could not be ill when admitted.

This did not quite satisfy Reeve Irving McCoy of Marmora township, who argued if people could be maintained in the infirmary wing cheaper than at a hospital then that was the place for them.

Mr. Grills replied however that if the wing were filled with sick persons from the outside there would be no room for inmates who might take ill.

Never Can Tell

"You can never tell when elderly inmates might take ill and room must be kept for them in the hospital wing," Reeve Jack Kincaid of Madoc, pointed out.

Reeve Charles Buskard noted that 50 beds in the home were reserved for the city of Belleville and with over 100 inmates now in the home this would leave little room for additional county inmates. Total beds numbered about 175, he said.

The city-county agreement with respect to use of the home could not extend beyond 30 years, according to Mr. Grills. The agreement was for 20 years and could be renewed for another 10 years. The city owns no part of the home and after that time would have no further interest.

In his report on the new home, Reeve Grills said there was still some work to do on the grounds with landscaping and some walks still to be laid as well as some permanent surfacing to be placed on the roads.

Tenders Too High

Roads about the new home had been placed by the county after tenders received for the work seemed to be too high in price. The lowest tender for the work had been $20,000 and work to date by the county had cost $12,000 which was well within the original figure.

There were 104 inmates now in the home, of which seven were from the city. Six additional inmates were expected this week. Permanent staff at the home numbered 20 with an additional two full-time firemen and two part-time firemen.

Cost of the new home with equipment totalled $1,200,000. The county had received $300,000 from the city as the price for the old home, while the provincial government subsidy had amounted to 50 per cent. Belleville would pay $137,000 toward the cost of the home. Cost of the home to the county in "new money" was but about $165,000, Mr. Grills said.

PICTON

800 Baby Chicks, Grain, Machinery Lost in Blaze

Picton — A large barn, containing one thousand bales of hay, a thousand bales of straw, the season's crop of grain, a full line of machinery, and 800 baby chicks and other articles was destroyed by fire about ten o'clock Wednesday morning.

Scene of the disastrous outbreak was at the farm of Ralph Norton, near Cherry Valley.

Livestock was outside, being watered, and only this fact saved them, since the large frame structure was a mass of flames in a matter of minutes.

It was the 12th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Norton, the latter a Montreal girl.

A fund to aid them is being started by friends, and donations are being received by John B. Haggerty and Lyall Hicks, Cherry Valley.

Watering Stock at Time

"Ralph was watering the livestock, and on returning to the barn noticed smoke," Mrs. Norton told the reporter. "He tried to get from the basement to the floor above, but was driven back by the flames. He was just able to get out the tractor and the car.

Eight hundred baby chicks, received the previous Friday were lost. A building for them was attached to the barn.

The drivehouse and sheds also burned and fences caught fire. Lack of wind saved the house.

Several bags of alfalfa seed in the drivehouse, milking machine and separator were among things burned.

A new metal roof had been put on the barn since Mr. Norton moved there five years ago. It is better known as the Sam Brummell farm and was later owned by Harry Gerow.

Neighbors quickly responded to the alarm but could do nothing since it was a very rapid conflagration.

The loss is only partly covered by insurance. A Bay of Quinte Insurance Co. official had inspected this and other barns the previous day, checking fire hazards, and found everything satisfactory.

ROBB SEES TROUBLE AHEAD

Those were serious charges which were made against this country's federal government by Malcolm Robb, a Belleville lawyer, in a speech made before the Ontario Automotive Transport Association in Toronto.

Mr. Robb said the federal government was "debauching the national currency." "We are on the same path as a business headed for bankruptcy," he said. At another point, Mr. Robb said: "The government is pursuing a path which is dishonest." He described the government's fiscal policies as being "as bad as those of the stock salesmen who are being chased by the Ontario Securities Commission." Mr. Robb also recalled a remark by Lenin, one of the fathers of Communism, to the effect that the surest way to conquer a (capitalist) country was to debase its currency.

Mr. Robb denounced the government for following "a settled policy of handing out cold cash without increasing production." During a five-year period ending in 1950, he claimed, production had not increased one iota, and had even declined slightly, although the labor force was larger and management had injected millions of dollars into improved productive equipment. During the same period of time, he said, the supply of money had increased by 39 per cent.

As examples of "giving away money" in places where it did nothing to increase production, Mr. Robb mentioned both the $26,000,000 monthly paid in baby bonuses and the as yet unknown number of millions which will be required to pay universal old age pensions, beginning at the end of the current year. He spoke also of a gift of $2,500,000 given to certain apple growers and of another $65,000,000 given to western wheat producers.

Some people will agree with Mr. Robb, while others will doubtless denounce him as a radical. There is no denying, however, that there is a great deal more money in circulation than there was before the war, or even at the close of the war, and that this same money has lost almost one half of its purchasing power. It is also undeniable that the settled policy of the government seems to be to give away large sums of money to individuals and groups who have done nothing to earn it.

Let us hope that Mr. Robb is mistaken in his contention that Canada is heading for national bankruptcy. Many thoughtful people are already wondering, however, about what is going to happen in the end if money continues, almost from week to week, to decline in purchasing power.

WHY MUNICIPALITIES ARE POOR

The Toronto Telegram says that in 1939, the federal government took 48 cents of every tax dollar paid by the Canadian people, while in 1949 it took 67 cents out of every tax dollar collected in Canada.

In 1939, provincial governments collected 22 cents of each tax dollar. In 1949, the provincial governments' share had dropped to 20 cents of each tax dollar.

In 1939, the municipalities took 30 cents of each tax dollar. By 1949, the share of the tax dollar collected by the municipalities had dropped to 13 cents.

These figures explain, among other things, why municipal councillors, from one end of the country to the other, are forced to try to make one dollar do the work of three.

WINNIE RUTH'S BACK

Probably a good many of the younger folk have never heard of her, but Winnie Ruth Judd, the "insane blonde tiger woman" of two decades ago, is back in the news.

Winnie Ruth has just completed her fourth escape from the institution for the criminally insane in which she has been confined most of the time for the last 20 years. As on the three previous occasions, she has been recaptured.

This woman's original exploit, the one which caused writers for the tabloids to bestow on her the title "insane blonde tiger woman," was the killing and dismembering of two young women who tried to lure away some of her admirers.

OLDEST ALDERMAN

Brockville claims the honor of having the oldest alderman in Canada in the person of R. J. Higgins, who has just been re-elected, at the head of the polls. Mr. Higgins is 84.

Mr. Higgins, it seems, is not only young enough to carry on as an alderman, but also young enough to continue with his occupation of interior decorating.

Mr. Higgins has four votes, because he owns property in four wards. But, he claims, he only voted for himself once at last Monday's election.

THE INEVITABLE

This the living must have learned:
All who come to earth must leave.
None from death has ever earned
More than just a brief reprieve.

All who live are outward bound.
Pilgrims through the years we go.
When and where the call will sound
None has been allowed to know.

Now we should prepare for grief,
Since the living bear it must.
Only by a firm belief
Death is right and God is just.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

STILLNESS

Stillness is one of the great assets of this life. I like that phrase from the Bible where it says: "Be still, and know that I am God". And there is another favorite line from David's Twenty-third Psalm: "He leadeth me beside the still waters."

In the stillness of the night there is space for thought and meditation, for prayer, and for a new appraisement of values. In the noise and confusion of moving multitudes, in the streets and highways, and among crowds, we lose our identity. Our nerves are tensioned and assaulted as though they were our enemies instead of what they were meant to be—our bodily friends.

No medicine is so effective as stillness, especially in the world of nature—upon a quiet night beside a still stream or body of water, or under a star lighted sky. There are those who have become so habituated to noise and confusion that stillness bothers them, and they grow restless under its actual soothing influence!

But what a boon to the mind, the heart, and the whole body, is selective stillness. In which there is taken time to think, to review life, to relax, and to seek the peace that we all crave so much when most needed. Doctor Stillness never sends in a bill! His service is free—and with gratitude that you searched him out.

What a gratifying stillness settles about a place after a great storm. Thornton Wilder once wrote that "We can only be said to be alive in those moments when our hearts are conscious of our treasure." It is at times of stillness that the treasures of this earth float before our eyes, as they do to the navigator of a ship in the air when he looks upon the stars as "the frozen glitter of diamonds."

Stillness makes us lift the shades to our heart so that the full light of hope, faith, and assurance may stream in to give us newness of spirit, blotting out all fear and anxiety—the world itself made new to us.

Gold Bearing Plants Give Big Yield

Toronto, Dec. 7 — (CP) Geologist Hans Lundberg states that gold bearing plants — yielding as much as $400 an acre — soon may be grown commercially.

He told of an area in Indiana with colloidal gold in the soil. When horsetail fern was planted it absorbed as much as nine ounces of gold in a ton of plant matter.

Mr. Lundberg spoke to the faculty of applied science and engineering of the University of Toronto.

PREDICT OPEN WINTER

Timmins, Dec. 7 — (CP) Trappers bringing in their first catches of the season predict an open winter for Northern Ontario on the basis of light fur on beaver and muskrat. Bushmen report rivers as far north as James Bay still open — the first time this has happened in their memory.

OUR TOWN

BY JACK SCOTT

THE QUIET ONE

One of the most pleasant ways I know to spend a Sunday morning is to lie abed and think about things. I do some of my best thinking, such as it is, on a Sunday morning, especially if it's cold and mean outside, which is the way I like my Sunday.

It is a good time and place to think about things. There's none of the urgency of the other mornings of the week. There's not much point getting up. You're not going anywhere. Besides it's cold outside.

If it were, say, Tuesday morning you couldn't do much thinking. Your conscience would be barking at you about getting up. But Sunday morning—well, the bed is your own special isle, your own Bali-Hai. You can lie there with the rain lashing at the windows and have a real good think.

Why, only yesterday I lay abed, happy as a slug on a warm log, and did a lot of thinking about people who want to make Sundays like every other day in the week.

Seem to be an awful lot of people working like the devil to get rid of what they call the old-fashioned Sunday. I've been listening to some of them on the radio. The idea seems to be that they want to spend their Sundays on wooden benches looking at large men throw baseballs at each other or sitting in the dark like quiet sheep playing make-believe, Hollywood style.

Shucks, I'm all in favor of people doing what they want. They can all go ride in six-day bike races. It won't matter a darn to me. I'll still be in bed, thinking or reading the weekend funny papers. What does worry me is why people are going to so much trouble to get rid of something that always seemed to me pretty darn nice.

Slight Daze

Take Sundays around our house. It's a very special kind of day. Not like the other days at all. Usually the kids come in to our bed and play "tent" or get the comics read to them and sometimes Judy—that's our oldest one—will bring breakfast in on a tray. That's if she's working on a loan or something.

Almost nothing gets done all day. I go around in a kind of happy coma, myself, occasionally staring out the window to see if it's going to clear up and looking hopefully for black clouds.

If it is a real good Sunday, or one with a pelting rain all day, I may never get out of my pyjamas and just lie around in a stupor reading Raymond Chandler detective stories or listening to the awful programs on the radio.

If the sun persists in shining we may go for a walk. No place in particular, mind you. Just meander along where the mood takes us. Sunday is that kind of day. You don't have to have any particular goal.

It was always that way as far back as I can remember. I still recall climbing into bed with my folks and how my old man would read me Mutt and Jeff. There was a slight, pleasant tobacco smell about him and a stubble of beard like sandpaper because, of course, no sensible man would shave on a Sunday. I liked Sundays. I still do.

Seems to me that it's about the only day you can make into a family affair, the only day you can really let the clockwork run down. I've been talking about myself, but it's this way too with most of the people I know. In the summer time they putter around their weeds or just sit on the porch and in the winter they have that seventh-day hibernation I've been speaking about.

Some of them go to church. Some of them don't. Those that do won't be kept away by a ball game.

Two Reasons

The more you think about it the more it comes down to two things. Or maybe a little of both. One is that people can't seem to amuse themselves as they used to. The other is that the home and family life just isn't as strong as it ought to be.

A lot of people—even a couple of union men I heard the other night—are saying that the "open" Sunday with ball games and shows and such is important for lonely people who haven't anything to do on a Sunday.

Doesn't make much sense to me. A guy who can't find some fun in a book or a meander through the park isn't a guy who is going to be saved by any Sunday ball game. The lonely people, in fact are almost always the elderly and my sympathy goes to them. But an open Sunday means nothing at all to them.

It looks more to me like a sign of restlessness that's moving some of the old home atmosphere out of the living room and down to the bowling alley or the neighborhood palace of shadows.

It's not anything I want to get mad about. If some fellow wants to sit up in the bleachers that's his business. Maybe he's got a wife that snarls at him all day. Maybe he's the kind of guy who doesn't know what to do unless he's watching something. If that's what he wants he ought to have the right to it.

But I feel sorry for him and anybody else who hasn't found that inner peace of doing nothing at all on the seventh day.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

GOLDEN DREAMS

Human energy and ambition are wonderful things. Lincoln rose from a log cabin to the White House, and the annals of our country are full of stories of bootblacks and newsboys who became industrial magnates through their industry and vigor. If a man really sets his heart on something, and completely dedicates himself to it, he can usually accomplish it.

But how important it is to devote ourselves to something worthwhile! A small aim cannot make a great man, and a bad aim wastes power that could have been used for a good purpose. Those people who make mere wealth or social position or sensual pleasure their goal often achieve it, but they find that the achievement leaves them unhappy and still dissatisfied.

A Greek legend tells of King Midas, who was so greedy for wealth that he prayed for the power to turn things to gold by touching them. His wish granted, he went about delighted at first, transforming everything around him, and heaping up incredible riches. But his joy was short-lived. When he tried to eat, his food turned to gold in his mouth, so that he sat hungry amidst his riches. And still worse, when he kissed his daughter, she immediately changed into a lifeless golden statue. His golden dream had blown-up in his face.

What we devote our life to should be worthy of the life we devote to it.

TWO MONTHS VACATION IN THIRTY-EIGHT YEARS

Remarkable statement of a professor of periodontology (study of the gums and other structures around the teeth) appeared in a Canadian paper recently. As one conclusion reached in a study of the tooth brushing habit or process the professor is of the opinion that most persons waste 90 per cent of the time, muscle and money they spend cleaning their teeth.

Oh, so, the teachers of dentists are beginning to see the light.

I cudgled what I laughingly call my brains for a while trying to think what the 10 per cent of brushing time, energy and money not wasted by the poor geek who brushes his teeth can do towards saving teeth. I had to give it up—until I get further particulars from the professor I'm going to continue using a toothbrush only to clean the type on this cantankerous writing machine.

As the newspaper report has it, the professor believes brushing the teeth from east to west or from north to south and vice versa or criss-cross is of little benefit. Nor is a bold sweeping scrub across the teeth of much use. These methods skip across the crevices in the depths of which the nasty little microbes are multiplying madly and fermenting sugar into acids which eat away the tooth structure, regardless of how clean you keep the tooth surfaces. To my mind, this is all absurd, but I just can't see eye-to-eye with the dentists about the cause and prevention of tooth decay.

Here's the pay-off of the professor's study: Instead of vigorous up-and-down or side-to-side strokes of the brush, gently wiggling or vibrating in a circle not over 4 millimeters wide, more particularly in the spaces between the teeth, and the margins of the gums—excuse me, the gingival tissues. If you deal in this way systematically with these crevices each time you brush your teeth the busines should take not more than three hours of your time daily, I should say.

How silly can you get about cleaning your teeth? In Yankeeland, where the poorest teeth in the world (*) are associated with what we childishly regard as the highest scale of living, it seems there is no limit on such nonsense.

The finest teeth in the world are the teeth of the people of Tristan da Cunha where they have no use for tooth brushes or dentifrices. How come? Well, the "lonely isle" is so far away that the dentists and their mentors the toothbrush and dentifrice vendors needn't worry much about you dumb laymen learning how to preserve your teeth.

(*) Perhaps the English have poorer teeth than Americans—this is one of the questions I'd like to settle in my own mind if I can take, say, two months off and tour the bowling greens of England next summer. I'd like to hear from readers, editors, dentists, vendors of toothbrushes and dentifrices, physicians and eke lawn bowlers about this.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

In most parts of Canada, the onset of foul weather and Christmas coincide. If Christmas fell on July first, there would still be immense congestion of traffic in the downtown and uptown shopping districts. But since it falls at precisely the time of year that the first real blizzards may be expected, we have a situation that advances, year by year, towards some sort of crisis.

A few seasons ago, one of the largest department stores in Canada devoted a lot of money and space to promoting a "Do your Christmas shopping early" campaign. Instead of improving the situation, the campaign had the reverse effect: because that year, the store had the worst experience of its history. Everybody seemed to have put off shopping to the last minute. The store executives came to the conclusion that the public, impressed by the campaign, decided it would have the desired effect on everybody else, and there would be plenty of room for them alone the day or two before Christmas.

The inescapable fact appears to be that the public actually chooses to suffer the torments, the exhaustion and the frustration of last-minute Christmas shopping. It is a festival of fatigue, a carnival of confusion, a jubilee of jitters that is somehow embedded in the average person's mind as part of the ritual of Christmas. I am told by trained business psychologists that out of the thousands of women and men who jam the stores on the eve of Christmas are hundreds who do not shop at all, who have no intention of shopping, who have done all their shopping perhaps weeks before, but who cannot resist the attraction of those milling mobs of Christmastide, and are drawn into the melee as moths are drawn to a light.

The fact that the weather may be terrible has no effect upon us; this is the time of swarming, as the bees swarm. And, like the bees, we are affiliated by a sort of stupor in our swarming, so that we move about the throng in a daze.

WILL HOLD CAUCUS

Toronto, Dec. 7 — (CP) — The eight Liberals elected in the Ontario election Nov. 22 will hold a caucus today when it probably will be decided whether any of the eight will yield his legislature seat to the defeated Ontario Liberal leader Walter Thomson.

Mr. Thomson, it was reported, has made it clear that he will not ask for a seat but is looking for a "volunteer."

Mr. Thomson was defeated in Ontario riding by T. D. Thomas, C.C.F. candidate.

Payment According to Quality Urged On Cheese Industry by C. N. Heath

Payment to the producer according to the quality of his product will help speed the cheese industry back to its former level, Charles N. Heath, secretary-manager, Ontario Cheese Producers' Association, said Thursday.

Speaking to the Central Ontario Cheese Makers Association convention at the Hotel Quinte, he declared that as long as returns are pooled and no differential made, progress to regain lost ground will be slow.

"We talk a lot at conventions about many things, but unless something is done, we shall not get anywhere," he said.

He urged the producer to be market-conscious. He should have an idea where his market is and what it wants. He must know what he has to sell."

"Let's get down to business and not talk of giving up, but getting up," he said.

Price Supported

Referring to the Marketing Board's new scheme, he said it is still supporting the price of 33 cents and will do so until the scheme is amended.

He said Canada had committed itself to send 18 million pounds of cheese overseas and of 25 1-2 million pounds made between May and October one-half had been exported. Besides this 1,800,000 pounds had been shipped from Quebec.

Saying that some cheese makers were worried about how much they would receive from the "three cents", he added that nothing can be done about it until the general convention.

Mr. Heath said he could not forecast next year's prices. It depends a lot on the product, importation and the export price. "We must get closer to the production season before we can do any predicting."

He outlined the various factors that are taking milk away from the cheese factory. "Should we accept these conditions, or do something about it?"

Oleo Use Rising

He warned that margarine consumption is on the increase and may control the price of butter.

He deplored the fact that the dairy industry seems to stand still and look at "one another." It lacks the formation of a policy, mainly because the producer depends too much on the other fellow. When Ontario and Quebec get together and develop a policy of securing more milk, then the industry will get somewhere.

Mr. O. R. Irvine, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, outlined and reviewed the progress made in extraction of extraneous matter from cheese since the federal government assumed jurisdiction from provincial governments. A highly satisfactory increase in the proportion of clean cheese was apparent over the test period of nine years, he said.

Good Season

J. M. Bain, chief dairy instructor for central and western Ontario said that central Onson in the cheese business although production was somewhat lower than 1950.

Quality was excellent and the average scores made criticism difficult.

He dwelt briefly on the phases of cheese making saying that the first season of block manufacture was highly satisfactory.

He suggested that a Dominion premium be paid on clean and fairly clean cheese, adding that sediment tests procedure would not only encourage clean milk supplies but also encourage factory improvements.

Mr. Roland Camarande, general inspector of dairy products for Quebec, outlined the dairy production of his province in a brief address. It produces 33 percent of Canadian butter and 19 percent of the cheese production of Canada.

Quebec Cheese Decline

Last year cheese production declined 20 percent with butter increasing from five to 10 percent. Many factories in Quebec, he said are of the combined type switching from butter manufacture to that of cheese. Some large factories have stopped the manufacture of cheese entirely and are devoting their efforts to that of butter and casein.

A scheme is under way in Quebec, the speaker said, whereby groups of factory operafots, owners and producers are co-operating with the farmers in an effort to secure cleaner milk.

He felt that closer co-operation between Ontario and Quebec would result in the same quality of products for both the export and domestic markets.

WEDDINGS

LORIMER—DELORME

A quiet, but pretty double-ring ceremony was solemnized at a Mass at 8 o'clock, recently in the Church of St. Michael the Archangel, Belleville, when Marie Jacqueline Delorme, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fortunate Delorme, Toronto, and William Lawrence Lorimer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Lorimer, Belleville, were united in marriage. Rev. Father John J. V. Buckley officiated.

The bride was radiant in her gown of white Chantilly lace over bridal satin, fashioned with a molded bodice, featuring a Peter Pan collar and long sleeves pointed over the hands. Her long, flowing skirt ended in a slight train. A halo headdress held her floor-length veil of nylon net and she carried a beautiful semi-crescent bouquet of Bettertime roses.

Mrs. Walter Woodacre, Belleville, sister of the bride, was matron of honor, attractively attired in lavender nylon with lace insertion at the deep neckline. Her headdress was of harmonizing flowers and she carried a bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums, fashioned after the bride's bouquet.

Mr. Wm. Wade, of Toronto, acted as groomsman.

Following the wedding, a reception was held for relatives and close friends at the home of the bridegroom's parents, on Charles Street.

The happy couple will reside in Belleville.

Prior to her marriage, Mrs. Lorimer was graciously feted at two lovely miscellaneous showers, held at the home of Miss M. Maracle, Patterson Street, and Mrs. Woodacre, Front Street, respectively, at which the bride-to-be was a most appreciative recipient of many lovely gifts. Also the bride and bridegroom were presented with a beautiful living-room table by the groom's fellow employees at the Northern Electric Company.

STEWART—BURLEY

Brock Avenue Gospel Hall, Toronto, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday, December 1st, at 2:30 p.m., when Mr. F. G. Watson united in marriage Dorothy Joan Burley, of Deseronto, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Burley, to Donald Alexander Stewart, of Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Stewart, Woodbridge, Ont. Chrysanthemums and ferns formed a pleasing background for the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a lovely bridal gown of white slipper satin fashioned with fitted bodice, full skirt and train, with lace trim. She wore a Juliet cap of matching material and an Italian lace veil.

Miss Elizabeth Burley, of Toronto, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, gowned in claret taffeta. Miss Eleanor Stewart, of Toronto, sister of the bridegroom, and the Misses Fern and Phyllis Burley, of Deseronto, twin sisters of the bride, were bridesmaids. All were gowned alike in melon taffeta with matching hats and muffs, carrying white 'mums and pink roses.

Mr. Joseph H. Paul, of Toronto, attended the bridegroom, and Mr. Dean F. S. Carew, and Mr. Alexander Joyce, both of Toronto, acted as ushers.

At the reception, which was held at the Prince Arthur House, Toronto, the bride's mother received, wearing dark green satin, assisted by the bridegroom's mother, who wore wine crepe and lace.

For motoring to Florida, and flying to Cuba, the bride chose a chartreuse suit, with black velvet accessories and seal cape. Upon their return, they will reside in Toronto.

Guests were present from Deseronto, Kingston, Peterborough, London, St. Catharines, Niagara Falls, Stirling, Oshawa and Hamilton.

Women's Activities

BRIDGE STREET W.A.

The Women's Association of Bridge Street Church held its regular monthly meeting in the church parlor last Friday afternoon. The president, Mrs. J. E. Marsh, presided. Reports read by the secretary-treasurer, and conveners of the various committees showed activity in all phases of W.A. work. The treasurer's report on the annual Christmas bazaar was a gratifying one.

Following the business period of the meeting, Mrs. Adsett took charge and called on Mrs. E. Fairman for the devotional. Her theme was "The Advent Season". She pointed out the fact that there are Psalms to fit every mood and proved this to be true by reading passages from a number of different Psalms.

Rev. Keith Daniel, minister of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church, guest speaker for the afternoon, was introduced by Rev. Duncan McTavish. "Negro Spirituals" was the subject of the address in which Mr. Daniel outlined much of the history of the origin of spirituals from both Africa and the United States.

Mrs. Carman Massey expressed the thanks of the ladies present to Mr. Daniel for his splendid address and his singing which everyone had enjoyed so much.

Following the benediction the group in charge served refreshments.

Mrs. F. Wilson Talks To Holloway Street W.M.S. Auxiliary

The Christmas meeting of the Holloway Street W.M.S. Auxiliary was held in the church parlors on Tuesday afternoon. The president, Mrs. Coulter, presided.

Many gratifying reports were heard during the business session. Everyone enjoyed a solo "The Little Road Through Nazareth", sung by Mrs. McDonald.

Mrs. C. Holmes led in a beautiful candle-lighting and carol service. Mrs. S. Westover lit the first candle for the Jewish race into which Christ was born; Mrs. Johns lit a candle for the Canadian Indians; Mrs. Kilbank for French Canadians; Mrs. Moynes for those Canadians whose homes were originally in Africa or Asia, and Mrs. Burrowes for new Canadians from Europe. Mrs. Weese lit the candle of Christian Love saying that "Love can speak a language all nationalities can understand".

Guest Speaker

Mrs. F. Wilson, vice-president of the Belleville Presbyterial, was guest speaker. She urged that the W.M.S. members make a special effort to interest all church women in the work of the W.M.S. The help of all church women is needed to accomplish the work there is to be done. Mrs. Wilson asked that when it again came sectional rally time that all seize the opportunity of going and hearing the missionaries and leaders. She also urged support of the campaign for the new United Church Training School.

Mrs. Wilson closed her address by asking that the W.M.S. make this Christmas a true celebration of the birth of the Prince of Peace.

A social half hour was enjoyed when the 1951 executive served a lovely Christmas tea.

Jubilee Evening Auxiliary Presents Nativity Pageant

The Jubilee Evening Auxiliary held their Christmas meeting in Bridge Street Church on Tuesday evening.

A bountiful supper was served by the combined groups of Mesdames Harron and Seldon. Miss Grace Kenny, 1st vice-president, was in charge of the meeting. Special guests included the Explorer Group under the leadership of Mrs. Marshall.

After routine business, little Miss Joan Davenport, expressed the thanks of the Explorers for the supper and entertainment.

Novelty Shower

A shower of novelties for Miss Millicent Howse included three tablecloths and many gay gifts for the use of her people in Africa. Mrs. Jones reported that a gift of gloves and scarf was bought to be sent to the missionary for prayer, Miss Christene MacDougall, who is doing social service work in Winnipeg. The treasurer's report showed that the allocation has been almost reached and will be before the end of the year. This is entirely a free-will offering and does not include funds from any other any other source.

Miss Gertrude Lazier's committee was in charge of the program.

The first part was a carol service in which the Explorers took part. Candles were lit to represent the various races found in Canada and an appropriate carol was sung for each, while a large candle was lit to represent Christian love for all races.

An instrumental duet an "Indian Carol", was played by Miss Marion Nichol and Mrs. Dorland Houston.

Nativity Scene

The second part of the program was a beautiful Christmas pageant entitled "The Gift of Service". Mrs. Morden read the story and then the curtains were drawn to show a lovely nativity scene with the Holy Family surrounded by shepherds and wise men and an angel watching over them, while the little daughter of the inn-keeper wandered about in wonder.

The second scene showed a meeting many years after between Mary and the now aged inn-keeper. He was still filled with remorse that he had not provided better quarters for his Lord. Mary reassured him but he was still hard to console.

James Bailey Heads Bridge St. Y.P.U.

On Monday evening, the Bridge Street Young People met for their regular meeting under the leadership of Felicity Bennett. The meeting opened with recreation led by Betty McGowan.

An enjoyable sing-song of Christmas carols was followed by the worship service led by Felicity Bennett and Helen McCammon.

The election of officers was conducted by the Reverend Duncan McTavish, and are as follows, president, James Bailey; vice-president, Lenore West; secretary, Florence Foster; treasurer, Beatrice Snider; group leaders, recreation and culture, Helen McCammon, Bernice Bell, Betty Jose, Don Hall, faith and evangelism, Marjorie Telford; citizenship and community service, Doris Amet; stewardship and training, Felicity Bennett; missions and world outreach, Betty McGowan; press reporter, Mabel Russell; pianist, Lenore West; assistant pianist, Margaret Hillis.

During the business period, it was announced the young people would meet with the Presto Club next week.

Betty McGowan, Mabel Russell and Gordon Kerr were named as a committee to look after the Christmas party.

Lingerie Shop Girls no Longer Startled by Men

Toronto, Dec. 7. (CP) —Sales girls in lingerie shops no longer look startled when a man enters the store.

They're used to them now because so many men have taken to buying frilly slips, nightgowns, peignoirs and panties for their wives or sweethearts for Christmas.

The men are often more popular with the sales girls than pernickety women buyers, says Mrs. R. G. Lowe, a buyer for one ladies' wear chain. The men will take almost anything suggested and hardly know the difference she says.

Men are especially keen on housecoats as gifts. "We sell the greatest number of them in the week just before Christmas," said Mrs. Lowe, "because that's when men do their shopping."

Some men don't even go near the store to order. They just phone in, tell us what they think would be nice, the size and how much they want to spend, and then all they have to do is pick it up.

Nylon tricot is one of the favorite materials for slips and nightgowns. White leads the popularity parade in slip colors.

One of the luxury items this year is a peignoir of sheer silk or nylon tricot in white, red or black with drop shoulders and balloon sleeves. To wear under it, the dealer is featuring bridal sets of white satin trimmed with tiny rhinestones.

How to address a Christmas card to a minister, priest

To a Protestant minister without a scholastic degree:
The Reverend John Peter Allen

To a Protestant minister with a scholastic degree:
The Reverend Dr. Thomas Phelps
(or: The Reverend Thomas Phelps, D.D.)

To a minister and his wife:
The Reverend (or The Rev. Dr.) and Mrs. John Davis

To a Roman Catholic priest:
The Reverend Joseph Kenny
(This is the correct form of address also for Greek Orthodox priests, and Anglican priests who are addressed as "Father ——.")

The initials of the order may be added:
The Reverend Joseph Kenny, S.J.

To a Monsignor:
The Right Reverend Monsignor Paul E. Breslin, S.J.
(Or "The Very Reverend Monsignor ——", depending on his rank.)

(Important Note: The word The should always be written before the word Reverend used with the name of a minister or priest. The Reverend. . .The Reverend Doctor. . .The Right Reverend. . . The Very Reverend. Why? Because "Reverend" is not a title . . . not a title like "Mr." or "Dr." It is an adjective, an adjective of courtesy used in addressing those in the spiritual profession. So when you address the envelope never write "Reverend John Smith". . .always The Reverend John Smith.

Hints about choosing marking for men's handkerchiefs

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

For Christmas I would like to give handkerchiefs to my brother, my boy friend, and to the two boy cousins. I want to give them plain white handkerchiefs for dress-up, say to wear with their tuxedos. I plan to have each handkerchief marked with an initial. Which should it be—initial of first name or last name? And please give me any other suggestions about the marking.

Anne

When handkerchiefs are being especially marked, it's best to use the two or three initials of the name. But if only one initial is used, this, for a man's handkerchiefs, should be the initial of his last name. (For a woman it is the initial of her first name.)

Initials are correct for a man's belongings. . . It is not correct to use a monogram. And the lettering should be simple, bold.

Says Rural Gossips Discourage Teacher

Castor, Alta. — (CP) — "Wagging tongues" in country districts are a factor in the shortage of rural teachers, says G. K. Haverstock, superintendent of the Castor School District in central Alberta.

He told a ratepayers' meeting here: "Most young women entering the teaching profession come from good homes. But we have nothing to offer them but one-room shacks where they must live under primitive conditions.

"If these young teachers want to take part in community life, as most normal young women do, and a young man takes them home from a social function, it is start wagging and stories of misbehavior spread through the district."

The result was that many teachers either sought posts in the cities or went into business life, creating the teacher shortage most country points are experiencing.

The solution, Mr. Haverstock suggested, lay in the provision of three-or four-room teacherages where a married teacher could bring up his family under normal conditions.

Food for Thought

Readers' Friday Column

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION:

I had to write to you, I had to have those brownies and hermits. I was afraid to write but when you said to I thought I would. I think an awful lot of you. . .have saved your recipes for years. My husband gets mad at me for as soon as the paper comes I always have to look for you and cut the recipes out. If I don't he and the kiddies get it. I have three little children and they sure like cookies. I'm not a very good cookie maker. . . .I get them dry and tough. Could you help me out? Your letters in the paper are swell . . .you must have a nice family . . . Have you a recipe for Hamburg and Macaroni Casserole with tomatoes. . .have you any cabbage casserole dish with tomatoes. . . You sure are doing good work to help us homemakers, Mary Moore, and I thank you. Mrs. Stanley D.

ANSWER:

In the specialized work of writing a food column and answering readers' letter about food, it is letters like yours, Mrs. Stanley D. that make me reiterate my resolves to always be prompt and accurate with my answers. It would be easy to slip into the casual attitude of taking other folks' word for it that a recipe is good. But we do try everything and it pays big dividends in readers' confidence in me. Thank you for such a kind expression of appreciation.

BROWNIES

One-third cup margarine or shortening, 2 squares unsweetened chocolate (or 6 tablespoons good quality cocoa plus 1 teaspoon butter), 1 cup white or brown sugar, 2 beaten eggs, 1-2 cup unsifted flour, 1-2 teaspoons each baking powder and salt, 1 cup chopped walnuts, 1 teaspoon vanilla. Melt chocolate and shortening together until just blended—do not overheat. (If cocoa is used warm it and the teaspoon butter and shortening together until blended.)

Beat eggs and stir sugar into them, then combine them with the chocolate mixture. Sift flour and sift it again with the baking powder and salt. Sift these over the first mixture and blend in. Also chopped nuts and vanilla. Grease an 8 x 10 x 1 1-2 inches pan, and spread mixture on it. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 30 minutes having pan in exact centre of oven. When slightly cool mark into squares or triangles or diamonds.

HERMITS

One cup shortening (if half butter or margarine and half shortening are used cookies are improved), 1 cup each white and brown sugar, 2 eggs, 2 2-3 cups sifted flour, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1-2 teaspoon each soda, cloves and nutmeg, 1 to 1 1-2 teaspoons cinnamon, 1-3 cup milk, 2-3 cup each raisins and chopped nuts. Cream shortening and sugar together until fluffy then beat in eggs. Sift the sifted flour with the salt, soda, baking powder and spices. Add sifted dry ingredients alternately to the first mixture with the milk, beating well between additions. Stir in nuts and raisins. Drop by teaspoons onto greased cookie sheet 2 inches apart. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 10 to 15 minutes.

MACARONI AND HAMBURGER CASSEROLE

One-quarter lb. macaroni, 1 1-2 quarts boiling salted water, 1 finely chopped onion, 1 chopped green pepper is optional, 1 to 1 1-2 cups canned tomatoes, 1-2 to 1 cup grated old cheese, 4 tablespoons bacon fat, 1-2 to 3-4 lb. hamburger, 2 tablespoons flour. Cook macaroni in salted water until tender and drain. Melt butter or bacon fat and sauté the onion, green pepper (if used) and hamburg in it until slightly browned, then add this to the drained macaroni and grated cheese. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Turn into buttered casserole and cover with buttered crumbs and bake at 375 deg. Fahr. until bubbling and golden.

CABBAGE CASSEROLES

Shred 1 1-4 lbs. cabbage as finely as possible with long sharp knife. Place one-third of it in buttered casserole. Cover this with 1 or 2 slices tomatoes, a sprinkling of grated cheese (using 1-2 to 2-3 cup cheese in all) and some salt and pepper. Repeat 3 times. Cover with 2 cups medium thick white sauce (4 tablespoons each butter and flour and 2 cups milk), sprinkle with a few crumbs and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 40 minutes. (If desired the thick part from canned tomatoes may be used instead of fresh tomatoes.)

Fashion Flashes

THE BIG BLOUSE fashion for Spring will be stripes, especially in crisp taffeta and silk broadcloth. Red and gray striped silk taffeta makes a pretty "dandy" blouse with high, curved neckline and full sleeves that end in pointed cuffs. Pretty, too, in charcoal gray and gold.

ON ALL but very cold days, many women plan to wear a suit and coat of matching woollen. Soft, fine tweed in a black and white bold window- pane plaid, makes a handsome suit and full-length topcoat, the latter interlined. The topcoat has bell sleeves that are cut a little short to show a portion of the full-length suit sleeves.

INCREASING in popularity is the ankle-length bridal gown, especially in lace. A charming model is of rich lace sprinkled with tiny rhinestones and pearls. The lace is pale ivory in color and a back-tied velvet sash is a slightly deeper shade. At the shoulders is a deep bertha cape which is detachable.

A SEA OF white is on show at the theatre these nights, as women go in more and more for the little head-hugging white theatre cap. Satin, panne velvet, and tulle, are all well represented, and many of these little beauties are richly trimmed with elaborate designs in rhinestones, pearls and gold bouillon thread.

BECOMING to almost every woman is the full, short-skirted evening dress of pastel silk satin. A favorite formula includes a portrait neckline, the fabric intricately manipulated and draped, the skirt slim at the hips then flaring to the hem. Charming in pale pink or pale orchid satin, and striking in copper brown or rich red.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Interfering parents make her life miserable

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a divorcee of 27, and live with my parents. I work and earn a fairly good salary.

About a year and a half ago, I met a man five years older than myself, and as soon as personal and financial matters permit us to do so, we intend to get married. He has a wonderful job and also has all the good qualities any girl would want in a man.

My problem is my parents. They raise a terrific fuss whenever I go out because they expect me to live the way they do, and also stay home nights. They do and say things to me that make me very miserable and unhappy, but I keep it all inside me as I do not want to let myself go in the presence of the man I love.

Their interference and our conflict is nearly driving me crazy. I feel that I am old enough to know my own heart and mind, but my parents will not concede that, and don't understand that I am different from them in so many ways.

Should I leave home and live my own life, or stay with my parents and accept all this interference from them?

Jane

Dear Jane:

Obviously, you have two alternatives. You can either leave home at once and start living your own life now, or if you don't want to break with your parents, you can accept the situation until the way has been cleared for your marriage, which would automatically take you out of your parents' house anyhow. You don't say that they are raising any objections to your marriage, so I assume you would remain on perfectly friendly terms with them when you left with a husband.

I should think if you have that handy solution in view ,your best plan would be for you and this man to hurry up and straighten out whatever these "personal and financial matters" are which must be disposed of before you can marry, and in the meantime put up as best you can with the home difficulties. I can't see any reason, however, why you should take dictation from your parents in any case about how you spend your evenings. As long as you stay with them, try not to quarrel with them, but insist, as pleasantly as possible, on a reasonable measure of independence.

Shall she help out her girl friend, when boy friend says no?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

One of my girl friends goes out with a boy who recently has been bringing a friend along when he comes to see her. She doesn't mind, but she wants to have another girl go along with them to make the group even, and she has asked me if I would make the fourth.

The trouble is that I go steary, and when I spoke to my boyfriend about this, he said he would prefer that I didn't go. I want to be true to him, but I would also like to help my girl friend out, as she has helped me out of trouble more than once.

Ronnie

Dear Ronnie:

It seems to me your boy-friend might be a good enough sport to let you help your girl friend out once in a while, but I suppose he is afraid of competition from the other boy.

Things being as they are, perhaps you had better just explain matters to your girl friend, and ask her to find some other girl to make up the quartet. She'll probably understand your position and be willing to do this.

New Process For Making Steel Is Announced

Toronto, Dec. 6 — (CP) — The Ontario Research Foundation yesterday announced a new process for making steel, from which can be produced both ordinary steel and light-weight steels.

P. E. Cavanaugh, assistant director of the foundation's engineering and metallurgical branch, said at a press conference that the new methods would not be competitive with 99 per cent of the present steel industry, but rather would supplement present processes.

He said the methods would be particularly valuable to areas having iron ore, but no steel plants—such as, in Quebec, the head of the Great Lakes in Ontario and Alberta and British Columbia.

In effect, iron ore is ground and purified, placed in containers, and put through a heating process at 2000 degrees. From ground iron ore to finished products, such as rods, tubes and sheets, is accomplished in one process instead of going through the usual stages of ore, iron, steel, forging, bars.

Mr. Cavanaugh said the process is more expensive than ordinary methods, and he described it as a "specialty process for small-scale prouction." For instance, industries needing small quantities of steel, especially those removed from steel centres, could take care of their own production for a small investment.

The foundation's announcement said that its object is "to develop the process on a sound basis and get it into use as soon as possible in industry.

"Discussions with companies interested in obtaining licences to operate this process are under way..

"The work has been conducted under aegis of one of the advisory commitees of the Ontario Research Council and has been supported by funds from the Ontario government."

Toboggan slides for pigeons

Providing toboggan slides for pigeons is no part of our programme. However, the aluminum roofs which now dot the countryside do illustrate the rapidly growing demand for aluminum. A sing song under the leadership of Mrs. Allen Franks, was much enjoyed.

Mr. Rex Rollins, president of the association was in charge of the business meeting. He welcomed the guests and spoke briefly on the business. He said, that "with continued support from non members and further business from the members who were not giving it their full support, the manager would make the 'Co-op' one of the best."

Mr. McMurchy U.C.O., district field man, reported for the auditor. The year's business showed a net profit of $1,370 after charging depreciation of $3,946 and municipal taxes of $513.

Guest Speaker

The guest speaker, Mr. Kingsley Brown, editor of the rural Co-operator, was introduced by Mr. McMurchy. Mr. Brown spoke of the co-operative movement as a science and stressed the importance that volume of business has played in the strength and efficiency of the co-operative movement. He, said that men and women, the world over, are learning more and more the idea that they can do things for themselves by co-operating with each other.

Mr. Murry, local bank manager, commented on the financial statement, saying that although it was much improved over last year, he thought that the demand bank loan should be paid off either by a mortage on the mill or a member loan canvass.

Member Loan Canvass

Mr. Jim Nickle spoke on the same topic and said that he did not think that the members would approve of a mortgage on the mill. After further discussion by the members present, the directors were given authority to arrange a member loan canvass.

Retiring directors, Jim Nickle, Rex Rollins and Dennis Chapman were re-nominated. Further nominations were John Caskey, Arthur Parks and Cecil Robinson. Jim Nickle, Rex Rollins and John Caskey were elected by acclamation, as the other nominations were withdrawn.

Films "Co-operation in Manitoba", and "Barbara Ann Scott" shown by Bernard Hollinger completed the evening.

'Peterson's Paradise' in Korea Is Place Where Canadians Relax After Sterner Duties

By BILL BOSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the Canadians in Korea, Dec. 7 (CP) — The place is called "Peterson's Paradise."

It's close enough to the front to be shelled, yet it's far enough away to let a guy "get away from it all" for about eight hours.

Every day two platoons of the 2nd Battalion Royal Canadian Regiment leave their mud holes and go down to the rest centre operated by Maj. Jack Peterson of St. Thomas, Ont., second in command of the unit.

It's the only one of its kind in the theatre. The tired, shaggy soldiers who reach the "paradise" in the morning, leave it late in the afternoon, fresh, clean, with contented stomachs. Every man has such a "day off" once every week or 10 days.

Even on his days off an RCR is as regimental as a guardsman. As the trucks bearing them enter the camp the bugle band under Cpl. B. G. Wood of Ingersoll, Ont., plays the riflemen into the area.

"Welcome to Peterson's Paradise," says the sign.

"Are you a Royal Canadian?" asks the second.

"Are your boots polished?" a third.

"Is your brass shining?" a fourth.

Then, as the trucks pull to a halt: "There is no excuse. This way to barber shop and shoe shine."

Hot Breakfast

But first stop is the shrapnel-cut mess tent, where Pte. Ross (Steamboat) Bonham of Toronto has steaming porridge and three poached eggs on buttered toast ready for everyone.

Breakfast is followed by bath parade—hot showers and clean underwear and socks—and then there is a pay parade.

The canteen, run by Lieut. David Orgill-Massey of Toronto, is famous in the Commonwealth Division. It deals in anything from shoe polish to watches, cameras and radios.

Steamboat Bonham serves up terrific lunches of soup or fruit juice, roast dressed turkey, mashed potatoes, pan gravy, pie, coffee. There's always fruit on the tables. Supper is always steak and onions—grilled to order — apple pie and coffee.

There's a motion picture in the afternoon, or the men can catch up with their correspondence or read.

"We find the fellows like to sit around and rest," says Peterson. "If they want to take it easy, that's up to them. But if they want to play, the stuff is there—boxing gloves, bingo and what-not."

The centre is a masterpiece of improvisation.

Thatch Structure

The theatre is a thatch structure made of rice straw fastened to a framework of poles and wires. It seats 168 and can accommodate twice as many. It has a stage, with thatched-off dressing rooms on either side. Seats are cartridge cases sprayed blue.

Peterson invested $150 from the canteen fund in chinaware. "They eat out of mess tins all the time up there. And I know one of the things a man enjoys once in a while is to sit at a table and have waiters look after him. So we bought bowls for soup and porridge, plates, cups and glasses. And the tables are served by four Korean boys."

Slain Gunman Was Dieppe Vet

Thomas Danek, 35, formerly of Windsor, Ont., has been identified as the slain gunman in the Toronto hold-up in which Police Constable Richard Deadman was shot six times. Danek, who served with the Essex Scottish and was captured at Dieppe, was identified by the regimental tatoo mark on his hand. He had come from Winnipeg to Windsor as a child. — Central Press Canadian.

At 4.30 in the afternoon the trucks line up and as the band plays the regimental march the men drive back to the front.

Pte. Rolland Raymond of Hawkesbury, Ont., is "chief engineer" of the theatre, where Pte. Bob Roman of Valleyfield, Que., is a projectionist.

Chief clerk in the canteen is Cpl. William Brewer of Halifax and Gold River, N.S., while Pte. James R. Miller of Montreal and Niagara Falls, Ont., drives the truck that keeps its shelves stocked.

Britain Exports Elephants Back to Jungle

Southampton, England, Dec. 6 (Reuters)— Britain, a coal-mining country which now imports coal, today began exporting elephants to the jungle.

This latest topsy-turvy trade development has come about through a world shortage of the beasts.

A timber company in Borneo—where they used to roam in herds—has had to pay about $40,000 for five circus elephants from Britain to haul fallen trees.

The five originally came from Ceylon.

The circus-trained animals walked sedately past the slings erected to lift them on board the passenger liner Soudan. At a snap of their trainer's fingers they lumbered slowly up the creaking gangway unaided.

Gilson Found Innocent By County Court

St. Catharines, Ont., Dec. 7 — (CP) — Earl Gilson of Niagara Falls, charged with being the third man of a trio which attempted to hold up a bank at St. David's Sept. 12, yesterday was found innocent by a county court jury which deliberated for 90 minutes.

Defence Counsel Judy LaMarsh, whose automobile was stolen and used by the bandits, said police looking for a third robber were pleased to use Gilson as a scapegoat.

"When they found him, they said: 'We'll make this man fit into the crime'" she said.

Gilson was picked up by a hydro security officer about 5½ hours after the bandits had abandoned their escape car. Two of the bandit trio were captured and were sentenced before Gilson's trial began.

Miss LaMarsh said that all evidence against Gilson was circumstantial. The Crown had introduced no evidence of descriptions of the three robbers although many people in St. David's village undoubtedly saw them.

Arthur Holmes Of Demorestville Netted in Orillia

Orillia, Dec. 7. —A series of two-year-old crimes came back into the limelight here today when Arthur Holmes, 23, of Demorestville, north of Belleville, was charged by provincial police with breaking and entering of a number of summer residences, Moon's Point, near here, in March, 1949.

Holmes was picked up after an investigation by Const. John Andrews into the theft of a battery last night from a tractor at the Ontario Hospital School. The battery was later sold at a local scrap yard.

Brought to the OPP office for questioning he was recognized as one of two men wanted for the Moon's Point break-ins. The other man, Clarence Hotter, had previously been sentenced to three months.

Most of the artists were untrained but some of the 100 pictures were considered good enough for a regular art show. Some were emotional expressions of life behind bars and stone walls.

BOXES STOLEN

Toronto, Dec. 7 — (CP) — The Ontario Highways Department put out two boxes to fill with sand and salt for clearing winter roads near suburban Thornhill. Within half an hour they were stolen from the roadside. Workmen vowed to fill up the next ones before they left them.

MAY KILL BIRDS

Toronto, Dec. 7 — (CP) — A chain store official said Thursday that farmers, worried by a drop in egg prices, may soon start killing their birds.

In some areas the price of grade "A" large eggs has dropped as much as 19 cents to 56 cents a dozen.

The spokesman said that if prices drop below cost of feeding hens, farmers will slaughter the birds, thus reducing the egg supply and boosting egg prices.

'Forgotten People' of Germany Threaten to March to Upper Rhine to Escape Poverty

Hamburg, Germany, Dec. 7— Germany's "forgotten people" are threatening to march from the Baltic to the upper Rhine to escape poverty and misery.

They are east Germans—driven six years ago from territories annexed by Russia and Poland.

Numbering more than 1,000,000 they fled into the "poorhouse" state of Schleswig-Holstein, under British occupation.

Since 1945, they have jammed the villages of this passive agricultural region, too many for the few extra jobs available and too poor to try a new start elsewhere without government help.

More than 100,000 still live in crude wooden huts. Others are squeezed into the homes of native Schleswig-Holsteiners, whose patience with the problem is wearing thin.

In some villages, more than 90 per cent of the refugees are still on the public dole.

Last year the federal government planned to resettle 300,000 in the 700-mile distant French Zone, along the Rhine and its tributaries. The French zone received almost no refugees in the early post-war years, while the British and American zones took in more than 8,000,000.

Up to now, however, only 11,500 east Germans actually have been moved out of Schleswig-Holstein.

Bitterly disappointed, two refugees in the little town of Suederbrarup, half of whose 4,200 population are homeless migrants from the east, have begun organizing "Trek, Inc." already several thousand refugees have joined.

The purpose of "Trek" is to lead a mass exodus to the less crowded French zone states.

In a letter to the Schleswig-Holstein government, signed members of "Trek" announced: "we are willing to go to southern Germany on our own responsibility. . . here we are condemned to permanent unemployment. . ."

Government officials warned that "thousands of refugees must not be shifted from one primitive shelter to another if there is no guarantee of jobs."

Leaders of "Trek" say their minds are made up, and if nobody finds a better solution, they will set out next spring. They predict thousands will follow.

Cheese Industry in Transitional Stage Says Market Director

Decline of milk production resulting in the 1951 cheese manufacture being the smallest in 63 years, is not an indication that the cheese industry is giving way to other milk products market but rather it is in a transitional stage, W. C. Cameron, associate director of marketing, dairy products Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa said in an address here yesterday.

Mr. Cameron speaking at the closing session of Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association at the Hotel Quinte, said the transitional stage was that of being less dependent on export markets and more dependent upon home markets due to both population increase in Canada and a decrease in cheese production due to competition from other milk products.

"It has been pointed out," he said, "that the total production of milk has not been keeping pace with the increase in domestic consumption of dairy products. This has resulted in a diversion of milk from export products manufacture to that of those for home consumption."

This does not necessarily mean that the cheese industry has suffered because of this diversion, or that the future holds little promise for those engaged in cheese manufacture.

One-Third Exported

"Gradual decrease in production of cheese for export has resulted in the fact that only one-third of all cheese produced in Canada this year will be sent overseas," Mr. Cameron said.

Pointing out that the domestic market today has greater influence than theretofore in determining the average price of cheese, and since it usually is the best market, the speaker felt it would be reasonable to expect producer returns would be higher today than when the bulk of cheese was exported.

Between 9 and 10 per cent of the total milk production in the USA is used in the manufacture of cheese. Cheese consumption is 7.5 pounds per capita. Similar trends developed in Canada would make it possible for the cheese industry to expand its domestic market to the extent where production would utilize a larger proportion of the milk supply than it does today.

Should Have Direction

Mr. Cameron felt the increase in population in Canada would result in increased domestic consumption. He advocated the same care in meeting present and future domestic requirements as that used by those who built an enviable Canadian reputation on world markets. "The domestic market will not grow of itself except in a sluggish manner," he said. "It should have sound direction."

Declaring that an exceptionally fine cheddar cheese has been developed in Canada, Mr. Cameron urged that nothing should be allowed to spoil its reputation. The technique that produced it should be guarded zealously. If other types of cheese are desirable and have a place in the Canadian market, they should be kept as distinctive types or branded to distinguish them clearly from cheddars.

The reputation of Canadian cheese must not be lost through changing conditions, or in a misconception of meeting domestic market requirements, the speaker declared.

Should Expand Market

He felt the Canadian domestic market can and should be expanded in such manner that at anytime the industry would be in a position to take advantage of export outlets by having available the type and quality of cheddar for which Canada has become famous.

The future of the cheese industry can be made more promising if definite action is taken now to expand the domestic market in an orderly manner, Mr. Cameron said.

He suggested that some of the matters needing special care and attention are; maintenance of techniques that will produce premium quality cheddars and of present grade standards for cheddar cheese, and the regrading and consumer grading of the cheese.

Better Understanding Urged

J. D. MacLauchlan, president of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, urged a better understanding between cheese makers and patrons as a step towards cleaner milk delivered at the factory.

He stressed the point that if the farmer understood the entire process of cheesemaking from milking to package, he would be more sympathetic towards makers' problems when they arise.

"Makers," he said, "should go out of their way and take the time to explain the methods of manufacture to farmer patrons. They should make him feel that their job is something more than weighing milk when it arrives at the factory.

Mr. MacLachlan said it is the responsibility of the maker to win the confidence of his patrons and make them understand their responsibilities.

Takes Distinct Pride

The farmer, he went on, takes a distinct pride in his cattle, crops, buildings and equipment. He would take a similar pride in the cleanliness of his milk if a more understandable relation was attained between him and the cheese maker.

The responsibility of this, Mr. MacLachlan said, rests entirely on the maker.

E. G. Hood, chief, Dairy Research Science Service, Experimental Farms, Ottawa, gave a progress report of the study of the cause of fruity flavor in cheese. He quoted figures from experiments made with vats of cheese saying that the practical solution to overcoming this flavor was improvement in the quality of milk and careful sanitations of all equipment.

Brief Addresses Given

Brief addresses of greeting were given by Sam McCartney, president of the Western Ontario Cheese Makers Association; Thomas Freeman, Montreal Provisions Trade Association, Thomas Hicks, retired chief grader and others.

Douglas Rowe presented the report of the nominating committee. The entire slate of 1951 officers was returned to office and included: T. Hatherton, Milford, president; Bert Jones, Milford, vice president; Jim Irwin, secretary. directors, Murray Heath, Campbellford; Earl McNeill, Moscow. Ont.; Thomas Heath, Wilton, Ont., Delbert Rowe, Holloway, Ont. and Roy Huffman, Plainfield, Ont.

Kenneth Jeffrey of Tweed Wins Woodlot Competition Staged by Hastings County

Prize winners in the Hastings County Woodlot Competition held during the past summer received their awards from county council on Thursday.

Winner of the competition was Kenneth Jeffrey, R. R. 2, Tweed, who received a certificate and a cash award of $50. Second prize winner, Allan McComb, R.R. 5, Belleville, received a cheque for $30, while the third place winner was Robert Wheeler of Tweed district.

Warden Coulter presented the two top winners with their cheques, while Reeve Carman Kleinsteuber of Elzevir township presented Mr. Jeffrey with his certificate. Third place winner Mr. Wheeler was not present.

Col. Roscoe Vanderwater, Foxboro, one of the contest judges, expressed his appreciation to county officials for their interest in conservation and for sponsoring the contest. Referring to the woodlots judged, Col. Vanderwater emphasized the importance of keeping these fenced and out of reach of cattle which destroyed the undergrowth necessary to produce young trees.

The competition was sponsored by the county through its agricultural and reforestation committee of which Reeve Kleinsteuber is chairman. A total of 27 woodlots were entered with 26 being judged. Points were awarded on the basis of best methods of management to suit the particular woodlot, and on the marketing of the products to the best advantage.

The judges found that out of the 26 woodlots judged the first ten required careful consideration to determine their standing. The majority of owners showed good knowledge in woodlot management while lower marks in some cases were due to lack of help on the farm.

A number of woodlots judged were still being grazed and judges pointed out this seriously affected the future of the woodlot. Lack of growth in these woodlots was most noticeable. Judges recommended if the competition was continued another year pastured lots would not be eligible to enter.

Zone Forester W. E. Edwards said he was highly pleased over the success of the first forestry competition but was disappointed there were no more woodlots entered from the northern parts of the country.

LATE PLOWING

Shelburne, Ont., Dec. 7 — (CP) — Unseasonably warm weather for December enabled William Prince, 68, to clean up some unfinished plowing on his farm in Odjala township. For what was said to be the latest plowing in Ontario in 50 years, the land was easy to work with no sign of frost.

History's Greatest Farewell Address

By ROY L. SMITH

In the vast tidal wave of applause which followed General MacArthur's dramatic address to the Congress of the United States, upon his return from the Orient, there were those who declared in their enthusiasm that it was "the greatest address ever delivered by an American."

Without detracting in any way from a magnificent utterance, it is only fair to say that the greatest farewell address recorded in history is that of Moses to the Hebrew people, just before the old prophet ascended Mt. Nebo to die, in sight of the Promised Land.

Majestic in Disappointment

The venerable old patriarch had come to the end of a life that had witnessed almost every emotion within the capacity of the human soul. He had lived through magnificent days, and he had suffered through days of exquisite torture. He had given his life for his people, endured their rebellion and villification, and had brought them within striking distance of their goal. Just when he was getting his first glimpse of the realization of the hope which had led him on for almost half a century, he came to the realization that he would never go across with them.

In that hour when his personal pride lay crushed and defeated, he rose to the greatest heights of eloquence, and voiced some of the noblest sentiments that have ever been recorded in human speech. In his disappointment he was even more magnificent than he had been in his hours of victory.

You Have Your Chance

The great theme which runs all the way through Moses' address like the red cord that runs through all the cordage in His Majesty's navy is, "You have your chance."

At the cost of almost incredible suffering the heroic generation that fled from Egypt had provided their sons and daughters with their chance. The Promised Land lay before them. What they would make out of their opportunity depended upon them. They had the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob at their back. They had the fruitful plains and good habitations ahead of them. What they would make of the next generation rested entirely with them.

Not For Sheep-hearted

The gist of the old lion's address is "The Promised Land is not for the sheep-hearted. It will be given to those who are capable of great courage, great decisions, great devotion, and great obedience."

> The Uniform Sunday School lesson for December 9: "Moses' Charge to The People," Deuteronomy 29-34.

It is easy to understand the apprehension of the people. "Who will lead us now?" they asked among themselves, as if the God who had brought them thus far on their journey had not thought of that.

The refugee nobleman who had seen a horde of slaves escape from Egypt and become a vast force of hard-fighting men, tempered by the desert, might not have known all the steps that lay between the people and their final destination, but he knew the direction they must take.

He Saw the Ultimate

The difference between Moses and many of the people was a very simple one: they saw the immediate difficulties, he saw the ultimate triumph.

It often happens that we become so obsessed with today and tomorrow, and all their difficulties, that we forget to look ahead to next year and all its achievements. Moses was pleading for the long look—a vision he was sure was justified because he believed in God.

These are dreadful days for those who have nothing more in which to place their hopes than atom bombs and secret weapons.

The godly man too has a secret. It is his faith in the ultimate victory of God and the righteous.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

SHOULD BE GOOD!

Those pesky Peterborough Eagles, drat their high-angled tailfeathers, arrived in town this evening wearing smiles of anticipation that augur not well for our somewhat bedraggled Hawks. The birds from Perdues Cliffs went on a raging score-fest in that third period the other night when the Hawks faded after putting up a stern battle for two sessions, and even leading the Eagles by a 3-2 count going into the second period.

Tonight the top slot of the group standing will be at stake since the Kingston Essanays took the measure of the Petes Wednesday night while their intra-city "pals" were pin-feathering our Hawks. That puts the Eagles, Hawks and Essanays up there on top with six points each apiece with the Petes looking up from their lone spot below in second, or fourth, take your choice.

The Hawks have lost their last two starts and will be in no mood for any finagling tonight. They're victory-hungry and want that top-slot back again. It doesn't look too good for the Eagles, and in any event it should be a husky hassle.

LOOKS 'EM OVER

Bob Wilson, chief eastern scout for the Chicago Black Hawks saw the junior game between the Hawklets and the Lindsay Kinsmen Wednesday night. He spoke over the air during the Hot Stove League session commenting favorably on the performance of the young Hawks against the strong Scugog outfit.

Bob said he had seen several junior "B" teams perform during his peregrinations througout the province and the Hawklets compared favorably with any of them. He mentioned the St. Michael's Buzzers, whom, he said would come here for an exhibition tilt if invited, and hinted that Red Doran's crew would take their measure if they played the brand of hockey they handed out against Lindsay.

He said that Belleville was an important link in the Chicago Black Hawks chain of events for the future and President Bill Tobin had high regard for the officials and the setup here.

He also commented favorably on the performance of the Lindsay team despite the fact it was beaten by a one-sided score. He liked particularly the first line of Deeth, Copeland and Powell also the work of Shervington on the Lindsay defence. And he predicted as did this column that it is doubtful if the powerful Lindsay crew will be beaten by such a score again this season.

At the same time there was no denying the Hawks. They battled tooth and nail for those elusive goals and they deserved every one of the even dozen that lighted up the scoreboard.

The kids go to Lindsay tonight, and they'll find the Scuggers a lot harder to beat in their own backyard than down here along the banks of the Moira. But the Hawks have produced the kind of hockey of which they are capable. They've discovered they can win games and score goals by the simple expedient of staying on the ice, instead of haunting the penalty box, and no doubt they'll pay attention to orders in the future.

COURT CAPERS DE LUXE

Chris Lockyer, Kay Smith and their merry band of badminton buddies are busy these nights preparing for the Central Ontario championship tournament scheduled for the Belleville Armouries in mid-January. It will be one of the better badminton tournaments of the year attracting players from a large area. And we're not giving away any secrets, we hope, by mentioning the fact that some of Ontario's badminton greats, champions all and possibly a Dominion champion or two will be along to take part in the court activities. Meantime Chris and Kay are busy gathering up the loose ends and getting things in topflight order. After all the Garrison Badminton Club here has an enviable reputation for hospitality and it won't suffer in the hands of Chris, Kay and their assistants. More about the tournament later.

ONE AND ONE

Bill Spafford's Glen Roy basketeers won their first game of the season Wednesday night when they turned back the Picton Athletics. And in the meantime the Peterborough Marines were taking the measure of the Trenton RCAF quintet for their second straight win. Don Dolan, our basketball expert tells us the Marines were quite at home in their smallish court in Peterborough where they're dead-shot dicks at free throws. Donny picks the Glens to scuttle the Marines when they visit the larger Belleville court.

'Greatest Right Winger in Hockey' Succeeds Colville as Ranger Coach

New York, Dec. 7—(AP)—"I'm bringing in the greatest right winger that ever played hockey—bar none."

That's what Frank Boucher, manager of the New York Rangers, said today about his new coach Bill Cook.

Cook is expected to join the Rangers Sunday. He succeeds popular Neil Colville who resigned yesterday.

Boucher admitted that Cook was stepping into a rough job in taking over the Ranger helm. "This is a tough job for Cook but Bill is used to tough spots," Boucher commented.

"Great Fighter"

"He was part of a large family, not the oldest, but he was like a father to his brothers and sisters after his dad died at an early age.

"He's absolutely fearless and a great fighter who will fight anybody for his team."

Cook, his brother Bun, and Boucher formed one of the National Hockey League's greatest lines back in the 1920's. The trio scored over 500 goals during their careers with Bill Cook the trigger man with 228.

Colville, also a former Ranger star, said he had planned to resign three weeks ago. He definitely made up his mind to step out after the Rangers bowed to Boston, 3-2, Wednesday night.

Cook has been coaching the Rangers Saskatoon farm team of the Pacific Coast League. The Rangers haven't decided who will replace Cook at Saskatoon.

MARGARINE MAKER

Margarine was first made by Mege Mouries in 1870 when he won a prize offered by Napoleon III for the manufacture of a butter substitute.

Bill Cook, New Ranger Coach, Takes Over Floundering Team After Neil Colville Resigns

(By The Canadian Press)

Neil Colville, the youngest coach in the National Hockey League at the time of his appointment in June last year, has resigned as mentor of the floundering New York Rangers.

His replacement by Bill Cook, one of the all-time great right wingers, was announced by general manager Frank Boucher last night. Cook, now coaching Saskatoon, a Rangers' farm club, will leave that city by plane Saturday morning and take over when the last-place New Yorkers encounter Toronto Maple Leafs Sunday.

Cook, 53-year-old former Ranger captain and a native of Brantford, Ont., scored 228 goals for New York between 1926 and 1936. He'll travel to Edmonton today to pilot his Saskatoon Quakers against Flyers in a Pacific Coast Hockey League game.

Long Association

Colville's resignation ended a 14-year association with the Rangers. The 37-year-old Edmonton native played both on defence and forward lines from the time he left Philadelphia of the old Canadian-American League in 1936 until he succeeded Lynn Patrick in 1948 as coach of the American League New Haven Ramblers.

Colville told a press conference yesterday he was quitting because of poor health.

Whether the hapless New Yorkers can do better under Cook is problematical. His Saskatoon club currently is in third place in the P. C. H. L. Colville said he is convinced the Rangers are a better team than the records indicate but apparently he failed to bring out the best of their abilities. He would rather see someone coaching the club who could "bring it out better than I can."

Rangers have won only six of their 23 games to date. They may have some success Sunday against the crippled Leafs. Right winger Howie Meeker is out for a month with a bad knee; Bill Juzda, defence bulwark, is entering hospital for removal of a cyst from his foot and both left winger Danny Lewicki and centre Rudy Migay are on the ailing list.

Chicago Black Hawks get a crack at Toronto first, on Saturday, while league-leading Detroit takes on Montreal Canadiens. In other Sunday games, Montreal travels to Detroit while Boston Bruins encounter Chicago.

Saddler, DeMarco Winner Gets Shot At Light Crown

By MURRAY ROSE

New York, Dec. 7 (AP) — A possible lightweight title shot will be the prize tonight when featherweight champion Sandy Saddler and lightweight contender Paddy DeMarco mix it up in their rubber match at Madison Square Garden.

Slashing Sandy, upset by De Marco on Aug. 27, was rated an 8-to-5 favorite to capture the non-title 10 rounder. The 10 p.m. (EST) bout will be telecast and broadcast.

A crowd of 13,071 paid $40,942 at the Garden two years ago when the New York Negro stopped Paddy in nine rounds in their first clash. Over a half million TV sets have been sold in the Metropolitan area since and the gladiators will be happy if they draw 8,000 customers and $25,000.

This marks Saddler's first outing since he was suspended indefinitely for his foul packed brawl with Willie Pep on Sept. 26. Pep had his license revoked. Paddy is no Lord Fauntleroy, either, and his two scraps with Saddler have been almost as rough as the Pep-Saddler series.

Set $10,000 Maximum For Junior Franchise

Galt, Dec. 7—(CP)—A maximum purchase price of $10,000 has been placed on Ontario Hockey Association Junior A franchises in an agreement tentatively approved by representatives of eight junior teams.

Except for Barrie and Windsor, all 10 clubs were represented at a meeting yesterday which referred the agreement, drawn up at another meeting in Toronto last week, to George Dudley, Canadian Amateur Hockey Association registrar - general for rephrasing in legal terms.

It will likely be reconsidered at the next junior A council meeting and when will go to the association executive for ratification.

The $10,000 value is contingent on the purchaser operating affiliated interests such as farm teams. But a promoter also needs the approval of a majority of the other franchise-holders before he can put a team in the series.

Glen Roys Trim Picton 51-38 In Rugged Game

By DON DOLAN

In a rough and rugged basketball game played at the Picton Collegiate on Wednesday night, the Belleville Glen Roy A. C. team gained its initial victory of the season by downing Picton 51-38

The game, played on a very small floor, was a poor one from a basketball standpoint. Because of the smallness of the gymnasium, players did not have enough room to manipulate freely, thus causing a great deal of bodily contact and making the game quite scrambly.

Early in the fourth quarter a minor rhubarb broke out and had it not been for the quick and effective rulings by Saylor Watson who ejected three Belleville players and one Picton player from the playing court, the contest might have developed into a free-for-all.

Rugged Play

Both teams tried to stick to basketball for the first three periods but play was rugged. The locals managed to outscore their opponents from Picton throughout most of the game although their lead was never more than five points during the first three quarters.

Only a superb scoring display by Roland Anderson, who netted thirteen points in the first half, kept Picton in the game and prevented it from being a walk-away.

Then came the fireworks. A pair of Bobs, Ketcheson of Belleville and Cornelius of Picton were the first ones to get the ax; the offence was pushing with a few gentle swats thrown in for good measure. Halfway through the final stanza, John Batchelor was caught by referee Watson as he ploughed into a Picton player and was promptly ejected from the game.

The other player to be the official recipient of official action was Ed McClay who got the thumb for throwing the ball to the floor. The fact that a Picton player was attached had little to do with the referee's action.

Strange as it may see, the best basketball of the night was produced in the last stanza. On three occasions Picton pulled to within striking distance of the winners but each time the Glen Roys snapped in quick scores to gradually pull away.

Doug Soule, aided greatly by the play making of Bill Muirhead, scored three quick baskets to salt the game away in the dying moments. Big Dave Lockyer netted a pair of insurance markers.

Every member of the Glen Roy team figured in the scoring. Doug Soule led the snipers with ten points while Hayman, Batchelor, Ketcheson and Lockyer picked up six each. Summers and McClay earned five points, Watson figured for three and Garrow and Muirhead got a pair.

Roland Anderson of Picton topped all hoopsters with a 16 point contribution. Cole and Chalmers hooped nine and eight respectively in a losing cause.

The locals next start will be on December 11th when they meet the Trenton Flyers on the South Station courts.

Lineup:

Glen Roy A.C.: Hayman 6, Muirhead 2, Summers 5, Soule 10, McClay 5, Batchelor 6, Ketcheson 6, Garrow 2, Watson 3, Lockyer 6.

Picton: Chalmers 8, Hepburn 2, Cole 9, Colliver 2, Marlow, Young, Anderson 16, Lighthall, Cornelius 1.

Officials: Saylor Watson and Bob Colliver.

Minors Wipe Out 'Recall' Rule, Approval by Majors Doubtful

By JOE REICHLER

Columbus, O., Dec. 7 (AP)—Although the minor leagues voted over-whelmingly to wipe out baseball's 24-hour recall rule, the statute will remain in the books.

The rule, which President Frank Shaughnessy of the International League, described as "even a bigger hreat to the structure of the minors than nationwide broadcasting and televising of major league games," has long been a sore point with the little fellows. Their constant cry has been that the rule robs them of their stars and kills off attendances. The majors to recall their optioned players by giving only one day's notice. In this way, the parent clubs can shuttle their players back and forth at will.

Cut Player Limits

By a 41-7 count, the minor leagues voted to toss the rule out the window. This would mean that a player, once sent down, must remain for the entire minor league season including playoffs. The majors, also must pass this amendment in order to kill the rule.

This, however, does not seem likely unless there is a change of heart between now and next Monday when the vote comes up.

A poll of a majority of the big league clubs showed that at least five clubs in the National — Brooklyn, New York, St. Louis, Philadelphia and Boston— and four clubs in the American — New York, Detroit, Boston and Philadelphia—will vote against the amendment. That leaves only three in the National and four in American who are likely to back the minors, far short of the needed majority.

The minors also voted to cut player limits, subject to approval by the majors. The big fellows, however, are not expected to pass this rule, which would cut mid-season rosters from 25 to 23 players."

An amendment to restore the old ban on radio broadcasting and telecasts within 50 miles of a minor league park, was defeated when it received the backing of only 35 leagues, three short of the needed three-fourths vote.

Sport in Brief

(By The Canadian Press)

Heavyweight champion Jersey Joe Walcott and Edward Fagan, former chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission, yesterday at New York were voted the boxing writers two top awards.

Jersey Joe, who won his title at the age of 37 in his fifth try for boxing's most precious crown, will be awarded the Edward J. O'Neill plaque for having done the most for boxing.

Fagan, a one-time Olympic boxing champion who recently resigned his commission post after 6 1-2 years service, was chosen for the James J. Walker Memorial award "for long meritorious service" to boxing.

Winnipeg Blue Bombers broke about even financially during the 1951 campaign in the Western Interprovincial Football Union. The finance committee chairman said total expenses were $250,080 compared with estimated receipts of $249,872, leaving a deficit of $208.

He explained that receipts from the western playoffs and the Grey Cup final, not yet received, were only "a rough estimate," and the final report "could vary about 2,000 either way."

Toronto Maple Leafs of the International Baseball League yesterday sold pitcher Elmer Singleton to the San Francisco club of the Pacific Coast League and bought outfielder Neil Sheridan in return. Wednesday the Leafs sold pitcher Johnny Ostrowski for $10,000 and second-baseman Sam Kalenos in a deal with the Sacramento club of the Pacific Coast League. Ostrowski was purchased a year ago for $17,000.

Miami, Fla., defending champion Sammy Snead and Tommy Bolt of Durham, N.C., fired six-under par 64s yesterday to snatch the first-round lead in the $10,000 Miami Open golf tournament. Grouped in third place with 66s were Doug Ford of Harrison, N.Y., Tonny Penna of Cincinnati and Al Besselink of Mt. Clemens, Mich.

At Detroit, Canadian horses last night swept the first three places in the first Michigan International Horse Show from a field of 18 contestants. Starclift, a Canadian Olympic horse owned and ridden by Lt.-Col. Charles Baker of Toronto won the international triple bar, beating Copper King, owned by E. H. Cudney, also of Toronto. Star Gayety, owned by Stuart Fleming of St. Catharines, was third.

Hockey fans can see a basketball game and basketball fans can see a hockey game, both on the same program Sunday night at Boston Garden. Boston Celtics will oppose New York Knickerbockers in a National Basketball Association game at 7 p.m., EST, and Boston Olympics will play Atlantic Seagulls in an Eastern Amateur Hockey League match commencing about 9 p.m.

Neither the Seagulls nor the Olympics have drawn well at the gate so far this season even though both are fighting for first place in their leagues. Season tickets for both clubs will be honored and casual fans may see both contests for the single admission.

Dick Kazmaier, triple-threat star of Princeton, heads the Associated Press all-American college football for 1951, repeating his 1950 honors. He leads a spectacular backfield other members of which are Larry Leel of Baylor, Hugh McElhenny of Washington and Hank Lauricella of Tennessee.

Tennessee and Michigan State, the No. 1 and No. 2 teams of the land, each won two places on the squad.

Basketball Stars Sentenced Today On Bribe Counts

New York, Dec. 7—(AP)—Gene Melchiorre, George Chianakis and William Mann, three former Bradley University basketball stars, were scheduled to be sentenced today on their pleas of guilty to fixing a March 19, 1949 game with bowling green in Madison Square Garden.

The three pleaded guilty on Oct. 24 to a charge of conspiracy, a misdeamer punishable by maximum sentence of three years.

Bowling green won the game 82-77, to take third place in the National Invitation tournament that season.

The trio are among the 31 former players from seven schools involved in the point-fixing scandals. Of the others, five were sentenced to jail on Nov. 19 and nine others received suspended sentences.

Lloyd Percival Trains Paddlers

Toronto, Dec. 7—(CP)— Canada's Olympic paddlers, the only team yet chosen in Canada for summer at Helsinki, Finland, will spend this winter developing endurance, flexibility and recovery.

Most of the 12 paddlers will receive their instructions through the mail but five living in Toronto will be trained by Lloyd Percival, head coach of the sport college, a research and instruction organization.

Their training program will include an energy diet, muscular development, instruction in relation, building up fatigue resistance and recovery.

Bert Oldershaw, 1948 Olympic paddler, said the program was expected to bring good results at Helsinki.

American Pair Takes Aussie Doubles Title

By GAYLE TALBOT

Melbourne, Australia, Dec. 7 (AP)—America's new Davis Cup doubles combination of Ted Schroeder and Tony Trabert looked like money in the bank in thrashing the Australian pair of Adrian Quist and Geoff Brown 7-5, 6-4, 6-3, in the final of the Victoria tennis championship today.

The result never was in question after Ted and his young navy helper rallied from being down, 4-1, in the opening set to win going away.

The pair, which will face Sweden in the interzone final here next Thursday, swept through four victories in the tournament without losing a set —all against Australian opponents.

The only thing they didn't do was to hang it on the Aussie's big team of Frank Sedgman and Ken McGregor and they weren't given a chance to do that. Australia's cup selectors withdrew Frank and Ken from circulation.

The failure of Quist and Brown to make a better showing in today's quickie at least took Australia's cup selectors off the spot. Both were overlooked in naming the Aussie team and selectors would have been in unenvious positions if Adrian and Geoff had won.

Greenfield Wins Mercier Award

Rolling a singles score of 393, Ted Greenfield, Northern Electric bowling team was the winner of the Paul Mercier Gold Watch awarded for the best singles score achieved during the month of November.

Mr. Mercier presented the watch for singles competition among bowlers of any organized league using the Bowl-O-Drome alleys.

It is understood Mr. Mercier is putting up for competition prizes for the highest single score for both ladies and gentlemen members of any organized league for the month of December.

Joe Legault with a 930 triple led his Golf team to a seven - point win over Lawn Bowlers. CNR and Callaghan's Ice were 5 point winners over City Cleaners and Moore's Chiselers.

Joe Legault's 930 made up of games of 251, 363, 316 was high, followed by Harry Ridley 749, Joe Kirkwood 732, Doug Ashley 731, Graham Seeley 700, Les Lennox 693, Al Adams 692, George Bellis 682, Wally Dingman 671, Don Leckie 669, Jim Semark 667, Wilbur Kiser 665, and Frank Bailie 664.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

A double for takeout is a signal of considerable merit. It is one of the most useful of all defence bids. But you must not employ it with blind disregard in every conceivable spot.

Your south opponent opens with a bid of one club. Your partner in west passes. Your north opponent makes a responding bid of one spade. You double for takeout with the east hand shown here:

♠8 5
♥A Q 6
♦A 9 5 3
♣K J 6 4

Your double for takeout with this hand is in keeping with good bridge practice. It shows you have a hand as good as an opening one bid. You are prepared to take the consequences.

If south passes, your west partner is forced to bid something. You may expect two tricks in his hand. He may have more. He may have less. In any case your side will not be in great trouble.

But suppose south had opened the bidding with one spade, west passed, and north replied with two hearts. Although you have enough for what a takeout double promises, you should pass.

Your double will force partner to make a bid of three in clubs or diamonds. If he happens to have only his expected tricks or less, your side is likely to take a loss you can ill afford.

The general idea is this: A double for takeout is sound with a hand containing a minimum opening bid of one. But only if the bid of opponents is no higher than one.

If the opponent bid is two, the doubler should have more than the minimum expected of an opener of one. He should have six tricks instead of only five. He must have enough to take up the slack.

Of course, expert players will sometimes double and be glad to take a loss. But they are experienced enough to know in advance that their loss will not be greater than opponents could have made.

A sacrifice depends on the price.

Lindsay Rink Wins Bonspiel

Hamilton, Dec. 7—(CP)—Percy Skitch and his Lindsay four won the seniors' trophy bonspiel which ended here last night after three days of curling. The veteran skitch registered his third victory in the early winter classic when he turned back F. G. Light of Galt by four strokes after coming from behind an early deficit.

In two other events, the Hudson Ross and C. M. Doolittle contests, Hamilton quartets took down the major prizes.

In the Hudson Ross, 75-year-old William Doherty of Thistles outscored 77-year-old Charley Bulley of Toronto Granites by a single shot.

A. D. Somerville, also of Thistles, outscored Bert Kennedy of Royal Canadians, Toronto 11-8 in the Doolittle.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, Dec. 7 (AP)—Looks as if New York Yankees were the only—or at least the first—major league ball club to show more interest in the game of baseball than in their own gate receipts...Their decision to cut down on radio and television coverage is the first sign that any of the big leaguers really want to help the minors out of their trouble...Report now is that the Dodgers will follow suit ...And, speaking of that "radio umbrella," how about the news umbrella that the big league clubs hang over the minors' convention?...You'd hardly know from reading about the real and imaginary deals at Columbus that any minor leaguers had been there...Shoeless Joe Jackson, who died Wednesday, was just a little ahead of the times... Joe received only $5,000 for his part in the infamous Black Sox scandal and was barred from baseball forever ... Nowadays he'd get more just for dumping a few basketball games and a lot of sympathetic folks would insist he was just a "bewildered, misguided kid" and it was enough punishment to have his name dragged through the courts.

Cleaning the Cuff

Tennessee fullback Andy Kozar is housekeeper for his roommates, tackle Jim Haslan and end Vince Kaseta. Says Andy: "I'll clean up the room as long as they clean up the tacklers... Walt Pederson and Dan Difurla, freshmen members of the strong U. of North Dakota hockey squad, both are union bricklayers and worked on constructing the new engineering building this fall...Obviously they'd be mortarfied to lose a game.

Hollywood Applies Pressure To Prevent Actors, Actresses Getting Involved in Scandal

By Bob Thomas

Hollywood, Dec. 7 — (AP) — What is Hollywood doing about its misbehaving celebrities?

You often hear people declare, "oh, the studios like to have their stars get in scandals; they think any publicity is good publicity."

I have found no evidence to support this belief. The men who run the studios are responsible citizens. They know that business built on scandal is shaky. None argues that Hollywood scandals have a good effect on the box office. But there are two schools of thought on the effect.

1. One segment of the industry is gravely worried about film scandals. The argument: The U.S. is puritanical by tradition and censures offenders of public morals.

Those who argue this point add that the four top-money-making movies—"Gone With The Wind," "Best Years of Our Lives," "Bells of St. Mary's, "Going My Way"—are all moral tales. They also cite the top box office stars —John Wayne, Bob Hope, Bing Crosby, Betty Grable, James Stewart, Abbott and Costello, Clifton Webb, Esther Williams, Spencer Tracy, Randolph Scott.

None of them has been involved in a big scandal; they are respected and responsible citizens.

2. Others argue that although a star is not helped by a scandal, he is not hurt, either. They claim that the American public is quick to forgive and forget the misdeeds of their favorites.

They point out that the careers of Errol Flynn, Robert Mitchum, Robert Walker and Ava Gardner did not appear to suffer because of their headlined doings.

Even if stars have escaped unscathed from scandals, this doesn't mean that Hollywood is doing nothing about preventing future headlines. It lacks the formal machinery, since the producers' association can only control film content, not individual morals.

But a great deal of pressure is applied on potential wrong-doers by studios, agents and friends. Many juicy stories do not happen, or at least don't get in the papers, because of quick action by responsible persons.

Minor personalities who become trouble-makers soon find themselves dropped from their contracts and unable to find jobs at any of the studios. They are passed up as bad risks.

Hollywood has discovered that its responsible stars may be duller, but they're a lot less trouble.

STIRLING

Dr. Bert Howard Addresses High School Commencement

Stirling.—The annual commencement exercises of Stirling High School were held in the Stirling theatre on Monday night. There was a good attendance with seating accommodation at a premium.

The first part of the program consisted of the presentation of special prizes to successful students by principal, J. L. Good, assisted by Mr. J. B. Belshaw, Stirling representative to Centre Hastings High School Area Board.

Choral Group

The Girls' Choral group was heard to advantage in the rendition of two numbers while the Boys' Choral group acquitted itself most creditably in three numbers. The musical part of the program was under the capable leadership of Mr. S. Hawthorne and Mr. D. H. Garrison.

During the evening, the girls' volleyball team, champions of the Area League, with their coach, Miss W. Hay, were presented to the audience.

In the winning of scholarships Bill Zufelt took top honors having taken four and it was fitting that he should deliver the valedictory address.

Bill stated that he had taken the final two years of his high school course at Stirling and he was proud of the fact that he had done so since this particular seat of learning enjoys an enviable reputation among the high schools of Eastern Ontario.

He lauded the staff for its excellent course of instruction and expressed the hope that succeeding classes will receive the same instruction for which Stirling high school is noted.

Guest Speaker

Principal J. L. Good introduced the speaker, Rev. Bert Howard, D.D., principal of Albert College, Belleville.

Dr. Howard took as his theme, "Why School?". He stated that "in going to school there is something more than the mere studying and learning of academic subjects. It is a matter of learning things from life. Going to school develops the motivated power to our natural lives. It helps the younger generation to design their courses in life to serve the best purposes. School teaches us to think straight and deeply.

"It teaches us to face life because life is an exacting taskmaster. These tasks must be overcome and we must develop the fine things within us. We must stand on our own feet and make the very best of our opportunities. We must have internal resources, something that many people lack. One of the main things in the art of living, is to observe everything in life in due proportion."

Dr. Howard's advice to the students was to realize that their school work contributes to their future success and happiness. Succeeding generations have wrought many changes in life even in the past century and the graduates of today have an opportunity to do their part in developing and changing the course of the world of today so as to make it a better and happier place.

On behalf of all present, Principal Good extended to Dr. Howard, sincere thanks for his able and thought-provoking address.

FOR COUGHS COLDS— YOU CAN'T BEAT BUCKLEY'S MIXTURE

No Survivors

By Will Henry

I was 21, a full Colonel of Confederate Cavalry— Col. John Buell Clayton— outside Appomattox when all of us on General Gordon's staff prepared for the awkward task of surrendering gracefully to "Little Phil" Sheridan.

Imagine our feeling when we saw, not Sheridan, but an unknown Union general whose appearance was so remarkable as to keep us all in silence as he drew up.

A nervous private, standing close to me muttered "look at his hair. Yellower'n field corn in August."

While he was still 75 yards out, an ungallant private had half raised his musket as though to fire at him. Guessing the man's intent, I struck the piece from his hand, ordering his arrest in a back flung sentence without taking my eyes off the approaching Union officer.

I was satisfied that General Custer had been a trigger-finger twitch from death, the honor the Confederate Army equally close to lasting disgrace. But the action had been so swift, so completely trivial to the major drama, that men in our own company had not seen its occurrence. That Custer might have seen this by-play seemed incredible.

But he stopped. "Colonel" — his voice had a disturbed depth —"my compliments. You have doubtless saved my life. Should our paths cross again, I shall remember you."

He gestured toward the soldier who would have shot him. "May I issue an order, Colonel?" I nodded back, perfunctorily, and he called to the corporal who stood guard over my trooper. "Corporal, release your prisoner, please. Give him back his rifle."

Then, wheeling his horse in a sharp, near-foot spin, he presented his saber to the entire line. "My compliments to the incomparable Confederate Army."

I shall recount nothing further of the death of the Confederacy. Such accounting as has been given, may be regarded as the preface to the real saga of my life and its westward course.

My sole assets at the outset of the journey west, beyond a personal hardihood, were my horse and an old Dragoon revolver. Hussein the foundation of this dilapidated trio, a magificent stallion, had somehow miraculously survived the war, but at what a price! A Minie ball had plowed a crooked furrow aslant the last five ribs of his near side. He bore half a dozen saber scars on the off side. His off-ear had been inletted by a charge of grape and as a result it flopped down with all the elan of a Georgia jackass's.

Kansas City, which I reached in the late '60s, was the head kettle of the frontier fleshpots. Market Square was the raw heart. Here came the off-season scourings of the frontier to "simmer in the sun and summer in the sin." My problem was where and how to get an outfit. A pressing problem but in the interests of candor, I must admit an ace in the hole.

I shall always maintain it is the S of Southern to partake properly of spirits, and the G of Gentleman to know the spots on a pasteboard. I fancied that among other of the little polishes of self-preservation, I could take care of myself in a poker game.

Five men, all hard cases, had a saddle blanket spread on the ground in the shade alongside a livery barn. The play was table stakes and running high. Elbowing my way through the gallery of frontier riff-raff, I watched the play several minutes.

Chief of the camp scavengers who preyed upon the free-spending buffalo hunters were the deliberate cardsharpers. They worked in pairs a skillful team making enormous profits in a good season; a good season being any they happened to survive.

Still, by the very nature of their profession and of the rawhide gentility of the clientele upon which they practised it, these sharps were nearly always gunfighters and killers.

Three hands were enough to let me know where the spots were on this leopard. The game was crooked as a hound's hind leg and twice as dirty.

I slid the old Dragroon out of the holster, spun the cylinder, flexed the hammer, eased the gun gently back into its worn resting place. One player, white-faced and shaking had just risen and left the game. I stepped into his place, dropped to one knee, asked for cards. I gave my holsters just a suggestion of a forward shift, observing calmly, if no one has any objections, we'll play honest poker."

In a few hands, with luck not inherent in an honest deck, I had won a considerable amount. Now came the hand for which I had been waiting. From the betting it was evident everyone had been dealt a big hand. The man on my right opened; I raised. The man on my left, a small-simian-eyed prospector, raised. The first of the two riggers did likewise and his partner raised him. The last man dropped.

The man on my left front, the smaller of the two sharps, was exceedingly thin, shallow-eyed nervous and quick, with a mouth almost lipless, above a sallow weedy goatee. His clothing was stylish, of good quality. It would be fatally easy to underrate his hypersensitive type in a gunplay.

The other man called Slate, who was dealing, was big, quiet compelling, not quite the picture of the conventional cardman, I got the feeling, watching him make his lazy, slow moves handling cards and money, there was in him some animal strain of vitality. In the entire play he had not said a word making his bets and requests with monosyllabic grunts.

It would be a hazard to fix his age, but it was probably on less than 35. His dress was that of a buffalo hunter. Two late-model Colts hung low and far forward on his massive thighs. At variance with the custom, he wore his moustache trimmed close and was otherwise smooth-shaven, while his hair, which was almost singular hue of ashen-gray, escaped in thick growth from beneath his black slouch hat. His skin was prairie burned, almost mahogany.

I held three queens, drawing the fourth and a jack. The only sounds came from the watchers, an occasional cough, the nervous clearing of a throat, the sibilant movements of many feet in thick dust. I knew, without looking that those behind me were drawing back and away.

"How much left in your pile?" My words directed to Slate broke the richest silence I'd ever paid to listen to.

Without moving his head, which was bent in study of his hand, he raised his pale eyes until they met and held mine. This was the first time our glances had met directly. I confess to a momentary nervousness and had wishes been wings, I would have been soaring far away from there.

"Three hundred." His voice was as flat as the click of a cocked trigger.

"All right, my friend." I hoped my voice wasn't shaking any worse than a wet hound in a hailstorm. "I'll tap you."

In a moment, every dollar in sight was in the middle of the blanket. The little man looked repeatedly at Slate, but the latter's field of vision never wavered from my mid-person, a field which included, very nicely, my cards, my hands, and my gun.

The play had now reached the point of no return.

"You're called." The big man's deep grunted phrase had all the salutary effect of a tumbler of ice water thrown into the small of the back. Let no one tell you the hairs at the nape of the neck cannot rise; human hackles literally lift.

"Queens. Four of them." The cards accompanied my words.

"Full," said the smaller man. "Tens over jacks."

The big man seemed to hesitate. My whole body was singing tight. Then his cards came down. "Four aces."

My left hand was on the ground in front of me, my right free carried lightly across my right knee. "I reckon you didn't hear me when I said we'd play honest poker."

Slate's hand froze in mid-reach for the pot.

In gentler times and places the charge of cheating at cards has proven the most reliable percussion for the cap of gunplay. Both my men wore double pistols. I made no move for my own.

The litle man went for his and I shot him in the stomach. He had his guns out, though their muzzles never pointed higher than groundward. From the tail of my eye, my gaze and gun now covered Slate, I saw the other gambler slide slowly forward, eyes wide, his body following his guns down into the dirt of the stableyard.

Slate's hand remained in mid air.

"Any more bets?" My voice rasped with tension.

Slate's hand drew back. His eyes on mine, as they had been from the onset, he grunted very softly, "I'll pass."

On the blanket in front of me were nine hundred hard Yankee dollars. All mine by gun induced default.

Rising to go, I felt a hand on my shoulder. Tensing, I glanced at it, finding it more nearly resembled the paw of an old boar grizzly, than any human member. The owner of the hand redeemed the note of its bearlike promise.

BRITISH ARMY ENGINEERS FLATTEN MUD HOUSES

Truce Negotiators Unable to Break Issue Deadlock

Still Wrangling Over Control of Korean Waters

Munsan, Korea, Dec. 8 (AP) — United Nations negotiators today made another unsuccessful effort to break the long deadlock over policing a truce in Korea.

The communists rebuffed all U.N. overtures and again said "no" to every key U.N. proposal for supervising an armistice.

After five hours of debate, in which tempers on both sides of the conference table became frayed, the two-man sub-committees appeared no nearer to a break in the 12-day deadlock.

Nonetheless, some observers saw hope of a compromise solution soon. They said they believe the negotiations have reached the hard bargaining stage which frequently comes just before an agreement is hammered out.

Hold Session Sunday

The negotiators go back to Panmunjom for another session at 11 a.m. Sunday (9 p.m. EST Saturday).

Maj.-Gen. Howard M. Turner, senior U.N. delegate, told correspondents that the sub-committees spent much of the day discussing the status of U.N. held islands off North Korea and the make-up of a proposed armistice commission. He said they were at "complete stalemate" on both.

In Tokyo, general headquarters accused the communists of "attempting to pour supplies, equipment and men into North Korea" while the armistice talks are under way.

An information bulletin labelled "not an official release" declared "the reds always have conferred on subjects only when they held a military advantage and when they could apply the pressure of their war machine."

Compromise Requested

At least twice during Friday's session at Panmunjom Turner invited the communists to offer compromise proposals for solving the supervision deadlock.

"We are the only ones to have made any overtures and concessions to get on with the armistice," Turner said. "What do you suggest now in order to make any headway?"

A U.N. spokesman, Brig. William P. Nuckols, said the communist delegates replied: "Accept our proposals."

In a lengthy harangue, North Korean Maj.-Gen. Lee Song Cho flatly rejected five points the U.N. Allies insist must be included in any truce supervision agreement.

Lee said the communists would:

1. Insist on the right to rebuild damaged airfields and construct new bases in North Korea;
2. Refuse to concede the U.N. demand for rotation of troops and replacement during an armistice;
3. Demand that the Allies evacuate islands off the coast of North Korea and withdraw all naval forces from coastal waters;
4. Insist on rear-area inspection only at mutually-agreed ports of entry and refuse U.N. demands for unlimited aerial reconnaissance and the use of communications lines by observer teams, and
5. Reject the U.N. proposal for a single armistice commission to supervise the truce and insist on a joint U.N.-communist commission with a separate organization of neutral nations to provide observer teams.

Turner said U.N. delegates again asked whether the reds had an answer to a proposal that a second sub-committee be created to begin work on the problem of exchanging prisoners of war.

OFFICERS GIVEN DIPLOMAS

Clinton, Ont., Dec. 8 (CP) — Thirteen Royal Canadian Air Force officers yesterday received technical diplomas here in colorful graduation ceremonies conducted by Air Commodore D. S. Blane, deputy to the air member for technical services. Graduating from No. 1 radar and communication school, the airmen have undergone intensive communications and technical training for the past year.

Air Searchers Find Wreckage Of Cargo Plane

Cuges-Les-Pins, France, Dec. 8 (AP) — Air searchers today found the wreckage of a United States Air Force C-47 cargo plane on a mountain peak. They reported they saw no sign that any of the 10 men aboard survived.

Search planes flying over the wreckage identified it by lifebelts they saw scattered around the debris.

The plane had been missing since Thursday night when it disappeared after checking in by radio 40 miles from Marignane Field at Marseilles, where it was preparing to land.

It had flown from a U.S. air field at Tripoli, Libia.

The wreckage was found in the Saint-Baume mountain range, about 30 miles east of Marseilles. The Saint-Baume has peaks up to 3,500 feet high.

The plane's last message as it approached Marseilles was that it had come down to 3,000 feet on its approach glide after crossing the Mediterranean at 8,500 feet.

The twin-engined transport was attached at a U.S. Third Air Force base in England. It apparently was returning from a cargo mission.

One search pilot remarked:

"The plane seems to have burned. The ground around it is blackened and the tail and nose elements have been thrown far apart. The scattered wreckage is still smoking. The plane must have hit the mountain at high speed."

The Paris newspaper Aurore, which is campaigning for more extensive radar and other air-traffic signs on European routes, recalled that in the last year three other passenger planes have crashed in the Alps and central and southern mountains.

The three were an air India Constella, the "Canadian Pilgrim" from Rome, and an American boxcar from Germany.

Sudden fogs and violent winds are characteristic of winter in the mountains of southeast and central France. Sparse population and rugged terrain reduce chances of rescue if a plane makes a crash landing.

Doctors Watch Delicate Heart Operation on Coast-to-Coast TV

New York, Dec. 8 — (AP) — Coast-to-coast color television enabled hundreds of doctors yesterday to "sit in" on a heart operation that meant life or death to the 20-year-old patient.

Operating at Los Angeles County General Hospital was Dr. John C. Jones. Doctors in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles watched the color screen as he repaired the defective aorta of Richard C. Russell of Pacoima, Calif.

Late last night, Russell regained consciousness and talked a little. He was described as resting comfortably and doing fine.

Russell was born with a narrowing in the aorta, the main artery leading from the heart. His life expectancy had narrowed to several more years.

The first transcontinental medical TV-color-cast was witnessed in Los Angeles by the youth's mother, Mrs. James C. Russell, who said:

"I didn't think I could watch, but I'm glad I did. I am glad Richard did it. It might help someone else some day."

Doctors unanimously acclaimed the color-cast of the operation, performed at the clinical session of the American Medical Association and sponsored by Smith Kline & French Laboratories, Philadelphia, and CBS Laboratories division.

Jones put clamps above and below the defective middle section. He snipped out the middle piece, making a cut narrower than a matchstick.

Calmly describing the technique, the surgeon went to work with needle and thread. He stitched together the severed ends. He pointed out arteries which had taken up the job not being done by the defective aorta. The arteries were by-passing the nearly closed pipeline to carry oxygen-laden blood to his body tissues.

The operation took three hours, but only one hour was telecast.

During the color-cast, Dr. Jones held a two-way conversation with Dr. George Humphreys of Columbia University's College of Physicians and Surgeons, watching from the CBS studios in New York.

The American Medical Association convention delegates watched the operation on receivers set up in a Los Angeles auditorium. Chicago viewers were at the Nathan Goldblatt memorial hospital at the University of Chicago.

FORD OFFICIALS, UNION LEADERS AT LOGGERHEADS

Company Flatly Refuses To Rehire 26 Men

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 8—(CP) — Union leaders today awaited a reply to their bid for a resumption of negotiations with the Ford Company of Canada in a dispute which has made 10,000 workers idle just before the Christmas season.

The bid was made last night by George Burt, Canadian director of the United Auto Workers of America (C.I.O.-C.C.L.), who challenged Rhys Sale, Ford president, "to meet with myself and the committee of Local 200 in constant negotiations until this dispute is settled. . ."

He said in a statement that "Ford and Local 200 will both be better off when they sit down and work this out around the conference table."

Earlier yesterday the company used the strongest terms it has ever employed in a labor dispute in flatly refusing to reinstate 26 men whose firing Monday touched off the strike.

The statement said that since "some employees have felt free to disregard the orders of their supervisors, to walk off the job whenever they choose on some petty excuse," the firings must stand.

The wildcat strike in which the 26 men were said to be ringleaders was over the delay in receiving a conciliation board report on a six-month dispute over a new agreement.

Strike Misguided

Mr. Burt said the wildcat strike was misguided but understandable.

"Wildcats are as much a headache to the union as they are to management because they are a negation of the union leadership," he added. "But the big stick is not the answer."

Mr. Sale's statement indicated the company would not retreat from its position.

It said:

"Neither now nor in the future will our company again place itself at the mercy of lawless and irresponsible elements whose reckless activities rob our people of legitimate employment and pay cheques and threaten the very destruction of the business on which all of us depend for our livelihood."

Mr. Sale said if the company were to give in to the demand for the return to work of the 26, it would be right back where it was last week.

Mr. Burt said Mr. Sale might not know it, but many of the 34 work stoppages in the past 18 months which were blamed on the union were actually ordered by management.

Parliamentary Committee Approves Banning Resale Price Maintenance on Goods

Ottawa, Dec. 8. (CP)—The government has completed another step in its plans to make it illegal for manufacturers to set the retail prices of their products.

After three weeks of stormy discussion, a special parliamentary committee placed before the commons yesterday a report approving proposed government legislation to ban resale price maintenance.

It also recommended vigorous action to enforce a section of the criminal code dealing with price-cutting aimed at killing off competition. This brought from George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, the comment that it implied the criminal code is not being enforced.

He hoped, he said, that Justice Minister Garson noted this "implication", but Mr. Garson made no reply.

Resale price maintenance is the practice whereby the manufacturer or supplier sets the price at which his product will be sold to the general public.

It has been sharply criticized by consumer and farm organizations, but strongly defended by manufacturers and retailers who warned during the committee's public sessions that if price maintenance is made illegal, price wars may break out and new monopolies created, pushing prices to higher levels.

Could Use Criminal Code

The committee in its report, prepared behind closed doors, said it did not believe price wars would break out, but that in any case the enforcement of the criminal code would deal with that problem.

However, if these price wars did actually emerge, it recommended the government give the matter further consideration, with the possibility of developing further amendments to the Combines Investigation Act.

In preparing its report, the committee defeated two motions, one of which dealt specifically with predatory price-cutting, or "loss leaders" as they are known in the trade.

A motion by David Croll (L—Toronto Spadina) was defeated on the grounds that members could not agree how to define a "loss leader" and were not too sure that legislation against it could be enforced.

The other motion, by E. D. Fulton (PC—Kamloops), was to have the committee bring in a report recommending that the whole subject be given further consideration, particularly in relation to the fair trade laws of the United States and the possibility of applying them to Canada.

Tanks, Artillery Big Help To Royal 22nd Regiment In Holding Off China Reds

By BILL ROSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the Canadians in Korea, Dec. 8 —(CP)— D Company of the 2nd Battalion Royal 22nd Regiment had plenty of support in its epic Nov. 22-26 defence of the saddle between Hills 227 and 355.

The stand denied the communists possession of a ridge determining the security of the United Nations front west of the Imjin River.

It was made under the most tremendous shelling ever experienced in the Korean war and the "Van Doos" were under almost continuous attack by Chinese troops in anything from company to battalion strength.

Right in the perimeter of the company commanded by Maj. Real Libolrin of Windsor, N. S., and Ponteix, Sask., were four tanks of the Lord Strathcona Horse, commanded by Lieut. Doug Smith of Montreal.

Tanks Save Day

His Shermans, in virtual back-to-back positions, fired at the peaks forming either extremity of the ridge. "Without them we couldn't have held," said Liboiron after the battle.

Liaison between Liboiron and Smith reached such a pitch that tank fire was brought down on targets within 10 seconds after they were indicated by the major.

The tanks' fire was credited with breaking off within two minutes a communist assault that overran a platoon commanded by Lieut Raymond MacDuff of Lacolle, Que.

Attacking in three waves, with burp guns first, then soldiers with carpets to lay a path over the platoon's wire defences, followed by other troops whose job was to watch for those ahead to fall and then grab their weapons and follow through, the Chinese swarmed into MacDuff's position "like a bunch of animals."

One Canadian on the verge of shell-shock broke and made for Liboiron's headquarters where the major wrung from his the vital news that the position had gone and immediately brought down concentrated tank fire on it.

It all happened within two minutes. Within another two, Smith's fire had sent the enemy charging back into the curtain shells the major had next ordered.

Directly supporting the Vandoos were the guns of the 2nd Regiment Royal Canadian Horse Artillery, commanded by Lt.-Col. Geof Brooks, Shilo, Man.

Maj. Herb Baker of Picton, Ont., was constantly with Lt.-Col. Jacques Dextraze, commander of the Vandoos, and directly firing the guns.

On one day alone the R. C. H. A. sent 6,000 shells down upon the attacking Chinese while throughout the operation almost $25,000 were poured down by the division.

The battalion's mortars alone, under Capt. Charles Forbes of Matane, Que., fired almost 9,500 bombs in two days—an almost unheard-of number.

At one point during the battle Forbes' mortars fired 700 rounds in 20 minutes, then had to ask the artillery to take over so that the red-hot mortar barrels could cool off.

Brock's guns at the height of the Vandoos' stand fired their shells within 45 seconds of target indications.

So quickly was the ammunition used that Maj. Charles Hamilton of Brandon, Man., senior administration officer at Brig. J. M. Rockingham's headquarters, had to dispatch convoys far down into the rear areas to bring it forward.

Commanders of the other Lord Strathcona tanks supporting the Vandoos were Lieuts. Strathcona Macdonald, Vankleek Hill, Ont., and Lorne Glendinning of Vancouver.

Farquhar Oliver House Leader For Liberals

Toronto, Dec. 8 (CP) —About 70 Liberal candidates in the Nov. 22 provincial election met in caucus at Queen's Park yesterday and voted unanimous confidence in and thanks to Walter Thomson, Ontario party leader, for his "splendid effort and leadership" during the campaign.

Eight Liberal candidates were elected to the legislature, with Premier Frosts' Progressive Conservatives taking 78 seats. Mr. Thomson suffered personal defeat.

Yesterday the questions of House leadership in his absence and of the possibility of an elected member giving up a seat to him were not discussed. Farquhar Oliver, House leader since his resignation as party leader, remains in that position.

Ross McEwing, member-elect for Wellington North, said four hours of "general discussion of the situation following the election" took place behind the closed doors of the opposition lounge. Party leadership may be discussed at the Liberal party annual meeting next year.

COMMONS GIVES INITIAL APPROVAL FOR AUTHORITY

Ready to Proceed With Seaway Project

Ottawa, Dec. 8. (CP)—Parliament gave initial approval yesterday for creation of a St. Lawrence seaway authority for construction of the big ocean-to-the-Great Lakes navigation project and regulation of it when it is built.

It took three days of debate to get first reading of the bill providing for establishment of the three-man crown agency and there is a promise of more debate to come.

The legislation makes it clear that the door remains open for the United States to participate in the project. It gives the authority power to charge tolls on the self-liquidating navigation project, but states that in event of agreement with the United States for joint construction, the tolls may be only those directed by the Canadian government.

A companion measure also got through its initial stages. This is legislation to ratify an agreement signed between the federal government and the province of Ontario, giving the province power to go ahead with hydro development in the international rapids section of the St. Lawrence River. Ontario will undertake this $4,000,000 project of an equal-share basis with the State of New York.

At the end of a hectic day of seaway debate, the Commons also got a recommendation from its special parliamentary committee that resale price maintenance should be outlawed in Canada. Action also was recommended with respect to any price-cutting that restricts competition.

No Debate on Report

There was no debate on the committee's report. That will come later. It is expected the government now will introduce legislation to carry out the committee's recommendations.

It was another day for Maritime members in the seaway debate. Some western members joined them in arguments that the seaway will be of no benefit to the Maritimes and that the government should produce a national plan to benefit all parts of Canada and not just Ontario and Quebec.

At one point Transport Minister Chevrier emphasized the St. Lawrence project will be self-liquidating. He told the house it will result in a new type of iron-ore-grain carrying ship, two of which are already under construction in Quebec yards.

The minister was pressed to answer questions regarding the government's plans regarding a Canadian steel industry. But he said he had already made two general statements and would go into details when the legislation reaches a later stage.

Copper Changed Into 13 Different Metals, One Gas, One Non-Metal

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
(Associated Press Science Editor)

New York, Dec. 8 — (AP) One of the strangest discoveries of science, by which copper is changed into 13 different metals, one gas and one non-metal, is reported today in the Physical Review.

Small strips of copper foil were fastened in the University of California cyclotron, the world's most powerful high energy machine. Inside the cyclotron streams of heavy hydrogen and of helium nuclei were spun to velocities equal to anywhere from 100,000,000 to 380,000,000 electron-volts.

At those speeds the particles were shot into the strips of copper. This bombardment continued for varying periods of time, from 10 minutes to an hour, depending on what particles were in the fast-moving stream.

Then the copper was removed and subjected to chemical analysis. There was the original copper, and also varying amounts of 15 other chemical elements. The 15 all were made from copper, by the hits of the fast particles.

There was chlorine gas. Also phosphorus, the non-metal, which makes matches and good bones. There was sodium and calcium, both lightweight metals.

Also titanium, vanadium, scandium, chromium, manganese, iron, cobalt and nickel. All these are lighter in weight than copper and evidently were made by the atomic hammer blows splitting the copper atoms into smaller atoms.

But two of the metals were heavier, namely germanium and gallium. They evidently had been created by swallowing up the particles shot at them, and so building up their weight.

The fifteenth chemical element was zinc which has almost the same weight as copper.

The only practical purpose is better understanding of matter and energy. If anyone undertook to produce these metals from raw copper, they would cost millions of dollars a pound.

Egyptian Police Ordered to Resist British Operations

Tension Heightens Daily In Cairo and Alexandria

Cairo, Dec. 8 (Reuters) — British army engineers today flattened mud houses in a village near the vital Suez water filtration plant, despite Egyptian threats of resistance.

The Egyptian government last night ordered the Governor of Suez, Ibrahim Azky El Kholy Bey, to order Egyptian police "to resist by force British operations if carried out by force."

Under a strong armed guard, British engineers began demolishing 50 mud huts at dawn. At noon there had been no Egyptian interference.

Though there was no contact with Egyptian police, the Egyptian government proclaimed a state of emergency in Cairo and Alexandria as tension heightened in both cities.

Steel-helmeted police mounted guard at foreign embassies and other key buildings. Telephone, road and rail communications with Suez were cut after Egypt rejected yesterday what was described as a British military "ultimatum."

British sources said only that five tanks were being used to knock down the huts. They added that no Egyptian police had been seen in the area up to noon.

(Shortly after noon, the Egyptian interior ministry in Cairo issued a communique saying that Egyptian police "have advanced to execute Egyptian orders to stop demolitions 'by force.' Communique made no mention of immediate violence.)

Lt.-Gen. Sir George Erskine, British commander in the Suez Canal zone, yesterday, announced his intention of driving a "safe route" through the virtually-isolated water plant — "with or without Egyptian approval."

The new road will be 500 yards long. Engineers also were throwing a bridge across a small canal. The new route will bypass "trouble corner," where there have been several ambushes recently.

Adenauer Says Visit Fruitful

London, Dec. 8 (AP)—Dr. Konrad Adenauer wound up a five-day visit to Britain today and flew home to Germany.

The West German chancellor told reporters at the airport: "I am extraordinarily glad at the way the visit turned out. The results are most satisfactory."

He had talks with Prime Minister Churchill, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and a number of other top British officials, and was given a half hour audience with the King in Buckingham Palace.

He was the first chancellor to visit Britain since 1931.

Witness Takes Stand to Show Dance Graceful

Beverly Hills, Calif., Dec. 8—(AP)— Beauteous Lili St. Cyr takes the witness stand Fri., in an effort to convince a jury that her bubble bath routine is graceful artistry and not vulgarity as the prosecution contends.

Whether the leggy stripper will demonstrate her act remains to be seen. Miss St. Cyr says she is willing even eager, to give the jurors a close-up.

She'll have to go some to top her boss, portly Herman Hover, who put on quite a show for the jury yesterday. He is the proprietor of Ciro's, the Hollywood nitery raided by sheriff's deputies who called Lili's show lewd and indecent.

Hover demonstrated a bump and grind, neither of which, he added, was perpetrated by Lili. He described a bump as a "pelvic propulsion, whereas a grind is a circular movement of the hips without moving any other part of the body."

Number of Loaded Guns Seized When Apt. Raided

Toronto, Dec. 8 (CP) —A number of loaded guns was seized in a west end apartment house yesterday when police raided the premises and arrested two women and a man.

Police said they seized a .45 calibre Thomson sub machine-gun, two .45 calibre automatics and two .32 calibre revolvers. One box of 25 shells and more than $1,000 in postage stamps also were seized.

Arrested were Roderick Morrisette, 27, and Jennie Wright, 30, both of Toronto, and Jennie MacCart, 21, of Montreal. All were charged with having offensive weapons.

Detectives said they were checking to see if the stamps were among those stolen in recent robberies of Ontario post offices. They also will determine whether the machine-gun is one of those stolen from Camp Borden military camp during the fall.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Dec. 8 (CP)—Synopsis—Temperatures across Ontario this morning are generally 10 to 15 degrees below yesterday's and a further 5 to 10 degree drop is forecast for Sunday.

A small storm is expected to develop over Texas this afternoon and will bring rain or wet snow to southern regions on Sunday. Scattered snowflurries are reported in northern regions this morning and these are likely to continue on Sunday.

A motorist, James Webster, No. 6 Repair Depot, Trenton, was charged with careless driving as was Garnet Hart, Benjamin St., after police checked them for driving their vehicles in an allegedly erratic manner in different parts of the city.

Councillors Told Hastings County Second in Cheese Production For All Ontario

Hastings county council wound up its business for the year Friday with the conclusion of its December session.

Friday morning members heard a report of agricultural activities from A. O. Dalrymple, agricultural representative for the county.

Mr. Dalrymple told councillors that the county had been second in the production of cheese for all Ontario counties with 4,242,885 pounds manufactured. This was less than a year ago when the production was 4,990,993 pounds. Butter production within the county was 1,731,046 pounds.

The year had been an especially successful one in junior work with 163 boys and 187 girls participating. This was an increase of 65 members. Highlight of the year has been the winning of the provincial and Dominion grain judging championship by Merle Moore and John McComb.

Great Interest Shown

"I don't know just where our junior work will end up," Mr. Dalrymple said. "There is greater interest shown each year and the prospect for next year is another increase in membership with one additional club likely to be formed in the Bancroft district."

There had been excellent response from the Sidney and Thurlow branch members of the Dairy Herd Improvement Association; also Mr. Dalrymple said that the county was eligible to be declared an accredited area for tuberculosis eradication in cattle.

At the Bay of Quinte District Breeders Association there were now 424 county members. Last year throughout the district 11,000 cows had been bred from the local unit, while this year the number was expected to reach 20,000 or over.

Fewer Heifer Calves

"There seems to be general satisfaction with the breeding unit among farmers, although some report fewer heifers calves being born."

Mr. Dalrymple expressed his appreciation for co-operation of council with the agricultural committee during the year.

A grant of $450 was voted to the county agricultural committee, while a grant of $125 was approved for the Cheese Producers Association to assist in defraying the expenses of a banquet held Friday in connection with the official opening of the new cheese warehouse.

A grant of $200 to the Bancroft Red Cross Society to be turned over to the Bancroft Hospital was also approved.

A number of indigent hospital bills considered by councillors with Reeve Ross Neal, of Deseronto, expressing alarm on the number.

A Serious Matter

"This is a very serious matter," he said. "I wonder if any plan has been explored regarding insurance for hospitalization?"

"The county doesn't want to go into the insurance business," returned clerk-treasurer, Erle Denyes.

The administration of justice report was given by its chairman Reeve Charles Buskard of Deloro. He said that law enforcement had cost the county $65,717 during the year. However, some of this cost had been caused through renovation of the county buildings.

The county's new agreement with the city with respect to administration of justice costs had worked out favorable to the county.

As chairman of a special committee appointed during the September session to investigate a pension scheme for county employees, Mr. Buskard reported there were very few of the workers interested in any such scheme.

He therefore recommended that the matter be shelved for the time being.

Committee Named

A special committee of Reeve T. C. Graham, Tweed; Reeve Vincent Lynch, Marmora; Reeve Jack Kincaid of Madoc, and Reeve Ross Neal, Deseronto, was appointed to discuss business assessments in county rural municipalities. The committee expect to make their report at the January session.

Mr. Graham reported that there had been dissatisfaction in his village regarding the business assessment as result of the reassessment completed this year.

County Treasurer Ross Bailey who is severing his connection with the county to assume a position at Belleville General Hospital, was presented with a fine leather brief case.

Reeve Clarke Rollins, Wollaston, said that Ross always had the interest of the county at heart. He expressed his assurance that the county would always be willing to co-operate with the city of Belleville and with the hospital.

Ross assured the presentation was a "surprise to me" and said he had enjoyed his six years' association with the county very much.

Big Department Stores Open In Defiance of Law

Montreal, Dec. 8—(CP)—It was business as usual for big department stores today—in defiance of a new city by-law prohibiting business on Roman Catholic Holy days.

Business and shopping districts were deserted early in the day while Catholics attended mass on the feast of immaculate conception—first day that the controversial by-law was to be applied since its adoption.

Things began to hum by midmorning when major department stores on St. Catherine Street opened their doors to Christmas shoppers.

Smaller stores, such as jewelry and men's clothing retailers, were the first to open.

Clerks and managers were jittery when a reporter peered through the window and walked inside, sniffing the air in the manner of a bloodhound. The newspaper man didn't make any purchases, but chatted with the store employees.

Police officers, who yesterday announced they would call out reserves to help enforce the by-law, were few and far between. The reporter noticed one motorcycle traffic cop within several blocks of St. Catherine Street and two or three plainclothesmen.

The detectives walked past a men's clothing store and looked at each other knowingly. They didn't stop or even take notes.

The department stores previously announced—and advertised in yesterday's English newspapers that— they would be open for business.

A group of stores indicated they intended to break the law in order to have a test case brought to court.

The $40 fine for infractions meant little to the retailers who expected to draw shoppers given a day off from work because of the by-law.

Several small concerns also planned to open, but most of them waited until noon to give their Catholic employees a chance to attend mass.

Four Charges Armed Robbery Laid by Police

Toronto, Dec. 8 — (CP)—Four charges of armed robbery were laid yesterday against Joseph Kelly, 31-year-old unemployed mechanic who gave himself up as the accomplice of Thomas Danek. Danek was killed in a gun battle with a policeman in a drug store holdup on Tuesday.

Last night Kelly's wife, who lives with their three children in Oshawa, was permitted to visit him. Kelly was charged with robbing drug stores of a total of some $250.

PLAGUE OUTBREAK

Dar - es - Salaam, Tanganyika, Dec. 8 — (Reuters) — A second outbreak of bubonic plague in this African territory was reported yesterday from the area of Basotu, where 108 cases are already being treated.

Christmas Seal Fund Urgent

The Christmas Seal Committee is proud of everything about the campaign, chairman D. L. Storey, said yesterday. They are proud to be fighting tuberculosis, proud of co-operation of their fellow townsmen and proud to have a method of appealing to the public which shows so much consideration for the contributors.

"The person who gets a Christmas Seal letter reads it when it suits him or her to do so". "If one has the money right there, well then there's no time like the present for putting it in the mail or bringing it to the campaign office. If there's one of those shortages from which we all suffer at times then the matter will wait our convenience. There's no embarrassment of telling someone we are short, and asking that another call be made. Nor does anyone have the slightly guilty feeling which assails us when we find that a canvasser has called twice already without finding us.

"If a person forgets (and who doesn't sometime) the reminder is still by mail, which relieves us of the necessity of making excuses. The well wisher gets a second chance without having to make explanations to anyone."

Earth Tremor Shakes Residents In Poughkeepsie

Poughkeepsie, N.Y., Dec. 8—(AP)—A small earth tremor shook residents in the Poughkeepsie area shortly after 11:37 p.m. EST last night.

No injures or damage was reported immediately.

The Columbia University geological observatory at Palisades, N.Y., placed the tremor at about 35 miles from the laboratory. Pouchkeepsie is about 40 miles from Palisades.

The tremor seismologist Dr. Frank said, was preceded at 11:33 p.m. EST by a medium-sized earthquake some thousands of miles away, whose location could not be determined at once.

(A Manila report said the seismograph at the University of the Philippines recorded an earthquake starting at 11:26 p.m. EST Friday and lasting about an hour.

Members Fail To Agree On Definition

Ottawa, Dec. 7 — (CP) — A resolution by David Croll (L — Toronto Spadina) to make loss-leader selling illegal bogged down in parliamentary committee study today when members failed to agree on a specific definition of what constituted predatory price-cutting:

The committee, studying the possibility of price wars as a side issue to the government's proposal to make resale price maintenance illegal, closed off discussions to the press and public after committee members had aired their views on loss leaders.

Mr. Croll said he was aware that his proposal had certain weaknesses but presented it in order that something better may be drafted.

Under his proposal, a merchant, with some exceptions, would not be able to sell any commodity at a price less than five per cent above cost.

Members agreed with the principle of the proposal — that something had to be done to prevent cut-throat competition in the event that the government does ban resale price maintenance.

But they were not in agreement that Mr. Croll's proposal would be either workable or enforceable.

Europe as I See It

By Raymond R. Canon

Portugal

(Article 47)

Coimbra, Portugal — (Special to the Ontario Intelligencer) — Coming all the way to Spain and then leaving without seeing Portugal would be a blunder of the first order. However, to arrive there, I had to spend many long hours on those Spanish trains, which seem to go nowhere fast. Although Salamanca, my last stopping place, is only about sixty miles from the border, it took the train, which is classed as international, five hours to cover this distance, and the Portuguese frontier station of Vilar Formoso was a most welcome sight. After setting my watch back an hour, and going through the most lenient customs I have seen in Europe, I got on another train that at least made a pretense of going somewhere.

You might think that the two countries, tucked off as they are in the Iberian peninsula, would have many things in common, but such is not the case. True, they are not at opposite ends of the pole, but the differences are evident enough so that you do not have to search for them.

Nation of Dreamers

First, there are the people themselves. They are a much more sober people here than in Spain. Gone is a great deal of the apparent frivolity and devil-may-care attitude that is in evidence there. The usually more conservative Portuguese like to sit at times and dream of a world wonderful and romantic, almost a never, never land. They themselves sum it all up in one word—"saudade"—which means a longing or homesickness, a tendency to let things be. They enjoy so much the universe their mind has created for them, that they fail to realize at times what is expected of them today.

Music seems to have been assigned a role of lesser importance, for although they still sing their fados and other native songs, they do not throw themselves into it with the same emotion for which the Italian or Spaniard is famous.

They seem to have had no restraint on intermarriage in the colonies, for you will meet people of every shade: from the whitest of the white to the blackest of the black. In fact Portugal often reminds one as being the jumping off place for Africa, since it is about the nearest thing to Africa on the continent. Many of the women go about the street, barefooted or carrying jugs on their head. Perhaps they even do their washing in the river. In the streets you will see primitive wooden carts being pulled by oxen just as in Angola. Whenever I remark how long it takes to make a trip across Canada, they will never say, "It takes so many hours to New York, or Paris, or London," but always, "It takes so many days to go to Angola or Mozambique."

Perhaps the most outstanding feature of all this is that it does not seem to make one bit of difference what shade your skin is. They all mix together and work together. Perhaps our neighbors to the south could learn something from the Portuguese in this respect.

Early History

History in Portugal dates from July 24, 1128 when a young prince by the name of Affonso Henriques led his small army against another one led by his own mother and defeated her. By this victory he was able to become king of the Douro, the territory situated around the city of Porto. Since at that time the city was called Portus Cale, this territory came under the same name. From this name came the word Portugal and so Affonso Henriques became the first king of Portugal. Today his body rests in a rather obscure church in Coimbra.

I always consider Portuguese the "Old Curiosity Shop" of the Romance languages, since it has several oddities which I find rather interesting. It is quite a difficult language to learn, and just as difficult to understand. This is borne out a bit by the fact that, although the Portuguese can understand Spanish without too much difficulty, a Spaniard cannot make head nor tail of Portuguese. Instead he makes fun of it.

One of these oddities is that, except for the very personal and intimate form, one cannot translate the word "you" directly into Portuguese. Instead one has to say "O senhor" or "A senhora" which means "the man" or "the woman." So, one would say "Can the man tell me where the station is?" A more polite form which is in common use is "Vossa Excelencia" (your excellency.) Although this may sound stilted to us, I assure you it does not to the Portuguese. I use it in talking to my landlady. She, in return, uses the word "Voce" which is used by an older person to a younger person. If I write a business letter I use the form "Illustrissimo Senhor" (most illustrious mister) or if the letter is to a university professor, the form "Excelentissimo Senhor Doutor" is used. There are also several other words for "you" used in varying circumstances, so that you have to think twice before choosing which word to say.

The Government

The government of Portugal has been called a "benevolent dictatorship" but it seems to be a dictatorship in name only. This state of affairs resulted when the army revolted in 1926 and took control. Before this time Portugal had been under a republican government, which, in spite of many promises, had failed to do anything for the country. In fact, conditions were in so bad a state that when Portugal applied to the League of Nations for a loan, the League would grant it only if at the same time it could take over Portugal as a mandate.

This Portugal refused to accept, so affairs remained in the same miserable state until the revolt in 1926. At this time there emerged General Carmona, who became president of the republic. To put the economy on a sounder basis, he called in Dr. Salazar, professor of Political Economy at the University in Coimbra. This Dr. Salazar was able to do, and then preferred to return to his post at the university.

Shortly afterwards the government experienced another crisis, Salazar was called back and again succeeded in balancing the budget. This time he remained, partly as Minister of Finance, partly as Minister of External Affairs until he took over the post of Prime Minister. Today Gen. Carmona and Dr. Salazar still retain their post in the government.

Seven-Year Term

The president of the republic (Gen. Carmona) is elected for seven years, and is granted considerable powers. He can nominate ministers, call parliament together or dissolve it if he wishes. Even at that, Dr. Salazar as prime minister, has had considerable power in his process of putting the country back on its feet. He has put through drastic reforms including a vast educational scheme, designed to wipe out illiteracy in the country. How well he has succeeded in financial matters can be seen from the fact that the escudo, the currency now in use, is classed as hard currency, and can be exchanged all over the world. After the Swiss franc, it is about the safest currency in Europe. In Paris today it has preference even over the pound sterling, for a banker will exchange escudo notes where he will not take sterling.
